Canvass Gets Off To Smooth Start; Chiefs Report Not A Single Complaint

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The 1950 census got off to a troubleless start yesterday, both in Washington and in the Nation at large.

There were no complaints of imposters posing as census takers, not a single enumerator reported being turned down by a householder and census offices, in the local area at least, recorded only a handful of calls from door-to-door workers over how to put down this or that answer.

President Truman and family were enumerated at his Key West, Fla., vacation spot. But most Washingtonians, perhaps because it wasn't a very nice day outdoors, were at home, ready and willing to answer any and all questions.

Some Quit Early

Just how many persons were counted in the area could not be determined. The estimate was that 70,000 in the District and another 40,000 in the suburbs should have been reached.

The total probably was somewhat lower, it appeared last night, for there were reports enumerators were a bit slow on their first rounds, taking more time than the average estimated—about 15 or 20 minutes—for each family interview. Others suffered from tired feet and quit before a full eight-hour day.

Nationally, Census Director Roy V. Peel reported talking on the phone to each of the Nation's 14 area offices and finding "everything moving along o. k.—no hullabaloo anywhere." There were no reports of resistance to the census taker, his office said.

No Returns Available

Unlike a national election day, no returns were available last night on the census count. It will take two weeks in the cities and longer in the farm areas before everyone is canvassed and several weeks after that before any figures are released.

The Associated Press did report, however, that Dellview, N. C., was quickly enumerated. In three minutes W. S. Walters had the final returns in: seven persons, one below the 1940 count, three fewer than in 1930.

Today will be a day off for the census takers, who are paid on a piece-work basis. Monday they'll be back at work. Much of their door-to-door canvassing will have to be done evenings when people get home from work. They're not supposed to arrive at "unreasonable" hours—but each enumerator has to decide for himself what's unreasonable.

In Washington the two district leaders, Lewin Lugar and Norman Russell, reported no complaints of any kind. Russell said the pub-

Census Taker Counts Truman Noses in Florida

Key West, Fla., April 11 (AP).—President Truman and his family received the census taker today.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman answered all the questions millions of other Americans will answer.

Daughter Margaret answered more. She commented later: "I was a sample."

The longer list of questions put to Margaret are asked of every fifth person.

A young and attractive census taker, whose outward calm belied her claim she was "awfully flustered," questioned President Truman and his family for 15 minutes.

Mrs. Eileen M. Nolte, mother of two children, plied the President's daughter with extra questions about her income and schooling.

Winds Force Postponement Of Cherry Blossom Festival

The Cherry Blossom pageant "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing" was canceled yesterday by cold weather and winds.

Weather permitting, it will be on at 2:30 p. m. today at the Watergate.

With a predicted high of 50 degrees, though "mostly sunny," the chances for the show to go on today were uncertain.

Whether it does or not the pageant will also be shown next Saturday and Sunday at the Watergate, Cherry Blossom Festival officials announced.

Yesterday's ticket-holders may use their ducats next Saturday or redeem them by Wednesday at the Greater National Capital Committee, 204 Star Building.

It was to avoid a possible pneumonia plague that yesterday's show was stricken off. The pageant includes a number of girls in quite flimsy costumes.

It also seemed rather incongruous to portray spring as a wonderful thing with temperatures in the mid-fifties, clouds darkening the sky, and winds of 25 miles an hour and gusts of 45 lashing across the Watergate stage.

But the 51 princesses put on their evening dresses and took it all in good style. Escorted by their Army, Navy and Marine escorts they gathered at a festival brunch at the Statler, went out to see Mount Vernon in the afternoon. This young female royalty represents the States and the Territories.

They were led by their slender, brunette Queen Joan Russell of Connecticut, a secretarial student here. She will be crowned today at the pageant by Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews.

Weather permitting, this is the Cherry Blossom Festival program set for today at the Watergate, for which tickets may be purchased at the Watergate box office:

Firings Cripple Mount Alto, Manager Says

70 Employes Slated For Dismissal Now Using Up Sick Leave

Economy cuts in Veterans' Administration, though not yet effective, already have badly crippled normal operations of Mount Alto Hospital, its manager reported yesterday.

Every one of 70 employes notified of impending dismissal has taken "sick," said Manager Dr. Charles M. Griffith.

"They're using up their sick leaves and saving their annual leaves till dismissal time," he declared. "We don't have anyone to send around to their homes to check them," he added.

U. S. employes are paid for unused annual leave, but not sick leave, when they leave the Government.

The present situation, he said, is even worse than what can be expected when the ax really falls. When that time actually comes, he explained, he will close down two wards of the hospital.

Staff Carries Load

But while the employes are still on the payroll, even though off duty as "sick," he explained, the working staff must carry the whole load.

Those employes already notified include 15 experienced nurses and 25 trained attendants and technicians, a few office workers, and the remaining number is made up of ward clerks, the hospital manager disclosed.

One of the worst features of the dismissals, Dr. Griffith com-

San Francisco, April 1 (U.P.).—The Harry Bridges jury called it a day and went to bed at 9:40 (PST) tonight with 15 hours and 30 minutes of deliberation behind them and no sign of a verdict in the perjury-conspiracy case in sight.

Shortly before the jury retired, Federal Judge George B. Harris announced they would be given a half-day holiday Sunday.

He said the jury would resume deliberations at 1:30 p. m.

He was taken first to Fort Belvoir Hospital, then transferred yesterday to Walter Reed, where he died at 7:20 p. m. His wife, Ruth, was at his bedside.

One woman was killed and three other persons injured last night in the crash of a panel delivery truck and a taxicab at 4th st. and Independence ave. sw.

Police said two of the victims, including the dead woman, were thrown out of the cab's rear seat, 30 feet through the air.

The truck driver, arrested three blocks away, was charged with driving while drunk, leaving the scene of an accident, and going through a red light. He was held on a charge of manslaughter.

One of the two cab passengers, Miss Josephine Hebard, 28, of 2519 Congress st. se., died at Emergency Hospital two hours after the crash. She suffered a fractured skull. She and Thomas Greville, 40, of 613 Pennsylvania ave. se., were those thrown through the air. He was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital, suffering a possible skull fracture.

Driver of the Gray Top cab was James J. Shelton, 39, 3611 Warder st. nw., who was at Casualty Hospital suffering a possible fractured back. Riding in the front seat with him was Miss Vivian G. Franklin, 29, of 1713-B N. Capitol st. She was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises and released.

Pact Nations Approve Plan For Defense

Strategy Prepared Against Aggressor In Event of War; Red Protest Calm

The Hague, April 1 (NYHT). A secret plan for the integrated defense of the West was approved here today by the Defense Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty organization.

W. S. Schokking, Netherlands Minister for Navy and War, said he, as a European, was convinced the plan, when implemented, would "without any doubt" give west Europe an assurance it could live without fear of conquest.

The Defense Ministers realized it will be years before the plan can be "implemented."

A communique suggested, however, there are alternative plans in case of an attack before the allied nations have had time to build up their forces. It said:

"Within a short space of six months the military planning organization has determined the general strategy defense of the North Atlantic Treaty area, has prepared an estimate of the military situation if any attack should be launched against a treaty nation and has prepared plans for defense against aggression should it occur.

'A Lot of Work to Be Done'

"These plans call for an integrated defense of the entire North Atlantic area as distinguished from individual national defense."

Louis Johnson, United States Defense Secretary, said "there is a lot of work to be done."

It will include a survey of the financial and economic capabilities, involving a careful balancing of military needs against requirements of recovery. The question might be summarized in the question: "How can the Atlantic Pact be made to work without damaging the Marshall Plan?"

The answer will be sought by the Defense Finance and Economic Committee, headed by W. Averell Harriman, American Roving Ambassador.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, United States Chief of Staff, who heads the standing committee, said his committee would meet in "several months" to provide the needed estimates of costs. Although the chairmanship of the standing committee should have passed to France, the Defense Committee agreed General Bradley should keep the job another six months.

Red Demonstration Calm

Another problem that remains is the role to be played by the three services of each country. The United States would like to see less emphasis on navies, which are thought to be duplicating each other to some extent. France is reported to be unwilling to agree to any reduction of its fleet in the Mediterranean, even though this would enable it to build up its ground and air forces more quickly.

A Communist attempt to stage a giant demonstration against the conference ended calmly today.

Police restricted the Communists to an indoor meeting on the grounds of the Hague's zoo and placed roadblocks on main roads.

Less than 2000 Reds met in orderly fashion at the zoo, which had been blocked off by police from the American Embassy.

Hickenlooper Says AEC Gave Approval Without Checking Diplomat's Record

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday that Philip C. Jessup, its Ambassador-at-Large, has been granted "access to such atomic information as is necessary" to carry out his new duties as Secretary Acheson's principal adviser on world politics.

A statement issued through the department's press office said the arrangement had been made with the approval of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), a member of the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, protested that Jessup had been cleared "without any check whatsoever on his record" by the AEC.

Objects to "Principle"

"I want to emphasize that I am making no criticism or approval of Dr. Jessup," Hickenlooper told reporters. "It is the principle of the thing to which I object—the fact that he was cleared without getting the information on him which is available at the State Department and which could have been obtained in 45 minutes."

In an obvious allusion to the charge of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) that Jessup has an "unusual affinity for Communist causes"—an accusation Jessup has flatly denied—Hickenlooper said:

"Without going into the merits, Dr. Jessup is engaged in a controversy which is still unresolved. I think it is just indefensible for the commission to have given him clearance on the basis it did."

Hickenlooper said he took the matter up Friday with both the Atomic Energy Commission and the Congressional Atomic Committee. He said Sumner Pike, acting AEC chairman, had acknowledged that Jessup was given an emergency clearance without a check of his record.

Statement Issued

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott, in response to queries, earlier issued the following statement:

"As Ambassador-at-Large, Mr. Jessup has access to such atomic information as is necessary to carry out his newly assigned duties. This access to information is with the approval of the Atomic Energy Commission."

Jessup, who has been serving as Ambassador-at-Large and as Acheson's diplomatic trouble-shooter for a year, was assigned Monday to a new position in which he will have general supervision of international atomic questions as well as political problems confronting the State Department's high command.

Senator McCarthy meanwhile reiterated his charge that Jessup accepted a total of $3500 in "Communist funds" in 1942 and 1943.

Repeats Accusation

McCarthy repeated the accusation in a telegram to Secretary Acheson which said "it is incumbent upon you to make Mr. Jessup immediately try to explain why he accepted Communist funds."

The charge was first hurled by McCarthy in his Senate speech Thursday. He said Jessup at one time was vice chairman of the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and that under Jessup the council's biweekly publication, Far Eastern Survey, "pioneered the smear campaign against Chiang Kai-shek."

McCarthy displayed in the Senate what he described as copies of

House Un-American Activities Committee Asks Stronger Laws To Combat Spying

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee proposed yesterday a crackdown on embassies it said are "a focal point of Communist espionage and propaganda."

The committee also urged stricter laws to combat spying and treason, "utmost teamwork" instead of "petty rivalry" in Government moves against Reds, and closer checks on defense plant workers.

The recommendations were made in a committee report to the House on activities last year. For the most part, the report presented thumbnail summaries of committee hearings and investigations.

The major attention, it said, was on Communist activity in the field of spying, since "the committee believes espionage is one of the most deadly weapons in the hands of the American Communists at the present time."

Embassies Hit

"Experience during the past five years," the committee said, "has demonstrated that the embassies of Communist-dominated countries constitute a focal point of Communist espionage and propaganda. Such activity should be limited by proper safeguards sternly enforced."

There was no suggestion as to what safeguards should be taken.

The committee said the three-year time limit for prosecuting espionage cases must be amended. There have been some suggestions for a 10-year limit, and some for no limit at all.

"Under our present laws," the reports says, "we have found that a long list of Communist operatives who have committed acts of espionage and treachery in the interest of a foreign power have remain immune to punishment due to the present form of the statute of limitations."

Because of the time lag there was no chance, for instance, of bringing espionage charges against any of the people whom former Communist Courier Whittaker Chambers accused of service in a prewar Soviet spy ring.

The committee said the definition of treason, and the penalties that go with it, should be broadened so as to cover not only a period of actual fighting but also "a period like the present cold war."

Truman Nudged

A polite nudge was given to President Truman to ease his ban on letting congressional committees get a look at Government loyalty and investigative files. Like the Senate subcommittee investigating charges of Communist penetration of the State Department, the Un-American Activities Com-

McGrath to Argue Race Case Monday In Supreme Court

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath will go before the Supreme Court on Monday to present the Government's argument in the Henderson dining car segregation case, the Justice Department announced last night.

In this case the Government is opposing the position of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The ICC is backing the Southern Railway against Elmer W. Henderson of Washington.

Immediately after the Henderson case, the court will hear arguments in two other segregation cases involving the Universities of Texas and Oklahoma. In all three, the Government argues that the "separate but equal" doctrine of segregation should be discarded.

Eisenhower Urges Stiffening Of Alaskan Ground Defenses

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Immediate stiffening of Alaska ground defenses and modernization of ground weapons was urged yesterday by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In a letter to Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, the former Chief of Staff gave Alaska garrisons first priority. In second place he named modernization of aircraft and Army equipment and reinforcement of antisubmarine facilities.

For new aircraft Eisenhower recommended that the $1,350,000,000 now tentatively considered for that purpose be increased by 150 million dollars to 1½ billion. He cautioned, however, that additional funds for this purpose "must not be at the expense of the other two services whose needs are not now satisfied."

Testifying Wednesday before Thomas' subcommitee Eisenhower suggested a 500-million-dollar increase in the 1951 military budget to strengthen airpower, Alaskan bases and antisubmarine measures.

He did not mention the ground arm or ground weapons.

"As a first and important point," he wrote yesterday, "I must inform you that I inadvertantly omitted from my testimony one item that appeared prominently upon my notes and which I failed, except for one short reference to mention. This involves the modernization of certain types of Army equipment.

"While this item has been urged by professional leaders of the Army in each of the years following the close of World War II, it has always been eliminated, or practically eliminated, from the annual budgets because of overriding priorities in other directions. The time has come when we cannot afford longer to delay the modernization of such types as tanks, antiaircraft artillery, recoilless weapons and various classes of vehicular equipment. While I understand that a start is being made in this year's budget in this direction, I feel that I

Governor Joins Acheson Defense

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges An End to Fear If We Want to Win Cold War

Enthusiastic approval of Secretary of State Dean Acheson was voted yesterday by Americans for Democratic Action, who simultaneously denounced his Congressional detractors.

A resolution by former Attorney General Francis Biddle condemning the "sordid and unfounded attaok" on Acheson was adopted by more than 600 delegates to the ADA's third annual convention at the Hotel Shoreham.

Not only did the resolution condemn Republicans who have attacked Acheson on the issue of Communists in the State Department; it declared the American public had been "outraged by the reluctance of many Democratic Senators and Congressmen to reply to these attacks with the truth."

Would Have Disposed of It

"The truth," it added, "would long since have disposed of the whole contemptible campaign."

Another resolution proposed by Biddle was adopted as an amendment to the international security clause in ADA's foreign policy program. It urged the United States to take the lead through the United Nations, in a new effort for international control of atomic and other weapons.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, speaking at the convention's banquet later in the day, made a broad appeal for strength and "an end

West Berlin Police Repel 50 Reds Wielding Knives

Berlin, April 1 (U.P.)—German police, swinging clubs, broke up youths, armed with knives, trying to force their way into West Berlin today.

Today's "invasion," along with other similar Red forays into Western Berlin, was regarded as a test of western determination—and possibly as a "dress rehearsal" for the proposed Communist "youth march" on the city's western sectors May 28.

Army Abolishes Quota System For Enlistment of Negroes

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army has taken another major step in the field of racial equality of opportunity—dropping the quota system of enlistment of Negroes.

An order just issued declares that "effective with the month of April all enlistments in the Army within over-all recruiting quotas will be open to qualified applicants without regard to race or color."

Heretofore, the number of Negro recruits accepted each month has been limited so as to keep the percentage of members of that race in the Army roughly equivalent to the proportion of Negroes in the total population—about 10 percent.

The move is not expected to change that ratio to any extent—if anything it may reduce it, some say. But the action has long been urged by Negro leaders on two grounds: (1) separate racial quotas were considered discriminatory; and (2) many with high intelligence and educational qualifications have been turned away during periods when no Negro vacancies existed.

The latter has been harmful to the Army, it is declared, because

Senator Is 'Madman' Whose Words Help Russia, Declares Man He Accused

New York, April 1 (AP).—Owen J. Lattimore, accused by Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) of being a master spy for Russia, today called McCarthy a "madman" making an "obviously political attack upon the State Department."

Lattimore repeated previous denials that there is any basis for McCarthy's charges, and said he was consulting his lawyers about possible libel action.

Lattimore also brought up the question of whether he ever was a State Department employe.

Cites Three Associations

He said he had been paid by the department for taking part in a 1945 reparations mission to Japan.

In 1949, he said, he took part in a two-day panel discussion of China problems and gave the department a memorandum on his views.

Last June, he said, he gave a lecture to State Department personnel on Japanese problems.

Except for these instances, he said, "I have and have had no connection with the department."

McCarthy has said that his whole series of charges against the State Department—that it has 57 card-carrying Communists in its employ—would stand or fall on his branding of Lattimore as a Communist spy.

"Falsely, Libelously"

Lattimore made the "madman" charge against McCarthy at a news conference where he issued a statement on the Senator's charges.

"No one likes to be splattered with mud, even by a madman," he said.

Asked if the word "madman" referred to McCarthy, he replied:

"McCarthy is the man who has been talking about me."

Pressed for a direct answer, whether he meant McCarthy, he nodded silently.

Lattimore returned by plane after a United Nations mission to Afganistan and promptly called McCarthy a "base and miserable creature."

At the news conference he said that McCarthy's charges were made "falsely, irresponsibly and libelously," and added:

"If anybody has sworn that I have been or am a member of the Communist Party, he is a perjurer. He should be prosecuted to the limit of the law."

Hopes to Appear Tuesday

McCarthy's original charges against a "master spy" in the State Department were made before a Senate committee. He did not name the "spy" then.

However, he gave Lattimore's name to newsmen in off-the-record statements, and the fact that

2 Bills to Smash Organized Gaming Handed Congress

By The Associated Press

Attorney General McGrath yesterday handed Congress two bills to smash at organized gambling—which has been called the underworld's biggest source of revenue.

One would bar interstate transmission of gambling information on horse races, football, baseball, basketball or any other sporting event.

The other aims to halt shipment of slot machines to states which outlaw them.

Both bills would apply directly to the District of Columbia.

McGrath said in a letter to both houses that such measures "will go far to eliminate the evils at which they are so clearly pointed."

The bills were the first two emerging from a legislative committee named recently at a national crime prevention conference of Federal, State and local officials.

Cities have called for Federal help to crush commercialized gambling which is costing Americans billions of dollars every year. The Senate soon will vote a proposed all-out investigation of big time rackets.

The ban on gambling communications would be enforced by the Federal regulatory power over radio, telephone and telegraph under the proposed bill.

Lag in Income Taxes Hints Billion Slump

By The Associated Press

Limping collections of income taxes yesterday threatened to cut budget revenues a billion dollars or more below the Administration's estimates.

Despite a partly offsetting lag in Federal spending, there were signs the Government may plunge even deeper in the red than the $5,500,000,000 President Truman had forecast for this fiscal year.

The turn for the worse in the Government's financial outlook was sure to have an impact in congressional consideration of new spending and tax legislation.

Some officials stressed that the tallying of income tax payments mailed around the deadline March 15 has not yet been completed, and that the tag-end count next week might brighten the picture.

They could point to an improvement during the second week of the after-deadline count over the definitely poor first week's showing.

It was feared, however, that revenues would drop one billion dollars to $1,500,000,000 below the estimate.

Some possibility remained that spending would be down enough for this fiscal year, which ends June 30, to cancel out the budgetary effects of the tax receipts drop.

However, one expert appraisal was that final spending figures for fiscal 1950 would not be more than 750 million to one billion dollars below the estimates—and that would merely reflect a time lag in outlays, not a curtailment or "saving" on expenditures.

The slump centered in the payments by corporations and by individuals whose tax bill is not taken care of by taxes withheld from wages — generally, the higher-bracket salaried people and doctors, lawyers, farmers and others not subject to withholding tax.

Through March 29, these payments for the month were running more than 17 percent below last year. For the period since this fiscal year began last July 1, they were down nearly 7 percent.

Tax Payments Top '49 Mark By 25 Percent

Thanks perhaps to a new regulation requiring salary statements from employers, District individual income tax payments are running about 25 percent ahead of last year.

District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent yesterday reported a collection of $573,000 on 1949 income as of March 17. At the same time last year, he said, collections had reached $426.000. The 1949 figure represents only about 10 percent of the amount expected by the April 15 deadline.

Dent attributed the increase to the new regulation which requires employers to file with the District names and salaries of residents who were paid more than $1000 last year.

The step-up in payments was presaged last January when the crowds of persons, apparently realizing the District had the goods on them, stood in line to pay taxes they had neglected in former years.

Persons wishing help in making out returns can get it at the District Building, in the first floor corridor, Dent said. He urged taxpayers "do it now," and advised taking along copies of their Federal income tax returns.

Since the April 15 deadline falls on Saturday, persons wishing help must visit the District Building by the 14th, Dent said. Texas must be paid or in the mails by midnight on the 15th, he said.

Sales Tax Receipts to Top $10 Million

Higher than expected sales tax receipts from February sales have practically assured the District of surpassing the $10,400,000 total budget officials had expected by June 30.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke reported the tax yielded $1,025,586.14 last month from sales in February. This brought the seven-month total to $7,777,043.94.

To meet the budget office estimate by the end of this fiscal year, the average monthly yield for the next three months need be only $875,000. It has not fallen below this figure since the first month.

Brooke said his office had expected receipts to fall considerably below the million-dollar mark.

Man Hangs Self As Wife, Daughter Perish in Flames

Zanesville, Ohio, April 1 (AP).—Mrs. Emma Norris wanted to spend the night with her mother.

"Mother," the 24-year-old woman told Mrs. Lula Shipman last night, "I'm scared to go home. I think Cecil is losing his mind."

But Cecil, her husband, called for her in his automobile. And Mrs. Norris got into the car and took along their daughter, Shirley Marie, 5.

Early today the Norris' four-room house burst into flames, and in the debris, neighbors found the charred bodies of Mrs. Norris and Shirley Marie.

And from a nearby tree hung the body of Norris, his throat slashed.

Deputy Sheriff Willard Thompson said that Norris, a 50-year-old trucker, apparently set fire to the house, then killed himself.

Brannan Plan Tried Out 3 Years in Sugar

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A tryout of the principles of the Brannan Plan, which Congress recently refused with a brave show of righteous disapproval, has, in fact, been under way for three years.

The highly criticized theory of production payments on which the Administration's farm plan is based, is contained in the three-year-old Sugar Act of 1948.

This bill was passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress. Voting for it were many members of both Houses who now throw up their hands in horrified alarm when it is suggested that farmers be given price protection through compensatory payments. In fact, many of the same group voted for payments instead of price supports in the Hope-Aiken Agricultural Act of 1948 at about the same time.

The Sugar Act operates outside the regular price support laws, which accounts for the lack of attention it attracts. It costs the taxpayer about 75 million dollars a year, directly, and more in higher prices.

Benefits Only 56,000

In other words, the American consumer is kicking in with about $200,000 each day to American sugar growers through a half-cent-a-pound tax in addition to the higher prices he must pay for sugar. There are only 56,000 benefited sugar beet or cane farmers in the United States, in a total of 21 milion engaged in agriculture.

These sugar growers include beet farmers, mainly in the Midwest and Mountain States, and a few cane growers in Louisiana and Florida. Cane growers in Puerto Rico, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands also come under the act.

Even with this contribution the growers are dissatisfied. Each year they demand that the Agriculture Department permit less sugar to come into the United States so that domestic growers—those in continental United States—can get more for their crops.

Although beet and cane growers are prosperous, and there are no recent reports of sugar processors filling breadlines, the sugar lobby complains about discrimination. The complaint is that sugar hasn't gone up as much as other farm commodities since the OPA was killed and therefore growers aren't getting as much from the public as the potato growers, for instance.

Heading the potent sugar lobby is Robert H. Shields, former administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration and president of the Commodity Credit Corporation—the two Agriculture Department bureaus that handle the Government's price protection program. Before that, Shields was solicitor for the Department and helped draw many of the present agriculture statutes.

Shields stepped from the $10,000-a-year Government job directly into his present job as president of the United States Beet Sugar Association at, according to statements filed with Congress, $40,000 a year. In fact, for several weeks after accepting the later job, he stayed on without pay, at the Agriculture Department, until a successor was appointed early in 1947.

Two forms of taxation are set up to pay the costs of the act. First, a tax of 53½ cents per 100 pounds is levied on all home-grown sugar refined in the United States. To balance this, a duty of 53½ cents on each 100 pounds is levied on imported sugar.

The farmers are paid. a base rate of 80 cents for each 100 pounds of raw sugar they grow. The scale of payments is graduated, according to the size of each producing farm.

Schedule of Payments

The farmer who raises less than 350 tons of sugar gets the full payment of 80 cents per 100 pounds. The payments then go down as follows:

From 350 to 700 tons, 75 cents per 100 pounds.

From 700 to 1000 tons, 70 cents.

From 1000 to 1500 tons, 60 cents.

From 1500 to 3000 tons, 55 cents.

From 3000 to 6000 tons, 52½ cents.

From 6000 to 12,000 tons, 50 cents.

From 12,000 to 30,000 tons, 47½ cents.

More than 3000 tons, 30 cents.

To qualify for these payments, the farmer must:

1. Employ no child under 14, except members of own family, and then not more than eight hours a day.

2. Pay farm hands fair wages, to be determined periodically by the Secretary of Agriculture. Secretary Brannan recently fixed this rate at 60 to 65 cents an hour in most fields. Farm workers do not come under the minimum wage laws.

3. Agree to stay within both acreage allotments and marketing quotas.

4. Agree, where the farmer is also a processor, to pay other farmers fair prices for their sugar.

The gimmick in the law that creates the greatest dissatisfaction is a provision that the Secretary of Agriculure each year establish the "annual consumption estimate" for the coming year.

Growers fight to keep this estimate low, because upon it depends the amount of sugar that may come into the country. The scarcer the supply, the higher the price.

For this year, Secretary Brannan fixed the consumption estimate at 7½-million tons. Under the law this was distributed as follows:

Domestic beet areas, about 20 States, 1,800,000 tons.

Domestic cane areas, two States, 500,000 tons.

Hawaii, one million tons.

Puerto Rico, 910,000 tons.

The Philippine Islands, under the Philippine Trade Act, 952,000 tons, permitted to enter duty free.

Of the remainder, about 98 per cent is allotted to Cuba, and 2 percent to other countries, such as Peru, San Domingo, Haiti, etc. Before the war, considerable amounts were imported from Poland and Czechoslovakia, now shut off.

The higher prices, also, are showing up in reduced sugar consumption. Last year consumption was only 90.4 pounds per person. This was the lowest, except for the war years when sugar was rationed, since 1941, when per capita consumption reached 103.7 pounds. It was 109 in 1930, and during the 1920s stayed around 103 pounds a person.

lic apparently was well prepared for the enumerators because of advance publicity.

In Alexandria, Archie Miller, in charge of the northern Virginia district, said the weather was "especially good" for census taking—it wasn't the kind to send too many people outdoors.

At Hagerstown, Md., Langdon Backus said the day in his district, which includes Montgomery county, was "anti-climactic." He said he thought the unpleasant weather led many enumerators to quit work early.

The Annapolis office, in charge of Dudley Briscoe, apparently closed early, for it could not be reached by phone. The office includes Prince Georges county, Md.

Bulgar Calls Strife In Balkans U. S. Aim

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 1 (AP).—United States Ambassador to Yugoslavia George V. Allen was accussed today of trying to "turn the Balkans into a powder keg" in preparation for a new war.

The charge was made by Prosecutor Petko Petrinsky at the spy trial of six Yugoslavs and 20 Bulgars who have confessed to spying for Yugoslavia and plotting against Bulgaria.

Allen, the prosecutor declared, is "the coach of the tragedy-comedy which Tito acts."

Painting a picture of terror and oppression in Yugoslavia, he declared Tito's policy is aimed at robbing the poor and confusing the pleasants in favor of "economic strengthening of the kulaks (farmowners)."

"Tito's socialism is what remains to us of Hitler's national socialism," Petrinsky asserted.

He added that Tito's regime, "instead of orders of Berlin, are fulfilling those of Washington."

"Yugoslavia today is turned into one industrial and agrarian appendix of the United States," he declared.

Get Back Gems

Russians Pay $20,000 Debt Owed Ireland

Dublin, Ireland, April 1 (AP).—Soviet Russia has repaid $20,000 it borrowed from Ireland 30 years ago and has received in return the collateral—jewels that may once have belonged to the Czar.

The Irish Information Bureau announced completion of the deal today. It started in the United States in 1920 and ended with the return of the jewels to a Soviet representative in London. Russia paid back the money last September.

The loan was made, the bureau said, when a Soviet delegation in the United States seeking American recognition ran short of cash. An Irish group also was in the United States trying to get American recognition of Ireland as an independent republic.

The money was repayable on demand. Ireland made the demand and Russia made payment on the barrelhead—in dollars.

The information bureau said:

"The jewels had been valued here by people in the business, who advised that the government would be lucky if they got up to £2000 ($5600 at the present devalued rate) for them. This view was confirmed by a valuation made in London."

Europe Unity Steps Taken, Council Quits

Strasbourg, France, April 1 (AP). Foreign ministers of the Council of Europe, an infant international parliament, headed home tonight after taking a few more steps toward eventual union of the continent.

Their three-day session had hardly a discordant note. The difficult time of the council's earliest days, when the consulative assembly seemed to be rushing in one direction and the committee of ministers (upper house) in another, appeared definitely ended.

During the session, the foreign ministers had:

Asked Western Germany and the Saar to join the council as associate members, with equal rights in the assembly, but without representatives of the ministers and committee;

Agreed to set up a joint temporary committee of seven repreesntatives of the ministers and an equal number from the assembly's standing committee to meet in London next May and improve liaison between the two branches;

Studied a lengthy report from the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC) on European economic conditions and considered means of avoiding future duplication of OEEC efforts;

Decided the moment was not opportune for calling a European economic conference as the assembly had suggested;

Decided to appoint a committee of high officials to consider the legal and political aspects of various proposals for a human rights convention and ordered them to meet in June so the ministers could have their report before the assembly meets again in full session next August 7.

Greek Premier Denies Need For Coalition

Athens, Greece, April 1 (AP).—Premier Sophocles Venizelos today defended his minority government in a reply to United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady, and declared it would do more for Greece than any coalition.

Venizelos made the statement in response to yesterday's strongly worded note from Grady, which embassy sources interpreted as an invitation to the Premier to resign or broaden his two-party cabinet.

Grady warned that continuance of American aid depended on a government which could take bold, decisive action in instituting long-needed reforms, but claimed such stability is difficult with the present Parliament.

Liberal deputies tonight decided, however, to continue the one-party cabinet under Venizelos.

It was learned the Liberals hope for a reconciliation with parties of the center under Nicholas Plastiras and George Papandreou to push their program in the nw Parliament.

Pope Reported Tired, Suffering Leg Pains

Vatican City, April 1 (AP).—Vatican informants today said Pope Pius XII is fatigued and suffering from pains in his right leg and foot.

They noted that the Pontiff did not descend from his portable throne at a general audience today and mingle with Holy Year pilgrims. He retired immediately to his private apartment.

The 74-year-old Pope has been suffering from artherio-sclerosis (hardening of the arteries) in his right leg for some time.

Czechs Say 4 Priests Confess High Treason; 10 Being Tried

Prague, April 1 (AP).—The last of 10 Roman Catholic clergymen accused of treason, anti-state activities and espionage for the Vatican testified late today in the Prague state court, the official Czech News Agency announced.

By Czech accounts, four have pleaded guilty and one or two of the others partly guilty.

Western newspaper correspondents have been unable to gain admittance to the hearing. The Associated Press was told its name was not on the list of news agencies to whom tickets were allotted. Other Western agencies and correspondents were advised "there is not enough room in the court."

Official accounts said guilty pleas were entered yesterday by Abbot Bohumil Vit Tajovsky of the Zeliva Monastery and Abbot Augustin Machalka of the Nova Rise Monastery and today by Sylvester Braito of the Dominican Order, professor of theology at Alomouc University, and Jan Blesik, a Redemptorist monk.

The Czech News Agency said the tenth and last defendant was Jan Mastilak of the Redemptorist order.

Mastilak was quoted as saying that "in the fight for freedom, I tried to lessen the role of the Communist Party."

The court proceeding is the first mass trial of churchmen in Czechoslovakia, a predominantly Catholic nation which has been under Communist rule since February, 1948. It developed after a series of moves by the government to oust various Westerners from Czechoslovakia.

Efforts to Heal Policy Split Spurred

NYHT News Service

Bernard M. Baruch's call for a nonpartisan "central peacemaking agency" spurred Administration and Republican efforts yesterday to heal the deep split in foreign policy.

The State Department had no immediate comment on the Baruch plan, which would in effect supplant Secretary of State Dean Acheson as the chief architect of foreign policy. For Baruch, in his address Friday at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., said flatly that the National Security Council should be enlarged and revitalized for "total peace waging" and directed by a man "of the stature of Gen. George C. Marshall."

Meanwhile, President Truman and Acheson were casting about for a Republican to serve as ambassador-at-large. The idea would be to have a leading Republican sit in on all vital policy decisions and perhaps even act as Acheson's deputy at international conferences.

Appointment of a Republican as an ambassador-at-large would be a peace offer to the GOP but it would fall considerably short of Baruch's plan.

Republicans were quick to praise the Baruch proposal.

Senator H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey was "very favorably impressed." The real struggle with Soviet Russia, he said, was on the ideological front and victory in this "war from men's minds" required an overall controlling "mind" that would give constant attention to this fight.

He agreed with Baruch that the present piecemeal attempts to check the spread of Communism were inefficient and he was particularly pleased with the elder statesman's plea for an effective intelligence agency.

Senator Homer Ferguson (Mich.), suggested that the Baruch plan be adopted by all countries aligned with the United States against Russia. As an opening step he proposed Republican leaders be called in at once to help formulate a strengthened program for curbing communism in Southeast Asia.

"Though harsh words have been spoken on both sides, bipartisanship on foreign affairs is far from dead," said Ferguson. He urged a return to the methods used by former Secretary of State Cordell Hull—frequent consultation on policy matters with Representative Republicans."

Sixth Hainan Drive Reported Smashed

Hongkong, April 1 (U.P.). — The Chinese Nationalists today announced they had smashed a new Chinese Communist invasion attempt on strategic Hainan island.

A naval communique said the Red troops — 50 boatloads — came over in two waves in a vain attempt to gain a foothold on the island off the South China coast. It was the sixth such invasion attempt in recent days.

The communique said naval patrols Friday night intercepted 30 Red invasion vessels off the North Hainan coast and sank 20 of them.

A few hours later, the patrols encountered 20 additional ships, and sank half of them, the communique said.

After daylight today, Nationalist warships kept up a widespread search for the ships that escaped.

Reports from Formosa today said that Chinese Nationalist troops that landed recently on the mainland now control an 80-mile east coastal stretch in Chekiang Province.

Fierce Fighting Renewed By Indo-China Rebels

Saigon, Indo China, April 1 (U.P.). Fierce fighting has been renewed in the Mekong delta area, where French forts have been under sporadic Communist rebel attacks for the past five days, front line dispatches said tonight.

Unofficial estimates place French and Indo Chinese casualties at about 40 dead and said at least 50 rebels have been killed.

Army Racial Quotas Ended

at other times Negroes with lower qualifications were accepted in quantity.

Spokesmen for President Truman's Committee for Equality of Opportunity in the Armed Services yesterday hailed the Army move, and said it completed a four-point program the group adopted when formed more than a year ago.

The committee then urged: (1) Opening up all service schools to all men on the basis of individual ability; (2) opening all military occupational specialties—types of jobs—to all qualified men without regard to race; (3) assigning trained men on the basis of qualifications—that is, the abolition of regulations limiting Negroes to segregated units or post overhead jobs; and (4) dropping the quota system.

All Adopted in Principle

All have now been adopted in principle, although No. 3 is to be carried out on a long-range basis. Negro and white units will not be broken up, and for the present only highly qualified Negroes will be integrated into white troop units.

Some Army officials have opposed ending racial recruiting quotas for fear large numbers of Negroes would apply and gradually the ranks would fill up with members of that race.

The President's committee, however, has urged that keeping the Army general classification test fairly high will keep the percentage of Negroes in the Army at about the present ratio. Edward Kenworthy, executive secretary of the group, said yesterday that the latest available statistics (as of March, 1949) show that 38 percent of the Negroes in the Army have an AGCT score of 90 or above, compared to 67 percent of the whites with such scores. The lower score men were enlisted when the Army was accepting applicants with a rating of 70, and have been allowed to reenlist.

Few Taken Last Year

The over-all population—based on the scores of 10 million men examined by the Army during the war—said Kenworthy, shows 67.8 percent of the whites have a score over 90, compared to only 16.6 percent Negroes.

Last year, said Kenworthy, almost no Negro recruits—even those with scores of 130 or better—were accepted from April to December, because the Negro quota was above strength. During at least part of this time men with scores in the 70's were allowed to reenlist.

Military Rule Set in Luzon In Huk Terror

Manila, April 1 (AP).—The Philippines' principal island, Luzon, was placed under military control tonight to cope with outbreaks of Communist-led Hukbalahap guerillas.

President Elpidio Quirino said the order was not a proclamation of martial law, but he put the island under direct charge of Gen. Mariano M. Castaneda, Army Chief of Staff, and placed the Philippines Constabulary under the Army.

Manila was heavily guarded owing to rumors of an inpending attack by the outlaws. At least 54 persons have been killed and whole villages burned since the "Huks" went on a rampage Wednesday.

The latest fighting was today in a constabulary attack on guerillas on Mount Arayat in central Luzon.

Eleven Huks were reported killed in the fighting, which was continuing. Eight other deaths were reported earlier in the day, including the year-old son of the Mayor of San Clemente.

Mo Skipper Asked Course, Witness Says

Norfolk, Va., April 1 (AP).—A Navy court-martial heard testimony here today that in the last two minutes before the battleship Missouri ran aground the skipper vainly "yelled" three demands at the navigator for a course recommendation.

Chief Quartermaster Leslie Reams, testifying as a prosecution witness at the trial of the navigator, Lieut. Comdr. Frank G. Morris, jr., said Capt. William D. Brown "yelled three or four tmes:

"'Navigator, what is my next course'?"

Reams said he did not hear Morris recommend a course until the Mighty Mo "hit the shoal."

He admitted under cross-examination, however, that Morris and Brown held several conversations and it was possible the navigator made course recommendations at those times.

Morris has pleaded innocent to the charges on which he is being tried—neglect of duty and culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty.

Alaskan Arms Needs Cited

should call the attention of your committee to the very bad situation resulting from the negligence of past years."

Need for Quarters

Eisenhower recalled he had promised to detail for Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), the Alaskan bases where he thought garrisons should be installed or strengthened. The most important of these, he wrote, were in the Fairbanks-Anchorage area, with small establishments at stations in the radar screen.

"I reaffirm my belief," he added, "that not less than a reinforced infantry battalion and antiaircraft artillery should be stationed and properly quartered at each one of our major fields."

His reference to "proper quartering" was evidently in reference to the present acute situation with respect to housing for servicemen stationed in Alaska and their families. Military leaders have repeatedly declared that the size of garrisons currently assigned to Alaska has been limited, and garrisons in some cases precluded, by lack of housing.

Eisenhower, who now is president of Columbia University, repeated his recommendation that intelligence and industrial mobilization needed more attention and more funds but placed them third and fourth in order of priority. He explained, however, that:

There must be coordinated progress, and it would be erroneous to devote available resources exclusively to those items toward the top of the list with no attention to those at the bottom. In spite of this observation, I still believe that some defense of Alaska is so important that it should be considered above the others, both in time and importance."

The first intimation that Eisenhower was concerned lest the United States had pared its defenses dangerously near the bone came in a speech at New York March 23. At that time he remarked that America "has already disarmed to the extent—in some directions even beyond the extent—that I, with deep concern for her present safety, could possibly advise until we have certain knowledge that all nations are doing likewise."

Congress at once sought clarification of this cryptic statement, especially in light of a retort by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson that the 1951 military budget was "Eisenhower's budget." In his testimony last Wednesday Eisenhower explained that he was the "carpenter" but not the "architect" of the measure; that it had been cut by presidential order one billion dollars while he was working on it and he had conformed.

In addition to "guessing" that 500 million dollars added to the present budget would overcome the deficiencies which alarmed him, Eisenhower told the subcommittee many adjustments might be made within the budget itself. He had inserted the warning in his New York speech, he said, because he had just learned that funds for new aircraft in the 1951 budget would not keep the 48-group Air Force from falling into obsolescence

Harvard Professor Leaps to His Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
FRANCIS O. MATTHIESSEN
The world depressed him

Boston, April 1 (AP).—A world-famed Harvard man of letters, long active in the Progressive Party, leaped to his death from a hotel today after writing in a last note that he was "depressed over world affairs."

Dr. Francis Otto Matthiessen, 48, was termed a suicide by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary after a plunge from the twelfth floor of the Hotel Manger.

Matthiessen, known as an authority on the Novelist Henry James and for other works of literary criticism and history, had been a professor of literature and history at Harvard University since 1942.

He was Massachusetts delegate-at-large to the Progressive Party from 1944 to 1948 and a member of the national executive committee of the Progressive Citizens of America.

In addition, he was an official of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union and a trustee of the Samuel Adams School of Boston.

That school was listed as subversive once by United States Attorney General Tom Clarke. Its officers denied the charge.

Matthiessen, a bachelor, had been living on Beacon Hill during a year's leave of absence from Harvard while at work on a biography of the novelist, Theodore Dreiser.

A note found in the hotel room said:

"I am depressed over world affairs. I am a Christian and a Socialist and I am against any order that interferes with that objective. I would like to be buried by the side of my mother in Springfield, Mass."

Harvard Prof. Kenneth B. Murdock said Matthiessen visited him shortly before midnight last night and that when he left he seemed "suffering from extreme depression."

Born in Pasadena, Calif., Matthiessen was graduated from Yale in 1923 and took other degrees at Harvard and Oxford University in England.

to fear . . . if we want to win the cold war.

"We have to be unafraid at home," she declared. "If we cannot prove here that we believe in freedom, if we cannot have confidence in each other . . . we will never be able actually to lead the world."

Touching on the probe of communism within the Government, she said:

"We must be sure enough of ourselves to sit down with anyone and not be afraid of contamination by association. It will be a bad day when people say you are a Communist if you sit in a room and five years later it comes out that there were five Communists in the room."

Not Purely Domestic

Mrs. Roosevelt said the United States must "make sure we have civil rights in this country (because now) it is no longer a purely domestic question . . . It is the question above others that will determine whether democracy or communism will win out in the world."

She asserted also that it is "essential" that America find the answers to such economic questions as unemployment and social security.

What fear can do to individuals, she said she learned from her association with representatives of Communist nations in the U. N. "Fear takes away the courage to be individuals. But the poor things (referring to Soviet representatives) can do nothing else but what they do for fear of their lives."

On the platform with her was her son, Representative Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., (Democrat-Liberal, N. Y.).

The keynote speech, delivered by Connecticut's Gov. Chester Bowles, labeled the assault on the State Department and Acheson, sparked by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), "sordid political chicanery and individual blackmail." some of the most violent passages addressed to the McCarthy investigation of the State Department which appeared in Bowles' prepared address were dropped from the speech as delivered.

Denounces GOP, Dixiecrats

Bowles devoted part of his keynote address to domestic issues, particularly GOP charges of Fair Deal trends toward a "welfare state" and generally denounced Republicans and Dixiecrats. He declared that ADA's primary opportunity now lies in intellectual leadership rather than in political action.

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), on the other hand, called for direct political action to "smash the reactionary coalition which now rides high in Congress." He said that "our task is to bring reinforcements to Congress—reinforcements for the Fair Deal program of the Democratic Party and President Truman."

Humphrey said a Republican-Dixiecrat union appeared to be in the offing with GOP leaders flirting with former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. And he added:

"I hope things work out and this deal comes off. I hope they can make it a legal union. They belong together."

mittee also has been turned down when it has asked for files.

The committee said modification of the presidential order "is recommended for consideration."

The report called for "the fullest cooperation between legislative and executive arms of the Government" in dealing with subversive activities. It said petty rivalry can only work to the advantage of the Reds.

In many cases, the committee said, subversive elements will give information to one branch of the Government and withhold it from another when it suits their purposes.

Other recommendations:

Passage of a law to guard against employment of subversives in defense plants.

Applying to officers of national labor unions the same security standards now covering members of the unions having access to secret material in atomic and national defense projects.

Enactment of legislation to permit jailing of aliens who can't be deported because their native country refuses to accept them. The committee said this would hit thousands of alien Communists.

Americanism Group Reports on D. C. Probe

The House Committee on Un-American Activities reported yesterday that it investigated Communist activities in the District last summer because "Communists working outside the Government have been known in the past to aid subversive agents within the Government."

The committee's 1949 annual report also pointed out that the Washington Cooperative Bookshop which it investigated has since gone out of business. The bookstore at 917 17th st. nw., was described as one of the most important Communist fronts in Washington.

In a one-paragraph statement on its local probe, the committee noted hearings last June and July dealt with operations of "a Communist group" with the Nation's Capitol but which did not include Government employes.

Lattimore Greeted by Wife . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"THANKFUL TO BE BACK"—Owen Lattimore had a big smile and soft words for his wife as she greeted him at New York International Airport yesterday, but he had a few harsh words for his accuser, Senator Joseph McCarthy. Back from a United Nations mission to Afghanistan to deny charges of being a Communist, Lattimore referred to Senator McCarthy's charges as "base and miserable"

Lattimore was McCarthy's alleged master spy was made public last Sunday.

Lattimore said his attorneys had offered all his files "including my personal correspondence" to the Senate committee and they would be available also to the FBI, the State Department "and all other agencies of Government."

Lattimore was scheduled to appear before the Senate committee Tuesday, but Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), committee chairman, said Lattimore could have more time to prepare his testimony.

However, Lattimore said today that although he arrived 24 hours later than he had planned, he still hoped to "meet the deadline" and appear Tuesday.

Book Banned in Russia

Lattimore said that at least one of his books had been banned in the Soviet Union and "some intemperate Americans" had denounced his writings.

"My views are and always have been my own," he said. "I follow no 'line.'"

Lattimore said he was "honored" by McCarthy's description of him as the "architect" of this country's Far Eastern policy, but that he could not claim responsibility for it.

"Like most other scholars," he said, "I think that if the State Department had in fact followed the approach that my books have suggested, we would be in a much better position now and China would not now be in the hands of the Communists."

Lattimore said the Wisconsin Senator's accusations were hampering United States officials abroad.

"McCarthy's vicious attacks on the highest officials of our State Department are accomplishing results for Russia which exceed their wildest hopes," Lattimore declared.

"The Soviet Union ought to decorate McCarthy for telling the kind of lies about the United States that Russian propagandists couldn't invent."

Lattimore is on leave of absence from Johns Hopkins University, where he is director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Research.

two checks—one for $2500 and the other for $1000—which he said were signed by Frederick Vanderbilt Field and were payable to "Jessup's organization," the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Asks Explanation

McCarthy called Field a self-proclaimed Communist.

"Thus we find Jessup," McCarthy told the Senate, "taking money from a traitor and a Communist to support his magazine which was following the party line to a 'T'."

When Jessup testified before the Senate inquiry committee on March 20 he flatly denied McCarthy's charge that he has an "unusual affinity for Communist causes." He also defended his connection with the Institute of Pacific Relations. McCarthy at that time had not accused Jessup of accepting Communist funds.

In his telegram to Acheson yesterday, McCarthy said:

"To date there has been no attempted explanation of the very shocking and disturbing fact that Mr. Jessup's publication was being financed with Communist funds while selling the Communist Party line. In fact, not even the usual angry denial was made."

Medical Facilities Seen Swamped by Atomic Attack

NYHT News Service

Congress gave the Nation yesterday a grim warning of the vast unprecedented problems facing civilians in the event of atomic bombing attacks.

The Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy released another carefully edited installment of hitherto secret testimony on civil defense planning. Among other things, it warned that completely adequate health services "would become impossible" after any sizable attacks because surveys have shown shortages of personnel, hospital facilities and medical supplies.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), committee chairman, released the new testimony with the remark that "the most careful and thorough kind of advance preparation is imperative."

"It seems clear to me that if war should come, our Nation's cities may be prime target for atomic and hydrogen bombs," Senator McMahon said. ". . . I urge every American to take an interest in civil defense and to cooperate with his local government in establishing a sound, calm, civil defense program."

Much planning and research already is under way on Federal, State and local levels, Senator McMahon said, emphasizing that such defense programs are essentially "a job for civilians."

City officials from Miuwaukee, San Francisco, Detroit and Providence, R. I., will testify before the committee Monday morning when it resumes open hearings on civil defense planning.

Part of the testimony released yesterday was that of Dr. Norvin Kiefer, director of the Health Resources division, Office of Civilian Mobilization, in the NSRB.

Dr. Kiefer said, on the prudent assumption that atomic bombing would produce large, if not unprecedented, civilian casualties, completely adequate health services would become impossible because NSRB studies have shown the following shortages would occur:

"1. There would be inadequate numbers of all types of health personnel.

"2. There would be severe shortages of health supplies.

"3. There would be serious shortages of hospital facilities.

"4. Even if we could assume—and we certainly can not—that we would have adequate numbers of personnel and adequate supplies, immediate mobilization and transportation of large numbers of professional persons and huge quantities of bulky supplies to reinforce local services and commodities would be severely limited by availability of interurban transportation (which might be crippled by enemy attack) and of intracity travel (which would be impeded by fires, debris and similar obstacles)."

A bombing such as that on Hiroshima, producing 80,000 casualties, would require for initial first aid and treatment during the first week alone 200 railway box cars full of medical supplies, Dr. Kiefer said. While with proper planning it would be possible to produce medical supplies adequate for both military and essential civilian needs, such supplies "would be grossly inadequate for major wartime civilian disasters," he said.

State Department Denies U. S. Seeks Air Bases in Spain

NYHT News Service

The State Department categorically and emphatically denied yesterday reports that the United States was seeking air bases in Spain.

The reports originated in The Hague where Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson is attending a meeting of the ministers of defense of the 12 Atlantic Pact countries.

Although two reliable American correspondents had cabled similar stories to the effect that American officials were favoring incorporation of Spain into the western European defense system, the State Department said it knew nothing of such a plan.

Apparently the initiative rested entirely with the Pentagon, which has long been at odds with the State Department on Spanish policy.

ECA Cites 'Very Great' Gains In First Half of Aid Program

By The Associated Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration said yesterday that its half-completed European Recovery Program has made "very great" progress but that much remains to be done.

Recovery nations must intensify efforts to achieve economic union before the Marshall Plan ends, ECA said, and this country must step up purchases from Europe.

With about 9 billion dollars of the 15 billion dollars planned for the four-year program already committed, the recovery agency said it is well pleased with the Marshall Plan results up to now.

On Monday, ECA will celebrate accomplishments to date with a ceremony for about 1200 employes, Congressmen, and diplomats representing the 18 Marshall Plan nations of western Europe.

Gen. George C. Marshall, father of the recovery program; Secretary of State Dean Acheson and ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman will discuss what has been done and remains to be done before the program's scheduled end on June 30, 1952.

The Monday program will be filmed for use later in each of the recovery nations. It is only one phase of a 10-day presentation by ECA of its progress report. The recovery agency is preparing about 30 news releases explaining all phases of its program. They will be distributed between April 1 and 13.

In yesterday's report, ECA made these points:

1. "The agency reported . . . health facilities expanded and diet gain at prewar standards in most of the countries receiving Marshall Plan aid. Unemployment is also at a low ebb."

2. Agricultural output will be at a new postwar high in the 1949-1950 year, despite earlier fears that drought might cut production.

3. Industrial production for all recovery nations during 1949 was 15 percent above the 1938 level. With western Germany excluded, it was 29 percent above the prewar level.

D. C. Visitors to Swell Palm Sunday Crowds

At Arlington

U.S. Templars Set to Mark Easter Here

Thousands of uniformed Knights Templar from all sections of the Nation and Canada will participate in the Sunrise Services Easter Sunday at 7:30 a. m. in the amphitheater of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery.

Heading the lists of dignitaries is Robert B. Gaylord of San Francisco, grand master of Knights Templar of the United States of America. He will be accompanied by members of his staff of the Grand Encampment under whose auspices the services are held each year.

Dr. Edgar C. Powers of Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland Bible Society and grand chaplain of the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Southern Jurisdiction, will deliver the sermon. Dr. John C. Palmer, retired District clergyman and prelate of the District Grand Commandery, will offer prayers.

The United States Marine Band, under direction of Maj. William F. Santlemann, will play.

Following the services Grand Master Gaylord, assisted by Richard E. Titlow, past grand commander of the District and chairman of the event, will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

25,000 Expected to Join In Sunrise Service

A throng of 25,000 worshipers are expected to join in an Easter Sunrise service at National Memorial Park on Lee hgwy., 1½ miles west of Falls Church. It will be the fourth annual service.

The Rev. Glendale Burton, pastor of Wilson Boulevard Christian Church, Arlington, who is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the service, will repeat a sermon he delivered at the service in 1949, "The Attractive Man of Gallilee."

The Madrigal Singers of Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, will sing. The service will begin at sunrise, 5:41 a. m. Arrangements have been made for worshipers to hear the services from parked autos, if they wish.

Thousands of Washingtonians will observe the triumphant entry of Christ into Jerusalem at services in Christian churches throughout the District today.

The crowds of worshipers will be swelled by tourists, who came to Washington for the Cherry Blossom Festival, postponed yesterday but scheduled to go on as planned today.

For those who plan to give a Palm Sunday preview of gay new Easter outfits—and there are many such each year—the weather forecaster offers some encouragement.

Many of the Christian churches have scheduled musical programs in observance of Palm Sunday. In the Catholic and Episcopal and some Protestant churches, worshipers will be given palm branches at the morning services.

In many of the churches, young people who have been studying for church membership will be confirmed.

The Palm Sunday services mark the opening of Holy Week—Christianity's most sacred period.

Archbishop O'Boyle To Attend Service

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, will attend the fourteenth annual memorial services for deceased members of the District of Columbia Chapter, Knights of Columbus, today.

The services will be held at 7:30 p. m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 920 10th st. nw. Archbishop O'Boyle will be presented with a chalice in memory of the deceased members of the Washington, Keare, Carroll, Spalding and Potom Councils, which comprise the District of Columbia Chapter.

Falls Church Parade Due On Saturday

A Falls Church Easter Saturday parade will be sponsored April 8 by the Greater Falls Church Chamber of Commerce and the city's Retail Merchants Association.

The parade, from 2 to 4 p. m., will feature several floats, a military band, Scout units and civic organizations. The line of march will begin at S. Washington and Cameron sts and end at the Falls Church High School on Hillwood ave.

Brig. Gen. S. R. Hinds, USA (ret.), will be grand marshal. Chairman is Francis A. Wagner.

Negro Opera Unit, Civic Groups Plan Easter Parade

The National Negro Opera Company and Negro civic groups have scheduled an Easter Sunday parade with bands, floats and school drill teams participating, it was announced yesterday.

The parade, to start at 3:30 p.m., will move along U st. nw. from 10th to 15th sts., up 15th and over Corcoran st. to 14th. There the group will disband for an Easter symposium program at the John Wesley A.M.E Zion Methodist Church.

The symposium program will be part of a $250,000 fund drive to establish an opera headquarters building here, Mrs. Mary Cardwell Dawson, founder of the National Negro Opera Company, announced.

The parade is scheduled to include several hundred marchers, floats with opera singers and dancers in costume, and an Easter fashions division sponsored by local merchants. Walter M. Dawson is grand marshal, James C. Watson is assistant grand marshal and Joseph Moore deputy grand marshal.

Group to Fast Holy Week in Arms Protest

Hoping to stop the "trend toward suicide" and gain support for world disarmament, 50 pacifists last night began a week-long fast at Inspiration House, 1867 Kalorama rd. nw.

The group will live on water until Easter morning. Individuals who become weak may be given fruit juices under a doctor's orders.

The idea originated with the Peacemakers, a national pacifist group which attempts to apply the nonviolent principles of the late Mohandas K. Gandhi. They made their decision at a conference after President Truman announced the United States will make hydrogen bombs.

The group of 50 will include a Hopi Indian chief, from Hotevilla, Ariz., and representatives of the Catholic Workers' Organization and the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an interfaith organization.

Francis Hall, 33, executive secretary of the New York branch of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, said leaflets urging disarmament will be distributed to churchgoers this morning.

On Monday members will ask an audience at the White House and call on officials to join in a prayer period. In an open letter they will ask the President to rescind the order to produce the H-bomb.

Similar visits will be made to the Russian Embassy, the offices of the AFL, the CIO, the National Education Association, and perhaps the Atomic Energy Commission, Hall said.

Each night at 8, except Thursday, the group will hold a meeting open to any one.

Hall said 32 similar fasts will be conducted in the United States, Hawaiian Islands, Puerto Rico and England.

AEC Negotiating Contracts for 34 Research Projects

The Atomic Energy Commission announced yesterday it is negotiating contracts for 34 new research projects in schools, hospitals and private laboratories.

Included are one for work at Georgetown University by Dr. Charles F. Geschickter on research with radioistopes in bone cancers. Another is for laboratory studies with "tagged" atoms in cellulose and allied polysaccarides, at the Harris Research Laboratories, 1246 Taylor st. nw.

The projects, when fully approved, would bring to 194 the total in biological and medical research to be financed by a five-million-dollar fund.

Young Father Is Held In Rape of Girl, 12

Stockton, Calif., April 1 (U.P.).—A young father employed as a used-car salesman was picked up today for investigation in the kidnap-rape of 12-year-old Esther Lobato, who was left for dead in a barn.

Sheriff Carlos Souza of San Joaquin County identified the suspect as William Leicher, 22, and the father of a 6-month-old child. He said the victim had tentatively identified Leicher "through a doorway" and that the sheriff's office intended to book him "for investigation of kidnaping and rape by force."

Sheriff's deputies questioned Leicher about his movements during last night when, according to the story sobbingly related by Esther, a dark-complexioned, "fat" youth accosted her on the street, beat off a valiant defense by her 7-year-old brother and dragged her screaming into a car.

Leicher claimed he knew nothing of the crime, Souza said.

Leicher was picked up by a deputy sheriff in East Stockton because Leicher's car resembled the description of the kidnap vehicle given by Esther and by passersby who came to the scene too late to stop the abduction.

Esther was knocked unconscious by her kidnaper and recovered in a barn near Lockeford, a small community near here, today. She walked 4 miles barefoot into a Lockeford cafe and told a story that touched off a roundup of sex offenders.

Souza said Leicher has no record in this vicinity.

Taxi-Truck Crash Kills Woman

said, was driven nothward on 4th st., by George A. Branch, 27, of 716 55th st. ne. Police said it was the property of Mazo Bros., Inc., 700 K st. sw.

Police said Branch went through a red light and his truck struck the side of the cab which was going west on Independence ave. They said Branch stopped the truck momentarily, then started again, and was captured at 4th st. and Constitution ave., by squad cars which had received a radio alarm from a traffic squad car.

Branch said he could give no explanation of how the accident occurred. He was held without bond last night.

Three other persons died yesterday as the result of traffic accidents in the Washington area.

They are: Sergt. George Collins, 26, of Fort Belvoir, Va.; Mrs. Martha Hayden of Aliquippa, Pa., and Lorain W. Harris of 5817 Colorado ave. nw.

Sergeant Collins, 26, of Marion, Ill., died instantly when he was crushed between two car bumpers as he changed a tire. The accident happened on Mount Vernon blvd., at the north entrance to the National Airport.

Park police said that Sergeant Collins and two other Fort Belvoir soldiers were in an auto headed south when the left rear tire blew out. Corpl. James B. Williams, 23, of Birmingham, Ala., was aiding Collins to change it.

An auto driven by I. W. Hansen, 28, of Philadelphia, Pa., crashed into the rear of the soldiers' car, police said, and crushed Collins to death. Williams suffered a fractured leg. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, and transferred to Walter Reed Hospital. Corpl. Paul L. Webster, 23, of Burlington, N. C., who was asleep in the soldiers' car, was unhurt.

Miss Beatrice Bedner, 24, of 426 N. Columbus st., Alexandria, riding with Hansen, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises, and released.

Hansen was taken to Alexandria, charged with manslaughter, and released in $1000 bond.

Mrs. Hayden, 63, of Aliquippa, Pa., died at 5 a. m. yesterday at Suburban Hospital of injuries received nearly 24 hours earlier when an auto driven by her son, George Hayden, 35, crashed into a tree near Gaithersburg, Md. Hayden's wife, Helen, 27, died at Suburban Hospital shortly after the accident.

Lorain Harris, 43, died at 6:25 a. m., yesterday at the Naval Hospital at Quantico, Va. He suffered multiple fractures Wednesday night near Woodbridge, Va., police said, when struck by a taxicab driven by James J. Cook, 405 10th st. ne. Cook was released on $500 bond on a charge of reckless driving.

Harris, a veteran of more than four years' Coast Guard service during the last war, was a native of Charlottesville, Va., and came to Washington about 1930.

He is survived by his wife, Marie, and a son, Robert, 4. He is also survived by three brothers, Clarence G. Harris, 6314 Utah ave. nw.; Will Harris and Charles Harris, both of Charlottesville, and four sisters, Mrs. Ruth Parr, Alexandria; Mrs. Eunice Smith and Mrs. Mary Stewart of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Hannah Alexander of Pennsylvania.

Funeral services have not been arranged.

Woodrow Maxwell, 35, of 132 10th st. se., was in critical condition yesterday at Emergency Hospital with a broken neck as a result of an accident Friday night at Chestnut st. nw., and the Baltimore and Ohio tracks.

Police said he was a passenger in an automobile driven by William L. Pace, jr., 21, of 711 C st. ne. The auto, police said, crashed into a barricade at the end of the street, and overturned. Pace was charged with speeding.

Fear of Flood Halts 3d Bid To 'Make' Rain

New York, April 1 (U.P.).—Rainmakers today had a new excuse for calling off an attempt to coax water from the clouds. They were afraid they might succeed too well. They feared a flood.

The first plan to seed clouds with dry ice from airplanes fell through because it was too cloudy and rainy for the planes to take off.

The second flopped because the clouds got away.

Today, Mother Nature, without urging from man, filled streams and reservoirs in the area. Any more rain might cause flooding.

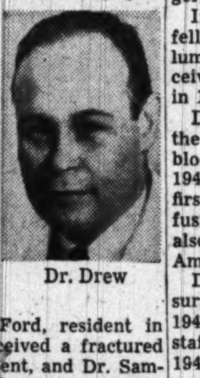
Dr. Drew, District Surgeon, Dies in North Carolina Crash

Dr. Charles R. Drew, 45, chief surgeon at Freedmen's Hospital and professor of surgery at Howard University, was killed early yesterday in an automobile accident near Burlington, N. C.



Dr. Drew

He and three other surgeons from Freedmen's Hospital were en route to Tuskegee, Ala., to attend a medical clinic there. With him were:

Dr. John R. Ford, resident in surgery, who received a fractured arm in the accident, and Dr. Samuel Bullock, staff surgeon, and Dr. Walter S. Johnson, resident in orthopedic surgery, who were slightly injured but did not require hospital treatment.

Dr. Drew was driving and apparently dozed off at the wheel, the Associated Press reported. The car overturned when he tried to straighten it out on a road shoulder.

A member of the American Board of Surgery since 1940, Dr. Drew became the first Negro examiner on the board two years later.

Always working for the development of Negro surgeons, he had trained more than half of the Negro surgeons who have been certified by the board, his associates at Freedmen's Hospital said.

Dr. Drew was born in Washington. He attended the elementary schools here and was a graduate of Dunbar High School. In 1926, he was graduated from Amherst College, where he had starred in football and track.

He received his medical degree from McGill University, Montreal, Canada, in 1933, served as resident doctor at the Montreal General Hospital during 1934 and part of 1935, when he came to Howard University as instructor in pathology and an assistant in surgery.

In 1938 he was awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship in Surgery at Columbia University, where he received his doctor of science degree in 1940.

During these years he organized the first program under which blood was sent to England, and in 1941 became the director of the first plasma division, Blood Transfusion Association. That year he also served as first director of the American Red Cross Blood Bank.

Dr. Drew had been professor of surgery at Howard University since 1941. He had served as chief of staff at Freedmen's Hospital from 1944 to 1946, when he was made medical director for two years.

He was a member of the Board of Directors of the District Chapter, National Foundations of Polyomyletis, and of the District Chapter, American Cancer Society. He was a member of the Board of Trustees, National Society for Crippled Children, and was chief of the surgical section of the National Medical Association.

He lived at 328 College st. nw.

Dr. Drew is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lenora Drew; four children, Bebe, 9, Charlene, 8, Sylvia, 6, and Charles Richard, jr., 4; his mother, Mrs. Nora Drew, and a brother, Joseph L. Drew, both of 2501 1st st. S. Arlington, and two sisters, Mrs. Francis Gregory, of 4015 Massachusetts ave. se., and Mrs. Phillip C. Johnson, of Vienna. Va.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Hugh Butler to Speak

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) will be the principal speaker at an Arlington County Republican rally, scheduled at 7:45 p. m. Wednesday in the Thomas Jefferson School.

plained, is that many of those notified are more experienced workers than others who must be retained because of former military service.

Notices Expire April 9

The 30-day notices that have been isued are up on April 9, but that is not necessarily the firing date he said. Civil Service requirements provide for the 30-day period, so it was decided to serve the notices even though the hospital's new budget has not arrived.

Dr. Griffith said he "understands" that the economy budget will cut his present staff of 420 members by 77 workers, including two resident doctors of the wards that will have to be closed.

Mount Alto Hospital, the 335-bed institution at 2650 Wisconsin ave. nw., is a specialized hospital even though classed as a general hospital. It is virtually the diagnostic center of all VA hospitals for the East Coast States, and handles the most difficult medical cases for the same area. Its Washington area patients comprise only from 10 to 20 percent of its total bed capacity, Dr. Griffith said.

Because of this, he explained, it is required to do far more than normal research work, and needs a proportionally higher ratio of personnel to patients than other VA institutions.

The impending personnel slashes, Dr. Griffith said, will cut hardest into the hospital's general medical services, its diagnostic work, and the special brain surgery.

Md. U. Paper Hits Medical Facilities There

The University of Maryland student newspaper yesterday assailed the college's emergency medical facilities at the university, pointing to a recent case where 45 minutes elapsed before a cerebral-hemorrhage victim was hospitalized.

Harold Kelso, 46, former Army Engineers economist, was stricken March 23 while addressing the Propeller Club in College Park. He died the following day at Garfield Hospital.

". . . neither College Park nor the university has an ambulance for such emergencies," an editorial in the Diamondback declared.

". . . 45 precious minutes elapsed from the time of the attack to the time an ambulance arrived from Branchville."

Branchville is about a mile from the university.

The editorial said only one nurse was available at the university infirmary and she was unable to leave her post.

Clyde Houle, of 4617 Clemson rd., College Park, a student who was present when Kelso collapsed, said he and/others tried to contact several doctors in the vicinity, but were unsuccessful. It is not customary to maintain a physician in attendance at the infirmary at night, according to university officials.

The Diamondback editorial suggested that a fulltime crew be placed immediately on ambulance duty at the University Fire Extension Building and Fire House.

"The next obituary may be your own," it concluded.

Civil Cases Backlog Here To Be Attacked

The recently augmented Municipal Court on Monday will begin trying to reduce a backlog of civil cases, some of which have been ready for trial for 15 months.

Chief Judge George P. Barse said yesterday that he is going to try to take all feasible methods to get the civil calendar current. There is no backlog, he said, in criminal cases.

Sworn in last week at the court were Judges Mary C. Barlow and Thomas C. Scalley. Both will be sitting in makeshift courtrooms in the Civil Division until funds are received for refinishing the rooms.

Judge Barse said that at present there are 3100 nonjury civil cases ready for trial and dating back 15 months. There are 850 civil jury cases, with a backlog of 15 months.

He declined to guess when the calendar can be brought up to date, but pointed out that the third judge authorized by Congress, but not yet designated, will help matters.

Coal Industry Opens Fight on Captive Pits

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A quiet, determined move to oust the steel interests from the coal industry has been started by the commercial coal producers as a result of the recent settlement with John L. Lewis.

Some of the commercial operators—whose coal is sold to the public—feel that the settlement with the United Mine Workers was forced down their throats in a "deal" between the steel interests in coal and Lewis.

These commercial operators observe, accusingly, that their eight-month battle against Lewis' demands suddenly came to an end hardly more than 24 hours after United States Steel Corp. announced it would have to cut steel production drastically because of a lack of coal stocks.

There is strong belief among these commercial operators that the basis for the peace formula was arranged at a secret meeting between Harry Moses, who heads U. S. Steel's great coal subsidiary, the H. C. Frick Co. and John L. Lewis on the eve of the public settlement early in March.

Stayed on Sidelines

Through the long-drawn-out contract negotiations between the operator associations and the unions, Moses stayed on the sidelines, and publicly stated several times that U. S. Steel did not care to take the lead in writing a new contract, but would go along with the commercial interests.

The privately protesting commercial operators now say that Moses was putting on an act, waiting for the right moment to rush into the negotiations with a settlement good enough to win acceptance by Lewis.

Publicly, at least, the settlement was agreed upon by George Love, representing the Northern and Western operators along with virtually all the "captive" mines owned by and for the steel companies—excepting U. S. Steel.

However, the angered commercial operators who feel they were taken now believe that Love suddenly became avid for a contract only after getting the word from Moses and the steel interests. The group of operators notes that Love heads the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., largest in the world and says that this outfit is controlled by M. A. Hanna holding company, which operates a vast iron ore and steel empire.

Cost Increases Cited

Some of the commercial operators take the attitude that they have been hurt through increased costs as a result of giving in to most of Lewis' demands since the coal industry is currently involved in a fierce competitive battle with oil and gas for the American fuel consumer.

On the other hand, they charge, the steel companies can more easily absorb the extra cost of running their coal mines since coal is but one item of the steel production process.

There is a strong feeling on the part of some commercial dealers that the move on the part of the larger Northern operators to name Harry Moses as a "coordinator" or "czar" for the industry is somehow involved in the peace settlement with Lewis. Moses, it is understood was to have been named a member of the board of trustees of the miners' 150-million-dollar-a-year welfare fund.

Thus far the move to make Moses something of a management boss of the coal industry has failed to jell because a number of independent commercial companies suspect they will become pawns of any play between the steel interests and Lewis. Some of the commercial coal officials believe that in the past several years all the contracts with the United Mine Workers have, directly or indirectly, been arranged via the steel interests.

Antitrust Action Studied

There has been as yet no open or public show of opposition to the steel interests in the coal industry. But it is known that some of the independents have conferred with Attorney General J. Howard McGrath about the possibilities of antitrust activities.

It was through antitrust action that the commercial coal producers managed, after a long fight, to oust the railroads from the coal business. Some of the commercial operators want to initiate a similar drive against the dominance of the steel interests in coal today.

The steel companies moved into coal just before and during the war in order to assure themselves at least a partial supply of coal. United States Steel has long maintained a vertical setup with its own coal mines.

The intra-industry battle, between the steel interests and the commercial producers, is still in the hush-hush stage. But the battle has already begun.

Security Issue Cause Of 55% of '49 Strikes

By The Associated Press

The Labor Department yesterday said more than half the heavy total of strike idleness in 1949 was due to labor disputes over union pension and insurance demands.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics found in a survey of last year's labor disputes that the pension-insurance issue was an important one in 189 strikes, which caused 55 percent of 1949 strike idleness.

The year 1949 was a heavy strike year — the strike idleness figure mounted to 50,500,000 man-days lost. This was the second highest figure on record, but only half as large as the 1946 record of 116 million man-days.

More than three million workers were involved in 1949 stoppages. But the bureau said the figure was inflated because coal miners were counted separately each of the three times they went on strike during the year.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Attempts in Congress to restrict annual leave has placed the spotlight on Uncle Sam's vacation and sick policies for his workers.

Contrary to the popular belief here, all Federal employes don't get 26 days vacation and up to 15 days sick leave annually. Some get more; others less. For example:

The doctors, dentists and nurses in the Veterans' Administration get 30 working days, or six weeks, of vacation annually and it may be accumulated up to 120 days. This same group, in addition, is entitled to sick leave at the rate of 15 days a year, accumulative to 90 days.

Federal employes of the Panama Canal on the Isthmus may be given 40½ working days off, or a bit more than eight weeks annually. The amount, however, must serve as both annual and sick leave. The Panama Canal is the only Federal agency that gives its employes a flat amount of leave for all purposes. Its workers may accumulate up to 90 days.

The half million postal employes are the one big Federal group that has lagged behind on leave benefits. They are limited to 15 days, or three weeks, vacation and up to 10 days sick leave annually, but they are allowed to accumulate up to 90 days annual.

Foreign Service employes have the best break of any group of Government people. They may be granted 60 calendar days, or two full months, of vacation, and to build it up to 180 days. Also, they are allowed to accumulate a maximum of 120 days of sick leave at 15 days annually. These State people, of course, are stationed the world-over and it takes considerable travel time to reach their homes in this country.

One hard-to-understand provision of the leave laws is the preference given to strictly temporary employes, those appointed for definite periods not exceeding a year. These temporary employes are allowed a vacation of 2½ working days a month, or 30 days a year, plus sick leave of 1¼ days a month, or 15 days annually. Why a new temporary worker should be given more vacation than a 30-year employe is one of those mysteries.

Most agencies give their overseas employes a better deal on vacations for obvious reasons. The Navy allows its employes outside the continental limits 30 days a year, accumulative to 120 days. But the Army limits its similar employes to 26 days and a maximum accumulation of 104 days. Agriculture employes in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands get 30 days vacation which can be extended another 30 days in cases of illness.

In addition, there are many other leave laws, rules, and regulations that apply to special groups of employes for one reason or the other. All this means that it isn't a simple matter to deal with them by hasty riders as have been proposed in Congress. The leave problem is something that requires a thorough study.

It's entirely posible for a full-dress study of leave to be made by a committee of experts. The Administration has maintained a neutral attitude toward the leave controversy up to this time. It's no secret, however, that its top personnel advisers are opposed: (1) to the original rider by Senator Douglas (D., Ill) to give all employes 20 days of vacation annually, and (2) the rider now before the House to prevent further accumulation of annual leave during this calendar year.

Now that brings up the question —what is the Administration's views on the leave problem? Well, its key personnel advisers lean toward a thorough study of the matter. In fact, a joint committee to conduct the study made up of staff members of the Senate and House Postoffice and Civil Service Committees, the Budget Bureau and the Civil Service Commission has been proposed. It would be instructed to report its recommendations to Congress next January. As one top personnel official said yesterday:

"Leave could be handled like efficiency ratings. Congress instructed Civil Service to study the ratings and to give it its views and that has been done. Now Congress is trying to figure out what to do about them."

Another point that is looked upon with favor by personnel advisers is a graduated system of annual leave based on years of service. In general, any change along that line would reduce leave benefits for new workers and wouldn't hurt the older employes. Also, there had been talk of reducing the 40-hour workweek to 37½ hours but little has been said about it recently.

Meantime, the Senate Appropriations Committee is making its own study of annual and sick leave. Each agency is busy filling out a questionnaire from the committee on its accumulated leave, etc.

Also, there's gossip that individual committee members have discussed plans to: (1) wipe out most of the accumulated leave over a period of several years by forcing employes to take 20 to 25 percent of their piled-up leave annually or else lose it, and (2) to reduce leave that could be earned over the next few years.

On the other hand, committee members led by Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.), fought the Douglas leave rider a few weeks ago because it was tied to an appropriation bill. Furthermore, the Senate Appropriations Committee three years ago made a similar study of leave and it concluded it didn't have jurisdiction in the field.

Central High Plan Draws New Blast

Citizens' Federation Condemns Transfer; Demands Are Made For New Facilities

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

Condemnation of the Board of Education for turning Central High School over to Negro use, and a demand for the replacement of facilities lost to the white schools by the transfer, were voiced simultaneously last night by the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Geary W. Lewis, chairman of the education committee, said that Central's possible use as a junior college had been precluded, and that the white schools had lost in the transfer their only indoor swimming pool and their one reasonably well-equipped athletic field.

In adopting Lewis' recommendation, the federation at its meeting in the board room of the District Building, asked that funds for all three of these facilities be included in the school budget.

Data Requested

The resolution also asked the superintendent of schools and the Board of Education to advise the federation as to what plans are being made for junior high school and night school students who have been attending Central and for the recreational activities which have been going on at Central.

School Supt. Robert B. Corning has recommended to the Board of Education that Central's senior high students be transferred to Roosevelt and that Roosevelt be renamed Roosevelt-Central High School.

In another resolution, the federation urgently requested sufficient funds in the budget for the next fiscal year to cover construction of a fully equipped, lighted stadium and indoor swimming pool at Coolidge High School.

Harry N. Stull, chairman of the suffrage committee, read a letter to House Speaker Sam Rayburn in which Federation President Herbert P. Leeman denied that a majority of the citizens associations were against the Kefauver home-rule bill.

177 of 218 Deeded

Leeman's letter was in reply to a letter to the members of the House of Representatives in which Representative John A. McMillan, chairman of the House District Committee, urged his colleagues not to sign a petition to discharge the Senate-passed Kefauver bill from McMillan's committee. The petition had 177 of the required 218 signatures at last count.

Leeman stated that not even half of the Federation's 71 member associations have taken action on the bill and that on every vote on home rule at federation meetings, delegates of member associations have voted overwhelmingly in favor of home rule.

In other resolutions, the federation:

1. Reiterated its stand in favor of daylight saving time. During debate on this proposal, the ballots being circulated which ask District residents to express their opinion on the matter came under heavy attack. Delegate Ralph W. Donnelly said if the District Commissioners want the people of the District to express themselves by ballot, "they should go up on the Hill and support home rule."

Bolling Base Hit

2. Appealed to the Military Affairs Committee and District Committees of the Senate and House to get rid of flight operations at Bolling Air Force Base and Anacostia Naval Air Station. The federation has been advised by the Office of the Secretary of Defense that replacement of these facilities would cost 30 million dollars.

3. Indorsed the Johnson bill to amend and clarify the teachers' leave act of 1949.

4. Asked for a new bridge over the Anacostia River between the Sousa and Benning bridges.

5. Asked that towing vehicles be stationed at all the city's bridges to tow off disabled cars during the rush hours.

School Teacher Victimized by Card 'Sharks'

Fairfax County Police answered a holdup and robbery call at Baileys Crossroads yesterday, and all they found was a disillusioned young schoolteacher.

John Boone, 917 S. Scott st., Arlington, science teacher at Hoffman-Boston High School, Arlington, told them he had just cashed a $174 pay check, when he met a stranger, ostensibly from Panama. The stranger wanted to pay Boone to drive him to Falls Church, to find a "friend."

At that moment another stranger, "Vincent," joined in. The three drove to Baileys Crossroads instead, and the two inveigled Boone into a card game. When it was over, Boone had lost his pay. All the winnings were to have been concealed until later in a cinder-block pile. When Boone returned, the money wasn't there.

When he told his story, some sympathetic person turned in the holdup call. The man from Panama and "Vincent" disappeared.

Bedell Smith Enters Hospital for Check Up

Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former Ambassador to Russia, who underwent an operation recently, entered Walter Reed Hospital yesterday for convalescent care and a checkup.

Smith, 54, wartime chief of staff to General Eisenhower, is now commander of the First Army Area, with headquarters at Governor's Island, N. Y.

He was Ambassador to Russia from early in 1946 until March, 1949, when he resigned and returned to the Army.

D. C. Residents Willingly Tell Their Income . . . And Their Age

Among those who bowed yesterday into the society of those who really count were Benjamin Elkin, graduate student, and Mrs. Earline Efird, housewife.

The reaction to their debut as census takers was happily apathetic, to wit:

Neither was bitten by a dog nor even snapped at by a housewife.

The attitude of the questioned to the questioners seemed to be —"Well, we know the information is needed, so come on in and tell us what information we can give you?"

No one seemed to mind answering even such questions as how much did you earn? And the women even gave their ages—so honestly that one summoned Mrs. Efird back to 'fess-up sheepishly:

"I said my age was 55 but, well, . . . it's really 57."

Mrs. Efird found about half the residents she tried to contact in her area, the vicinity of 8th and Butternut sts. nw., unavailable in the morning. But by night she had interviewed about 30 person, thereby earning $5.39, a view of one family's antiques and a drink of another family's coffee.

Enumerator Elkin, who questioned some 50 persons in the vicinity of Nichols ave., Galveston pl. and Forrester st. sw., encountered only two trying moments.

But Elkins, courtly in manner as a Chesterfield, emerged the master of both situations.

Once a fiftyish widow, her cheeks rouged and her eyes still eager, turned the tables on Elkin the Enumerator and asked him a question:

Had he while enumerating encountered any eligible husband material? She indicated preference for the nondrinking, nonsmoking, nongambling (but presumably still-breathing) species of the genus.

With a bow gallant and sincere, Elkin the Enumerator assured the pouter pigeon duchess he would keep an eye out for just such a male. Then he plied the lady with the official questions.

Then there was the incident involving the unshaved man who lurched to the door of an apartment.

When the man from the bureau identified himself and his mission, the householder invited him in—insisting the enumerator have a drink and listen to how the householder's wife had fled his home.

The enumerator, while radiating earnest sympathy and turning down the drink, deftly guided the conversation back to census channels.

Elkin, a wartime B-29 pilot, was rather apathetic about the quizzing experience, concluding it's just about as easy to peddle questions as to sell whisky, which he also does in his spare time to work his way through George Washington University Law School, where, he, too, must answer questions periodically.

Landlord Held In Gun Death Of Tenant

A "free lance" minister was held on a murder charge last night after his tenant died at Freedman's Hospital from bullet wounds which police said the minister admitted inflicting.

Mr. Martin

Victim was Eugene Bellfield, 29, who lived on the second floor at 615 Princeton st. nw. Arrested was the Rev. William N. Martin, 52, who lives on the first floor at the same address. Martin said he preaches when he is called, but earns his living as a plastering contractor.

Martin told police Bellfield came home noisy Friday night and the landlord went upstairs to quiet him. Yesterday, Martin said, a discussion of the incident took place, which ended with Bellfield threatening him.

Martin said he went into his apartment and pocketed a .38-caliber revolver.

A short time later, Martin told police, Bellfield entered the landlord's kitchen and "cussed him out" in front of his four children. Then, Martin said, Bellfield threatened to cut him up, and reached for a back pocket.

Martin said he drew his gun and fired three times. Bellfield was wounded under the right and left arms and died less than four hours later. Martin was held without bond.

Wagner Retires at 73

Charles C. Wagner, 73, President Truman's chief of correspondence, retired yesterday after 51 years' service with the Government.

Big 'Yes' Vote Among 10,800 Ballots in Fast Time Poll

With the House District Committee scheduled at 10:30 a. m. Monday to take up the daylight saving time bill, Washingtonians yesterday—at least on the basis of scattered returns—continue to ballot heavily in favor of "fast" time.

Police precincts had collected about 10,800 out of 200,000 ballots. Spot checks showed that the percentage in favor varied between four to one and two to one.

The House measure, among four other bills on Monday's House committee agenda, would be effective only for this summer. But on the Senate calendar, and awaiting floor action, is a bill that would make daylight saving time permanent for Washington's summers.

Meantime, House District leaders indicated they would not table discussion on their bill pending the outcome of the balloting. Most precincts expected heavy returns over the weekend, planned to tabudate them Monday and Tuesday.

Of seven letters on the subject sent by District commissioners, four favored daylight saving time.

One of the "against" letters, however, had this to say:

"Pity the poor babies who have their schedules in order. . . . Why not just say office hours from 8 to 4—same thing."

Another "against" letter declared that fast time is "fine for those who have suburban homes with nice porches and yards . . . But for the thousands of us who live in apartments and must spend the long, hot hours indoors, it is maddening."

A third note suggested "a supplemental proposition giving Washington an opportunity for a referendum vote on the retention or repeal of the sales tax law." The writer would make a year's residence in Washington a condition for balloting.

Here are the figures from precincts having reports:

No. 3—Scattered returns indicating 4 to 1 in favor; No. 6—Returns coming in fast showing 3 to 1 and better; No. 8—700 returned so far, a good majority "for;" No. 9—3000 so far, 4 to 1 in favor; No. 10—4000 returned, better than 2 to 1 "For;" No. 11—350 returned, none tabulated; No. 13—400 received, almost 3 to 1 in favor; No. 14—about 500 received, about 2 to 1 in favor.

$3,609,000 D. C. Road Funds For '52 Set Up in House Bill

The District is eligible to receive $3,609,000 in Federal funds for road and highway work in the fiscal year 1952 and an equal amount the following year under a bill reported to the House yesterday.

This District allocation is authorized in a 570-million-dollar Federal aid road bill for the Nation.

Maryland would get $5,850,000 and Virginia, $10,146,000.

None of the funds will become available until appropriated by Congress after the pending authorization measure is enacted.

The allocations would be granted to the District and other jurisdictions on the requirement that the Federal money is matched by local funds.

On approving the measure yesterday, Chairman William M. Whittington (D., Miss.) of the House Public Works Committee announced he will seek clearance of the Rules Committee for right-of-way action on the House floor.

Breakdown of the District allocation is: $505,000 for interstate roadways, $1,083,000 for primary roads, $722,000 for secondary roads and $1,299,000 for urban roads.

District Highway Director J. N. Robertson said a large portion of the money, if granted, might be spent on the proposed Anacostia bridge.

The House District Committee will meet in executive session at 10:30 a. m. Monday to consider a bill locating the new bridge at E. Capitol st.

The measure was introduced after the Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission were unable to agree on where the bridge should be located. NCPPC has favored placing the new span at Massachusetts ave. se.

Police Move on 1950 Car Tag Delinquents in D. C. and Md.

District auto drivers who missed the Friday deadline for obtaining new auto license tags, felt the effect of their delinquency sharply yesterday.

A total of 129 posted collateral on charges arising from their failure to have the new plates, and an additional number, as yet untotaled, received tickets.

Three different charges were placed, depending on the nature of the offense. One was "driving with dead tags," collateral $25; one was "failing to exhibit," collateral $10; and one, "improper tags," collateral $2.

In nearby Maryland, which observes the same deadlines, a few summonses were issued, but the enforcement was spotty. Many motorists reported they had sent checks and documents to Baltimore before the deadline but have not received the new tabs to be attached to the regular plates.

In the District, most attention was paid by police to those who actually drove with old plates. But after 8 a. m. yesterday some policemen began issuing summonses on cars parked on the street without the new licenses. In two cases cars were towed in and impounded.

No estimate was available yesterday on the total number of delinquent drivers in Washington. At Baltimore, authorities estimated 165,000 motorists failed to beat the deadline.

Police Trap Trio As Suspects in 2 D. C. Holdups

Gang Under Arrest, Including Woman, Believed Involved In Plaza Hotel Case

Police yesterday announced the arrest of three persons—one of them a woman—as suspected accomplices of a gunman who last week was charged with two holdups.

Detectives said the gang of five —one man is still sought—has been tied to two recent holdups, a stickup at the Plaza Hotel on March 11, and an assault robbery of a Southwest Washington druggist on March 15.

These were other crime developments:

1. Police disclosed the arrest of two men in connection with the $661 holdup last Thursday of Mrs. Ida Hall, 64, who lives in a rooming house at 952 F st. sw.

2. Edgar W. Lafollette, 22, night attendant at the filling station at 3103 Rhode Island ave. ne., was held up and robbed of $85 by a lone gunman at 4:15 a. m. yesterday.

On the night of March 24, Augustine F. Lawrence, 26, a short-order cook, of 1811 D st. se., surrendered to police after he heard they were seeking him.

$30,000 Bond

He was immediately charged with the Plaza Hotel and druggist holdups and is now being held in $30,000 bond.

Arrested Friday night and early yesterday as his alleged accomplices were:

Diane Gale Daniel, 24, a waitress, of 907 13th st. nw.

Anthony T. Di Pietro, 34, of 3507 Varnum st., Mount Rainier, Md.

Leon J. Cefaratti, 26, of 1813 A st. se.

Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, said the Daniel woman, described as Lawrence's girl friend, and Di Pietro are charged with participation in both holdups, and Cefaratti with a hand in the Plaza Hotel job. The suspect still at large took part only in the holdup of the druggist, Scott said.

The three were arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence who continued their cases until Tuesday and set the following bonds: $20,000 bond on i Pietro, $15,000 on Cefaratti, and $4000 on the Daniel woman.

Scott credited Detective Sergts. Nunzio Bonaccorsay, Paul E. Clarke, E. D. Crandal and Arthur Molle of the robbery squad and Detective Carl A. Rudbeck of the Eleventh Precinct with the roundup of three of the four suspects.

At Plaza Hotel

The gang, Scott said, staged its first holdup the night of March 12 at the Plaza Hotel, 331 1st st. ne. The robbery squad chief said Lawrence and Cefaratti held up the night clerk in the hotel and got $100 while the Daniel woman and Di Pietro waited outside in Cefaratti's car.

Three nights later, according to Scott, Lawrence and the suspect still sought slugged Martin Silver, 48, a druggist, as he was getting into his car near his store at 4141 Wheeler rd. se. He was robbed of $38 in cash and $350 in checks.

Silver, who lives at 818 Xenia pl. se., was hospitalized for three days as a result of the beating.

During this holdup, police say, Di Pietro and the Daniel woman were parked in a nearby alley.

On Probation

Scott said Lawrence, when arrested, was on three years' probation for the robbery and beating of Dr. Walter E. McCawley on November 18, 1948; that Cefaratti is on probation for housebreaking, and Di Pietro has a long juvenile record of minor crimes.

Meanwhile, police reported they had solved the $661 holdup Thursday of Mrs. Ida Hall in her rooming house at 952 F st. sw.

Arrested in connection with the case were Kenneth W. Decker, 24, of 1322 Fairfmont st. nw., and Noah T. Nelson, 27, identified by police as landlord of the F st. sw. rooming house.

Mrs. Hall told police she has been receiving relief payments for some time, and that last Thursday morning the two men entered her room, took the $661, and threatened to kill her if she reported the matter.

Commissioner Lawrence held Decker and Nelson in $10,000 bond each and continued their cases

Report Made

Davis Seeks Support in Crime Drive

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Representative James G. Davis (D., Ga.) said yesterday he hopes for advance and unanimous backing of Washington law enforcement officials on the reform legislation he will present to Congress.

"I don't think we will have much trouble getting bills for improved law enforcement through Congress," said the chairman of the House District Crime Investigating Subcommittee, "if we can present them as having the complete accord" of those affected.

Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach presented on Friday a preliminary program calling for nearly 100 administrative changes and new laws to perfect enforcement and prosecution here.

Closed Door Conference

The Fischbach report was outlined in a closed-door conference of court, police, prosecution and other enforcement officials.

Next step, Davis said, will be more meetings to "sift out the feasible" recommendations.

Then the subcommittee will decide which reforms can be put into effect immediately by administrative order and which will require legislation.

"One of the most important reforms advanced," Davis commented, "is the proposal for a continuing council on law enforcement to coordinate functions of police, the District Attorney's office and courts and other enforcement agencies."

The Fischbach report underlined need for stricter penalties and higher bonds for repeat criminals, crackdown on gambling, and tighter laws governing possession of weapons.

Reorganization Urged

A reorganization of the District Attorney's office was urged by Fischbach. It includes creation of divisions paralleling specialist squads in the Police Department, creation of a grand jury squad of investigators, dropping the policy of relying upon coroner's jury verdicts in homicide cases and abandonment of the practice of dismissing several indictments after a plea or verdict on one or two indictments.

A plan for uniform rules governing bondsmen and bail also was proposed. Two rules would establish uniform limits for individual bondsmen to be observed by all courts and would require bondsmen to keep records on the identity of individuals paying premiums or acting on behalf of prisoners. These records would be subject to inspection by court, police and other governmental officials.

Some reforms affecting the Police Department would: (1) reactivate the police academy, (2) relieve it of some duties not related to normal police activity, (3) increase personnel and (4) allow policemen full access to persons not admitted to bail for interrogation.

Arlington Police Find Holdup Car

Arlington police yesterday identified a green Mercury, abandoned at 11th and N. Stafford sts., Arlington as the escape car used by three bandits who held up N. W. Martin & Bros., Inc., Friday.

The car, bearing Tennessee tags, was found about 10 a. m. within 10 blocks of the $3887 robbery scene, at 1429 N. Quincy st., Arlington. In it were a man's leather windbreaker, two shirts, a pair of sneakers, and a man's gray hat.

Arlington Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said his men were still checking whether it is a stolen car. He discounted a theory that a car, answering the Mercury's description, and seen heading toward Washington on Route 1 at Woodbridge, Va., last night, could have contained the robbers.

Yeggs Crack Safe At Jr. High, Get $1000 in Cash

Yeggs burned open a wall safe in Jefferson Junior High School early yesterday with an acetylene torch and stole $1000 in cash.

Police said the school, at 7th and H sts. sw., was entered sometime between midnight and 6:30 a. m.

The safecrackers forced a window in a basement lavatory on the south side of the building. They picked up an acetylene torch in the boiler room and then made their way upstairs to the office of the principal, Hugh S. Smith.

From the safe, Smith told police, they took about $1000 in cash, which included four $100 bills, and four steel gray cash boxes.

Lieut. Michael Mahaney, head of the safe squad, said $600 of the loot was the property of the principal and the remainder belonged to the P-TA, school lunch and athletics funds.

Bing Conquers All At Front Royal

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Front Royal, April 1. — Bing Crosby did today what Stonewall Jackson did 88 years ago—he captured Front Royal.

Some 20,000 persons surrendered to the nonchalant star of screen and radio as he waged his own valley campaign from atop a bright red jeep fire truck, armed with a broad grin and a yellow scarf.

Even the weather capitulated. Threatening, leaden skies suddenly cleared around noon and sunshine bathed the festivities the rest of the day.

After a two-hour parade through the streets, Bing officially dedicated Front Royal's municipal stadium. It was named—as was this day—for him.

Bing's invasion of the Shenandoah Valley was an overwhelming personal victory as he made six personal appearances on the program of events for Bing Crosby Day.

He made a brief speech at the stadium, entertained 1300 school children at a matinee preview of his new movie, "Riding High," attended the premiere of the movie with Vice President and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, went to a square dance and a barn dance, and succeeded in making everybody from here to the other end of the Shenandoah Valley extremely happy.

Munching peanuts and ice cream sticks from his perch in the parade, Crosby earned as many votes for himself as for his chauffeur and host, State Senator Raymond R. Guest, a friend of long standing.

Barkley was a guest of the State senator, while Gov. and Mrs. John S. Battle stayed with Mrs. Pearl Weaver, wife of the late State Senator Aubrey Weaver.

Local punsters used every conceivable play on words to make the hero of the day feel his importance. Placards and posters, bunting and banners—all were splashed with "King Bing," "Sing, Bing;" "You're the Thing, Bing;" "Bing's a Whing-Ding," and just plain "Welcome, Bing."

The town fathers presented Bing with a key to the city, mounted on a truck and trailer. He didn't need it for en entree, however, when he tossed these lines into his version of "Dear Hearts and Gentle People," sung at the matinee of "Riding High":

"I feel like I'm on my own home soil, when I'm down in old Front Royal."

Crosby good-naturedly parried remarks from the crowd along the parade route when they dared him to take off his hat.

"Do you want me to catch pneumonia?" the balding Bing replied.

A red-faced clown pushed through the crowd with a corny joke.

"Looks like one of Bob Hope's gag writers," "The Groaner" remarked.

Riding up in front with Senator Guest was 11-year-old Richard Smith, a third grader who got tired of marching in the parade.

Bing hoisted the lad up on the back of the truck, and many asked if he was one of the crooner's four sons.

Senator A. Willis Robertson, who spoke at the stadium ceremonies, called Crosby "one of the most popular men in the whole Nation."

He was certainly the most popular in Front Royal since Jackson recaptured the town from the Yankees that spring day in 1862.

They gave him trophies, souvenirs, a scroll with 5000 signatures of school children, and their hearts.

And two boys from Pittsburgh, now attending Randolph-Macon Academy here, signed him up in the cadet corps.

Cadet Major James V. Voss, 18, dubbed Bing an "honorary colonel" in the corps. Cadet Harold Norrish, 13, presented him with a shining silver saber.

Guests at a dinner given by the chairman of the committee, State Senator Raymond R. Guest, and Mrs. Guest at their farm in Beyard were: Vice President and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Grey, Senator and Mrs. Harry F. Byrd, Senator and Mrs. A. Willis Robertson, Gov. and Mrs. Okey Patterson of West Virginia, Gov. and Mrs. John S. Battle of Virginia, Representative Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.) and other distinguished guests.

Child-Soothing Simple —With Right Voice

Front Royal, Va., April 1 (U.P.). The guest of honor was chewing the fat with his host, State Senator Raymond R. Guest, last night.

From one of the bedrooms came a girlish wail and, "Daddy, I want a glass of water."

The guest, father of four boys, wanted to know if girls acted that way, too.

"Let me handle this," he told the host, and he left the living room. After the little girl got her drink, there was a moment of silence and then—melody.

The rest of the guests peeked into the bedroom.

Bing Crosby was giving the child his best rendition of Brahm's Lullaby.

It's Colonel Crosby, Suh . . .

U. S. Sued for $500,000 In Liberator Crash

Philadelphia, April 1 (AP).—Harry D. Tobeh, a 26-year-old former Flying Fortress gunner, today sued the United States Government for $500,000 for injuries he said he sustained when an Army Liberator crashed in mid-Pacific, killing 20 of 28 homecoming service people.

Though the Liberator was Government-owned it was operated by the Vultee Corp., with a civilian crew and civilian ground crews. The basis for the suit, it was charged, is the "negligence" of both the ground crew in Hawaii and the plane's crew in not checking the fuel supply before the take-off. Bass claims a check would have disclosed the plane did not have enough gas to get to California.

Shun Factionalism, O'Mahoney Warns

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) warned last night against a spirit of faction among Americans.

Senator O'Mahoney spoke before 100 members of the Delta Sigma Pi Fraternity at their annual banquet in the Washington Hotel.

He said: "The old political issues that divided parties have disappeared. New issues are taking form and on every major issue the two political parties are split right down the middle."

Period of Confusion

The Senator first traced the historical role of America's "commercial classes" in shaping the Constitution. He said business interests sought to stabilize the economy after the American Revolution by urging ratification of the Constitution.

"We seem to be entering an era in which business wants no interference from Government and we are in a period of confusion comparable to that which brought forth the Constitutional Congress.

"The freedom of mankind and the preservation of free political and economic systems depend on a balance between government and business."

The Senator emphasized the need of getting the facts and then joining a political party rather than a faction.

Most Important Power

"Anybody who tells you the Government is wrong to regulate business" is wrong, O'Mahoney said. "The most important congressional power is the power to regulate commerce among States and foreign nations.

"The cost of our Government is higher than in the Soviet Union because we are a free people. And because we won the war and are the most powerful nation and are trying to lead the world to peace, we have the most tremendous national debt in history. We borrowed on the future.

"We must forget factional divisions and unite as free men. We must take the blinders off and see the issues of the day."

Butler Seeks Ban On Influence Sale By Ex-Officials

By The Associated Press

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.) yesterday proposed criminal penalties for former Federal officials who "sell their influence within their former agencies to private firms desiring Government favors."

Butler said he is drafting legislation aimed at restricting activities before Government agencies of former employes and officials.

The Nebraskan added he is considering including such a ban on former Congress members, retired generals and admirals and former members of the miltary services.

"The main point of my proposal," Butler's statement said, "would be a provision making it a criminal offense for any Government official to represent a private firm or organization before his former agency or commission within a two-year period after leaving the Government service."

Milk Prices Drop 1 Cent A Quart Here

Greater Washington dairies and grocery stores yesterday dropped the price of milk 1 cent a quart.

The cut, which brings the grade A delivered price in the area to 20½ cents a quart, applies to all types of milk, including buttermilk and chocolate milk. Delivered plain homogenized milk is also 20½ cents, while Vitamin D homogenized sold by some dairies is 21½ cents.

The store price is generally about 2 cents a quart lower than the delivered price.

The price reduction was ordered for the Arlington-Alexandria-Fairfax area by the Virginia Milk Commission, and as usual was applied by the dairies to the Washington area as a whole. A cut of 46 cents per hundredweight in the price paid by dairies to producers, also went into effect yesterday.

Hearings Set For CTC Fare Increase Bid

Hearings on the request of Capital Transit Co. for its third fare increase in three years are scheduled to start Tuesday at 10 a.m. in the District Building board room.

The Public Utilities Commission has reserved the room for the remainder of the week.

Claiming existing rates will result shortly in an operating deficit, CTC has asked the PUC to raise cash fares to 15 cents, raise token fares to 6 for 80 cents and abolish the $1.75 weekly pass. Cash fares are now 13 cents and tokens 3 for 35 cents.

The company stated that with the fare increase granted in October, 1948, it has realized a return of only 3 percent—not counting funds required to meet recent wage increases. The PUC has set 7½ percent as a fair rate of return.

Letters received by the PUC have come in nearly equal numbers from persons opposed to (1) any increase and (2) abolition of the pass.

Thirty-eight organizations and 96 individuals have written opposing some part of the company request. Nineteen organizations and 44 individuals are against any increase. Thirteen groups and 57 persons oppose abolishing the pass.

Only two petitions for intervention—which carries the right to cross-examine and present evidence—have been received, PUC officials said. These came from the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said that, to give CTC opportunity to protest granting of either petition the commission probably will not act on them until Tuesday morning.

Construction Record Set in First Quarter

New construction work hit a record high of $4,400,000,000 in the first three months of 1950, the Government reported yesterday.

The value of new building during the first quarter was 18 percent higher than the same period of 1949, with private construction up 17 percent and public construction 21 percent, a joint survey of the Labor and Commerce Departments showed.

For Easter Sunday

THE LIFE OF CHRIST IN PICTURE FORM

ON EASTER SUNDAY, The Washington Post will publish one of the most striking religious pictures ever painted—a panoramic canvas of the Life of Christ. This picture starts with the mission of the angel Gabriel to Nazareth and concludes with the announcement of the Resurrection to the two Marys. Forty-six episodes are portrayed in all, yet in this full account of the story there is a remarkable artistic and dramatic unity. The artist, Ayres Houghtelling, has succeeded in creating a modern version of the story-telling technique found in the tapestries of the middle ages.

This picture will be reproduced in Sunday's Washington Post, the full width of the newspaper page. It will be accompanied with a key to the scenes, which will easily enable the reader to follow the story in the picture.

Quake Shocks Pisa, Leaning Tower Site

Livorno (Leghorn), Italy (Sunday), April 2 (AP).—A violent earth shock spread terror in Livorno and the surrounding countryside last night. At least 30 persons were reported injured.

First reports said three buildings collapsed in Livorno.

The shock hit this seaport in northwest Italy about 11 p. m. (5 p. m. EST) and was accompanied by loud rumblings.

At nearby Lucca, another sharp shock was reported. Pisa, site of the famous leaning tower, also was shaken.

Hospitals where the injured were taken said all are expected to recover. No deaths were reported.

Police patrolled the streets to keep order and by 1 a. m. most of the frightened citizens had returned to their homes.

The director of the seismographic observatory here said the shock continued for 7 seconds.

Sub Hunt Continues

Eureka, Calif., April 1 (AP).—Navy planes and the destroyer Colahan still are criss-crossing northern California waters today looking for an unidentified submarine reported off Cape Mendocino Wednesday.

Ives' Fans Have Relaxed Afternoon

By Paul Hume

It's amazing to watch and hear Burl Ives sing folk songs.

He just stands there with his guitar and sings. Usually he keeps a deadpan, and the songs are almost always a succession of verses telling a story—with the same music over and over.

But that's only half of it. Those songs, some English, Irish, Scotch, and some unmistakably and wholly American, are among the oldest folk music we know. And in many cases the songs are heard today just the same way they have been played and sung for hundreds of years. They require no "arranging" or "new version."

Ives attracts a variety of listeners. There are hundreds of young children in his audience. They often come with parents who are equally delighted with the sophistication of the songs—a factor which may easily escape younger ears.

In his Constitution Hall singing yesterday afternoon Ives and his guitar held the audience easily while he went through the regular list of songs, touched with some reminiscent moments from Leadbelly and other great folk singers. It was a relaxing way to spend Saturday afternoon.

Prince Georges Begins Fire Radio Service

Dedication services for the new 50-watt radio service of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association were held yesterday at Hillside Firehouse.

The 125-foot antenna is located at that firehouse, while dispatcher offices are maintained at Hyattsville and Capitol Heights. The radio service is said to be the only county radio operated exclusively for fire service in the United States.

Twenty-four departments have two-way radio sets on 42 pieces of apparatus and 10 ambulances while 12 more sets are on order and will be installed in the next two weeks.

The mast is from the old police station at Upper Marlboro which was moved to Hillside in August, 1949, and set up by the firemen. The mast and $2000 of the moving expenses were provided by the Prince Georges County Commissioners, who also provide $28,500 in the budget for operation of the service.

The dedication address was given by Harry W. McNamee, president of the board of county commissioners, who said that Prince Georges County residents have had organized fire fighting for more than half a century because of the self-sacrifice of volunteer firemen, who largely were responsible for obtaining their own equipment through benefits.

Many other county and State officials spoke.

Montgomery Democrats to Elect Officials

Democrats of Montgomery County, at meetings in each of the 58 election precincts, will elect precinct chairmen and vice chairmen beginning at 8 p.m., Wednesday, April 12.

This was announced yesterday by J. Bond Smith of Takoma Park, chairman of the Democratic Central Committee for the county. Previously, chairmen and vice chairmen for precincts have been appointed by the State Central Committee.

Smith said that committees already appointed in each precinct will be in charge of the meetings, and persons who take part will be identified and checked against voter registration check lists to participate.

Twin Sent to Asylum In 'Hate Slaying'

Fresno, Calif., April 1 (AP).—Fourteen-year-old Alice Richard today was committed to a State mental institution for further observation in the "hate slaying" of her twin sister, Sally.

Commitment was 12 days after Sally met her death by shooting. It was indicated Alice would be observed for 90 days, then returned for court action.

Two Dutchmen Admire New Post Building

Three persons from faraway lands—an engineer and a contractor from Holland and a Post reporter from Athens, Ga.—checked on the progress of The Washington Post's new building.

The reporter, who doesn't know a joist from a hoist, listened with interest as the two Dutch masters of their trade acclaimed the upgoing structure at 1513-21 L st. nw. as a "very fine piece of work."

They are Job Dura, managing director of Dura, Ltd., contractors, at Rotterdam, and Johannes Jacobus van der Wal, a native of Amsterdam who is now managing director of a building engineer firm in The Hague.

Here on ECA Visit

Dura and Van der Wal are two of 10 prominent Netherlands architects, contractors and engineers who are visiting the United States under a program of the ECA.

They have been guests for three days of the Washington Building Congress. Its board of governors has escorted them on extensive tours of the city's better-known buildings.

Julian E. Berla, Washington architect and member of the board, pointed out that American buildings "compare very favorably with those of Holland." And the Dutch visitors agreed that the reverse was true.

They will visit Miami, New Orleans, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and New York before returning home May 9.

Their tour is part of the ECA program designed to encourage progress through the exchange of ideas in various fields of endeavor.

In the latest step toward completion of the eight-story building, workmen on the job finished pouring concrete on the fourth floor steel frame last week.

Spelunkers Tackle Problem Of Disappearing Mama Bats

The Nation's cave men and women began getting down to brass tacks at their convention here yesterday with a slam-bang discussion on "Sex Ratios of Hibernating Bats."

The "Mystery of the Missing Females (Bats)" was propounded by Dr. Harold B. Hitchcock, associate professor of biology at Middlebury (Vt.), College and one of the great bat authorities. He spoke before the National Speleological Society at the Dodge Hotel.

The strange riddle the professor spelled out to the speleologists and spelunkers—cave scientists and explorers—was enough to drive S. Holmes himself batty trying to solve, to wit:

It concerns the little brown bat, myotis lucifugus lucifugus. This is the commonest bat in the northeastern part of the continent.

In the summer the gal bats make their home in dark, stuffy attics, where they set up maternity wards and have their little bats.

But, summer past, comes winter—and the mystery:

In the winter the little brown bats seek shelter from the cold in caves, where the mercury stays above freezing.

But in cave studies in the northeastern United States, it has been discovered that little brown male bats outnumber little brown lady bats three to one.

"Where are the females?" Dr. Hitchcock asked it. "Have they found some snug cranny where the batman has not yet discovered them?"

The professor doesn't know.

Maybe the cave men and women will have a go at it when they make a mass field trip today to Massanutten Caverns at Harrisonburg, Va.

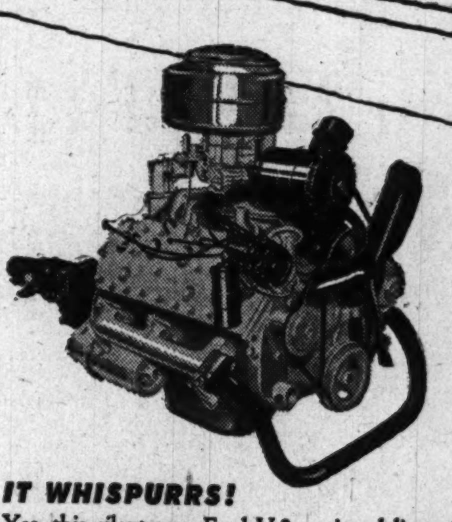
OVERDRIVE*

Ford is the only car in automotive history to twice receive the Fashion Academy's Gold Medal Award as "Fashion Car of the Year."

YOU ACTUALLY "pocket" up to 15% of every gas dollar of highway driving. Because in Ford Automatic Overdrive your engine speed relaxes 30% while your road speed remains unchanged. Your car hustles at 50 m.p.h., for example, while your engine loafs at only 35. This saving, plus extra long engine life, adds up to a smoother "4th gear" ride that pays its own way. And for added safety, a slight touch on your gas pedal releases a powerful surge that makes passing and hill-climbing a breeze.

*Optional at extra cost.



IT WHISPURRS!

Yes, this silent new Ford V-8 engine delivers its amazing power without raising its voice. It's the type of engine powering America's costliest cars, yet Ford (alone in its field) brings it to you for hundreds less than most "Sizes." (Ford's "Six" is priced even lower.) "Test Drive" this '50 Ford . . . its King Size Brakes . . . its "Mid Ship" Ride. It'll open your eyes.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Auto, Home Building Still Booming

So long as the automobile and home-building industries keep booming along, business in America can't be anything but good. Retail sales will be relatively high, employment won't slump, and overall industrial profits will hold up. That just about sums up the State of the Union today.

Livingston

Yet all business isn't good, uniformly good. This spring weather, which blows Keats and Shelley one day and Jack London the next, has been hard on apparel and department stores. As one prominent merchant put it "What woman wants to buy a hat with a flower garden on top when she's shivering in a fur coat?"

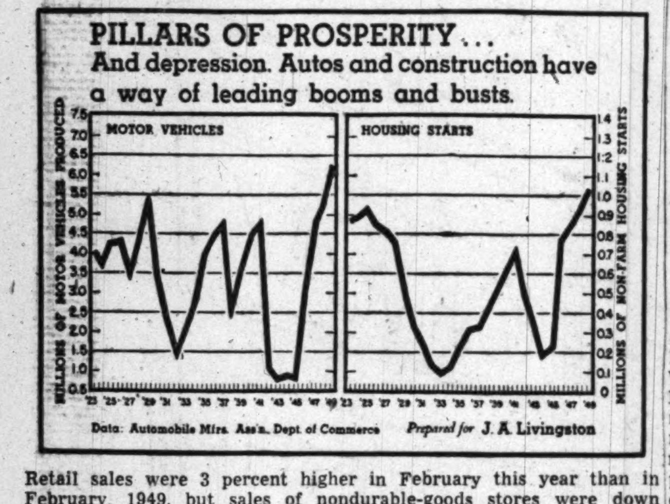
Department stores throughout the country report sales no better than last year for the week ended March 25. Since Easter fall on April 9 this year, a week earlier than in '49, a gain of 5 to 7 percent minimum would be in order— even conceding that prices this year are 5 percent or so under last year.

Weather Helps Home Building

The weather has not been a total loss. The warm, dry fall and winter permitted builders and contractors to operate steadily. In the five months, October through February, new houses started were more than 50 percent higher in 1949-50 than in 1948-49. Moreover, the completion of new homes sent people to stores for furniture, drapes, household appliances, pots and pans, rugs, etc. House furnishing sales have been good enough to offset the apparel slump in department stores.

The wormer-than-usual winter also may have spurred demand for new passenger automobiles. So far this year, in spite of the strike at Chrysler since January 25, motor vehicle production has run 17 percent ahead of last year. Since Chrysler represents about 20 percent of the industry's sales and productive capacity, that's a great achievement. It shows how promptly American industry will rush to fill a competitor's breach!

Perhaps the easiest way to sum up the economy is to repeat a phrase common in 1949 and 1948: Hard goods hard, soft goods soft.



Retail sales were 3 percent higher in February this year than in February, 1949, but sales of nondurable-goods stores were down 1.6 percent, whereas sales of durable-goods stores were up 14.4 percent.

Automotive showed the biggest year-to-year gain, 19.6 percent; next came home furnishings stores, 16.7 percent. Among the big declines were jewelry 11.8 percent, apparel 7.4 percent, and eating and drinking places 6.8 percent.

Trying to Foresee

For the forecaster, for the man trying to figure on what's going to happen to sales, employment, and profits, the real question is: How long can automobile and home building continue their present pace? And if they can't, what then?

Since the end of the war, automobile manufacturers have produced about 20 million cars and trucks. Nearly half of 43 million vehicles now on the road are of postwar vintage. In view of that, it takes lots of optimism to conclude that auto production in the second half of 1950 will be up to corresponding period of 1949.

But home building still has plenty to zip left. The demand for newly married and doubled-up couples is still strong. Also, up grading is taking place. People are quitting rundown apartments and houses for newer dwellings. So no major slack in home building seems likely in 1950.

New Economic Cushion

And heavy construction—both private and Government—is still at an unusually high level. So far this year, according to Engineering News-Record, heavy construction contract awards are 39 percent ahead of the corresponding period of 1949.

The chief new devolpment in the business outlook it seems to me, is the pressure on President Truman and Secretary of National Defense Johnson for increased defense expenditures, especially for the Air Force. Private citizen Eisenhower's testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee, calling for a half a billion dollar boost in the military budget, is bound to carry a great weight. It's not an unreasonable bet that rising expenditures on armament will act as a cushion to a drop in automobile production.

There's still another support factor at work. Though many companies have completed postwar expansion programs, private construction contracts so far this year, according to Engineering News-Record, are 55 percent ahead of 1949—that, notwithstanding prophecies of big declines in business expenditures on plant and equipment. Apparently, there's still a big carryover of repairs and replacement from the war and the depression. Business is well-heeled with cash, is not loath to spend on improvements.

CORRECTION: In last week's Business Outlook, the statement was made that United States oil production was 400 times Russia's. That was an error. The figures should have been seven times.

New York Cotton

New York, April 1 (AP)—Cotton futures closed firm today with gains of 10 to 50 cents a bale. Trading was active for the short session.

During early dealings new crop deliveries were depressed by news that President Truman had signed legislation permitting an increase of 1,200,000 acres in the 1950 cotton acreage goal. This boosted the area to be planted to 22,200,000 acres.

The decline, however, was shortlived. Early sellers covered when it became evident that there was a lack of follow-through pressure.

Sales in D. C. Lag Despite Early Easter

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department stores sales in the third week before Easter were 4 percent less than in the same 1949 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Easter comes a week earlier this year.

For the four weeks ended March 25, local sales also lagged 4 percent behind the like 1949 period.

Regional and national reports indicate that retail sales this year are not getting the traditional lift that Easter brings, especially in the women's clothing department.

Nationally, dollar volume in the week ended March 25 was the same as in the corresponding period last year, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The board estimated that, because Easter comes a week earlier, March sales should show a 2 percent increase over last year, just to keep on a par.

For the period January 1 to March 25, sales have averaged 3 percent under last year.

The magazine Sales Management reports that the greatest gains this year have been in the durable goods category. Nondurable sales are running behind last year.

New homes, GI insurance payments and expanding consumer credit, the magazine added, continue to sustain high sales of autos, television sets, home furnishings and the building and hardware fields.

IMPROVEMENT: Reflecting a rate increase, net income of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $325,699 in February against $298,361 in the same 1949 period. Low-Priced Stocks Lead In Gains, Sales

New York, April 1 (AP).—1949-50 bull market took one of the worst spills in its career this week.

Only once—in January—has the price level dropped as sharply since the market started to rise in mid-June, last year.

The market's action was notable for the switch in buying interest from many of the usual leaders to issues in the low-price bracket and to those with a more or less speculative rating.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	422	427
Declines	203	395
Unchanged	224	282
Total issues	843	1104

The most active issues were generally higher—stock selling around $20 a share or less.

In today's 2-hour session the trend toward low-priced issues reached a climax for the week.

The cheaper railroad shares, which have been sleepers in the market for some time, suddenly attracted aggressive support and prices edged ahead. New York Central, an old-time trading favorite, was the most active stock closing ½ higher at 14½, its top price since 1948.

Others in this category included Baltimore & Ohio, Alleghany Corp., Northern Pacific, Western Maryland, Lackawanna, Frisco, Chicago Great Western, Canadian Pacific, Pennsylvania and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Only one of the stocks listed above sells for more than $20 a share.

In addition to the rails some industrial and specialty stocks moved ahead. Among them were Nash-Kelvinator, Hupp Corp., Pepsi-Cola, Bridgeport Brass and American Bosch.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed the week at 74.3, a gain of .2 of one point on Saturday but down 1.2 points on the week.

Only once since the bull market started has the price level taken a steeper drop and that was in mid-January. Curiously, trading volume for this week was also the largest since the same week in mid-January.

The market during the week was very evidently going through a period of stress and strain.

Realty Bond Index Scores 9th Rise

An increase in the Amott-Baker bond price averages of 0.6 percent during the month of March extended the general uptrend in real estate bond prices into its ninth consecutive month. For the first quarter of 1950 bond prices rose from an average price of $787 per $1000 bond to $819 per $1000 bond for a total gain of 4 percent.

Although the price increases during March were not as spectacular as those of January and February the general tone of the market was relatively good with all classes of real estate bonds showing improvement.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 1 (AP).—Grains held steady within a narrow price range today—marking the first day this week that the market has not been subjected to wide and sudden price swings.

Fractional changes prevailed everywhere except in May rye, which scooted up on short covering. Cash dealers reported that 195,000 bushels of domestic rye and 102,000 bushels of Canadian rye held in bond afloat here were unloaded into local elevators.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ¼ higher, corn was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, oats were ¼ to ⅜ higher, rye was ¼ to 1¼ higher, soybeans were ⅜ lower to ½ higher and lard was 5 to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Lard sold off early on the first reaction to the Government's permitting price supports on live hogs to lapse. But the market came back on the theory farmers would curtail hog marketings until a new program was announced. Stocks here at the end of March totaled 47,285,808 pounds, against 95,508,311 pounds a year ago.

Seaway Urged to Aid New Ore Projects

Pittsburgh, April 1 (AP).—Backers of the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway argued this week the big project is essential if full use is to be made of iron ore deposits being developed in Canada.

The controversial multi-million dollar project to open the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes to ocean-going vessels received new support at the 54th annual convention here of the Ohio Valley Improvement Association.

J. Howard Marshall, Ashland, Ky., oilman who heads the OVIA, said his group favors the controversial seaway as "essential to the protection of the vast steelmaking investments in this part of the continent."

Marshall declared the project offers "the most reasonable method of bringing to the existing docks and other facilities of the Great Lakes the Labrador-Quebec ore for distribution to steel mills."

A Canadian iron ore man spoke strongly for the seaway. He is general manager W. H. Durrell of the Hollinger-Hanna iron developments in Canada.

The seaway, if constructed upon congressional authorization, would make seaports out of Great Lakes cities by rejiggering the St. Lawrence River channel and the passages between the five Great Lakes. Canals and locks, big and deep enough to carry ocean ships, would be constructed at many points.

The project also calls for a big water power plant straddling the Canadian-United States border near Massena, N. Y.

The plans, in the making since 1897, are opposed by railroading and coal mining industries. Steel and iron ore companies, once against the seaway, have shown more favor since Canadian iron ore came into the picture.

The Canadian mining official said his company hopes to ship an eventual 20 million tons of iron ore a year "providing construction of the St. Lawrence seaway is undertaken."

He contended present St. Lawrence facilties can not handle more than a fraction of the 10 million tons his firm will have to ship each year to make a fair return of its 200 million dollar investment.

Durrell said the Canadian government "has signified that it is most anxious to proceed with this work," and added:

"We in Canada are only waiting for the green light from Washington."

Youngstown Steel Rate To Rise Above 100%

Youngstown, Ohio, April 1 (AP).—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. has blown in its huge No. 3 blast furnace, a 1100-ton unit, at its Campbell Works. This boosts sharply its iron output and clears the way for an increase in steel production.

The Sheet & Tube Bessemer converter starts up Monday or Tuesday.

This will boost the Youngstown steelmaking rate next week to about 104 or 105 percent of capacity, near last spring's record rate.

GWU Hospital Ends 2d Year Of Operation

George Washington University's "new" hospital yesterday closed its books on its second full year of operations here.

The records showed that in those two years the 405-bed hospital admitted 26·365 patients. Its outpatient department, which serves the city's indigent and semi-indigent, recorded 45,382 patient visits. And its busy maternity department had ushered in 5035 babies.

Seven of the hospital's 29 present clinics were begun since April 1, 1949.

In addition to the clinics, the outpatient department of the hospital operates the emergency room, where some 9000 patient visits are now on record. The room has been open continuously, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, since the new building was opened at Washington Circle.

The hospital's department of physical medicine, the records showed, served 3298 patients, with a total of 18,564 visits, since the hospital's opening.

Seal Week Proclaimed

The week of April 3 was set aside as "Easter Seal Week" by proclamation of the District Commissioners yesterday.

The proclamation urged all citizens and organizations to support the annual Easter Seal drive, which supports the work of the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children.

The society specializes in services of rehabilitation, and medical and educational aid for the more than 10,000 crippled children and adults in Washington.

The drive to raise a minimum of $100,000 will close Easter Day. Starting today, seals will be on sale at all downtown theaters. They can also be obtained by calling at the society's headquarters at 1767 Massachusetts ave. nw., or telephoning Hobart 8724.

Navy Explodes Lucky Luciano 'War Hero' Myth

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

THE UNITED STATES Navy has exploded once and for all the legend that Charles (Lucky) Luciano was a behind-the-bars patriot in World War II.

In a statement to The Washington Post last week, the Navy had this to say about the notorious vice lord and his alleged war service:

"There is absolutely nothing in the record to show that Luciano ever gave any information that contributed to the war effort in any way so far as the United States Navy is concerned."

Luciano, now 52, and still regarded officially as "one of the most dangerous criminals in the world," has been the subject of an amazing build-up. Published reports, some of them almost certainly inspired by underworld confederates, have depicted him helping American intelligence officers in many ways, at home and abroad, in World War II.

It was claimed, for example, that Luciano helped the Navy check on fishing boats suspected of refueling German submarines off the East Coast; that he gave information that helped in the invasion of Sicily, and that he also played a remote part in the bloody assault on Salerno.

Millionaire 'Industrialist'

THE most fantastic thing of all in the Luciano "war hero" myth is this: That the hoodlum is supposed to have performed all his patriotic deeds while he was behind the bars in New York State's Great Meadows Prison, serving a 30-50-year sentence.

He was sent to prison in 1936 as a master panderer. Such characters as "Cokey Flo" and "Jenny the Factory" told how, operating from a suite in the Waldorf-Astoria, he welded together a chain of more than 200 brothels, with more than 1000 inmates, and collected tribute for booking, legal aid and protection from other gangsters. It was called a "10-million-dollar industry."

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who had prosecuted Luciano in his racket-busting days, commuted the mobster's sentence in 1946 after arranging to have him deported to his native Italy.

District Attorney Helped

THE buildup for Luciano reached its peak in the winter of 1947 when a gossip columnist, apparently the victim of a fast curve from the underworld, reported that he would be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, posthumously. Luciano then was in Havana, having slipped away from Italy, and was desperately anxious to stay that near the United States.

What led up to the attempt to glorify the droopy-eyed racketeer, whose big aim in life is to avoid being a "crumb"—a crumb, according to his definition, being a man "who works and saves and lays his money aside?"

Two things, plus a lot of official secrecy, laid the foundation for the Luciano buildup.

First, Navy intelligence officers did unquestionably ask Luciano for help while he was in prison; and, second, Governor Dewey did say publicly, in commuting the sentence after less than 10 years, that "Luciano's aid was sought by the armed forces . . ."

The man who ought to know most about the case is Comdr. Charles R. Haffenden, a Navy reserve officer, who was retired about two years ago.

Commander Haffenden, who was attached to Naval Intelligence in New York City in the early war years, was an important figure in a plan that was put into operation in 1942. The idea was born that it might be helpful to enlist the aid of influential underworld characters. Accordingly, conferences took place between Haffenden and other intelligence officers on the one hand and District Attorney Frank Hogan and his aides on the other.

Arrangements were made for the Navy men to confer with attorneys for underworld leaders. These attorneys, for their part, saw to it that the intelligence officers were put in touch with men like Luciano and "Socks" Lanza.

This version of the opening phase has never been challenged by any of those concerned. The controversy has always been confined to just what Luciano did in the next phase; that is, what he did to help in the war effort.

Affidavit Still Secret

THE Navy says that Commander Haffenden has reported to the department that Luciano was an "informant." It says, further, that Haffenden sent an affidavit to Albany—specifically to Governor Dewey's former Attorney General, Charles Breitel—giving his version of Luciano's contribution. This was in 1945. A copy of the affidavit is in Haffenden's Navy file.

Haffenden has never made public the affidavit.

"It's up to the Navy Department to dis cuss it if they want to," he was quoted as saying in 1947. "I'm not making a statement of any kind."

The Navy also has declined to make pub-

Now to Get Europe to Join Hands

By Paul G. Hoffman
Economic Cooperation Administrator

AFTER 2½ years in the struggle for European recovery against a cold war of mounting fury, we are, this week, halfway through the Marshall Plan.

Can we foresee final victory on June 30, 1952? Or, as ominous headlines sometimes seem to indicate, are we being drawn into an unending battle against communism of which no man can predict the outcome?

PAUL HOFFMAN

I am not a prophet, but I know that we can see the shape of our problem far more clearly than was possible two years ago when we opened our first ECA "office" in my room at the Statler Hotel here.

The vortex of today's struggle is in western Europe, where the Kremlin is attempting to wreck European recovery and to set back the European self-generated movement toward unity. Moscow knows that if it can halt recovery and gain control of western Europe piecemeal, its schemes for world domination will be given terrible impetus. Moscow also knows that failure to halt European recovery and win western Europe will block its ambition to dominate the world.

At the halfway mark we can look back on the strategy by which we have made progress so far and outline the somewhat different strategy necessary from now until 1952.

The first half of the Marshall Plan was necessarily devoted to overcoming economic collapse with each nation, raising production and restoring the financial stability of each government. We had to start with existing economic modes and machinery.

And what has been accomplished, largely on a country-by-country basis, within 2½ years, has been spectacular.

The recovery of European industry, literally built up from the rubble of World War II, has been a near-miracle. Less than five years after the end of the war, industrial production has been lifted 20 percent above its prewar level. In contrast, after World War I, in which the destruction was not nearly so bad, Europe needed seven years just to regain her prewar level.

Hard coal production is up 17 percent above prewar, steel 52 percent, electric power 21 percent, cement 58 percent and cotton yarn 31 percent. Farm production has lagged somewhat behind but is now almost back to prewar levels.

Now that production is restored about as far as it can be within the existing economic framework of western Europe, we are ready to go beyond this opening stage of the struggle.

Congress has stated it to be the policy of the people of the United States "to encourage the unification of Europe." A united Europe means an economically stronger Europe. Against a strong, united Europe, Stalin and his Russian cohorts will not march.

What are the basic causes of European disunity? To see the roots of chaos in western Europe we must look back even beyond the First World War.

Narrow Compartments

IN 1900, the American worker and the western European worker produced and lived about on the same scale. But since 1900, the United States has been growing because of our one big market and free competition across State lines. We have seen the dawn of the highway age.

Western Europe meanwhile slipped into narrow compartments. Fifty years of wars and preparation for wars, cartels, tariffs, import quotas, exchange controls and other devices of economic nationalism have choked free competition at its source—and made mass production for a big market impossible.

Last year, the United States, with 150 million people, turned out a gross national product of about 260 billion dollars. Western Europe, with its 270 million people, had a gross national product of 160 billion dollars.

If European per capita output had been on a par with ours, their gross national product would have been 470 billion dollars instead of 160 billion. Of course, Europe hasn't the raw materials, horsepower or other resources for production at this level. But she doesn't need to equal American per capita production in order to get an expanding standard of living which will lift her people above the threat and wiles of aggressive communism.

The obvious need is for Europe to develop her own program for taking fuller advantage of the great potentialities for prosperity and security that lie in closer cooperation. Unless she does move in this direction, and move fast, the recovery so far achieved within the individual nations cannot stick.

OEEC Gains Stature

MARSHALL PLAN countries were the first to recognize that Europe has got to attain a broad, freely trading market so it can take advantage of large-scale, low-cost production. Also, they know such economic integration will provide the means to bring the new German Republic fully into the western European family of nations—an essential condition for a peaceful and prosperous western Europe.

Integration has already started. Since last fall, the participating countries have removed quota restrictions from 50 percent of their trade which had previously been restricted. They have made some progress toward ending "dual pricing"—the system of charging one price for goods on the domestic market and up to 40 percent more to a neighbor. They took a vital step in naming Dr. Dirk Stikker, the able Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, to a new high-level post within the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC) to help speed the political decisions that must accompany economic policy.

Thus, the OEEC, originally formed as a means to determine how to divide American economic aid, gives promise of evolving into a permanent force for European integration.

And from now until June 30, 1952, the Marshall Plan will be helping Europe unify herself more rapidly. Accordingly, there will be some changes in the ECA operation.

Fence Still Stood

EARLY IN the Marshall Plan, an intra-European payments plan was worked out which operated on the principle of "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors."

Norway, for example, had a terrible housing shortage because the retreating Germans had blown up thousands of homes. She had the lumber for new construction but lacked the nails. Belgium had the nails—but Norway was out of francs.

Marshall Plan credits were therefore extended to Belgium on condition that she extend an equivalent credit in francs to Norway. The Norwegians bought the nails and built the houses by last Christmas.

But this plan, even with some modifications to increase the flow of intra-European trade, still left the existing currency barriers about where they were. It gave a boost over the fence but did not tear it down.

Marshall Plan countries are now negotiating a new European Payments Union which, with the help of the Economic Cooperation Administration, will help tear down

Leopold Row Hurts Belgian Recovery

By Frank Gervasi
Post Reporter

BRUSSELS.—What began as a political quarrel over whether Leopold III should return to the Belgian throne is rapidly developing into a full-blown struggle between the Social-Christian majority and a strong Socialist minority involving the continued prosperity of this industrially important country.

There have been riots and widespread strikes protesting the determination of the pro-Leopoldists to recall the King from a Swiss exile into which the Belgian Parliament sent him when he was unable to explain satisfactorily his allegedly premature surrender to the Germans, his kowtowing to Hitler at Berchtesgaden and his wartime marriage to a commoner.

The Catholic Social-Christians feel justified in pressing for Leopold's return to the throne now occupied by his brother, Regent Prince Charles, as a result of the referendum of three weeks ago in which 57 percent of Belgium's 5,500,000 registered voters declared themselves in his favor.

The preponderantly Protestant Socialists, while not opposed to the monarchy as an institution, are firmly opposed to Leopold's return. They would prefer to see the monarchy continued with Leopold's son, teenager Prince Baudouin, holding Leopold unfit to rule in view of his wartime record.

There is no reason to believe, judging by the speeches and writings of Socialist former Premier Paul Henri Spaak and other opponents of Leopold, that the agitation against his return will subside.

Furthermore, unless (1) the Catholics are able to form a government strong enough to survive Socialist and Liberal anti-Leopoldist pressures or (2) Leopold abdicates, one may expect general elections in due course. They would be held within 40 days after dissolution of Parliament, which would occur automatically if the Catholics were unable to patch together an acceptable government.

The agitation over "the royal question" has succeeded thus far only in deepening the religious and sectional antagonisms which make this little nation a peculiarly schizophrenic one, interrupting the country's amazing economic recovery and giving aid and comfort to the antimonarchist Communists.

It is doubtful whether a general election would solve anything. Belgium, like Britain, is at a political seesaw point. An election could just as easily give the King's Socialist-Liberal opponents a majority as the referendum gave one to the Leopoldists. There is little hope that it would be a decisive one.

Unemployment Up Sharply

BELGIUM, in other words, would remain in a state of uncertainty. The country, along with the neighbors dependent upon it for manufactured goods and some foods, would consequently suffer economically.

The country's economy is already beginning to show signs of strain in spite of well-stocked stores and other outward evidences of fat-cat prosperity, such as high-priced, dollar-bought American cars.

Thanks to conditional Marshall aid which enables Belgium to export to countries needing its industrial products, the country is booming—or was until recently. In the last year unemployment rose by 100,000 to well over 300,000, a large number in a nation with a population of only 8,500,000.

Continued political chaos over a matter which could be solved now with Leopold's abdication, can impair western European recovery and retard Belgium's military participation in the Atlantic Pact. Also, Belgium could become polarized between Catholic and Protestant forces. The latter, as represented by university students, already have raised the cry of "Clericalism!"

Antagonisms might easily become so strong as to preclude any settlement of the royal question in its present purely juridic framework involving the acceptability of the exiled monarch. La questione royale could easily become rephrased, "Should we have a king at all?"

It is not difficult to imagine the turmoil that issue could produce—a turmoil into which the Communists would fling themselves with glee—in this passion-charged country.

The Unifying Force

BELGIUM is neither a geographical unit nor an ethnical one. It is about one-tenth the size of Arizona, geographically part Flemish and part Walloon, linguisti-

WORLD AFFAIRS

Duce Rebuffs Pope's Envoy of Peace

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek
Foreign Affairs Writer of the Irish Times.

Chapter XV—Keeper of the World's Conscience

THE WEST called the period between September, 1939, and May, 1940, the "phony war." All remained quiet on the Western front; hardly a shot was fired. But that there was nothing phony in the war still raging in eastern Europe, now against the vanquished civilian population, was proved in broadcasts from the Vatican in January, 1940. They gave chapter and verse of the appalling violence in German- and Russian-occupied Poland.

The day on which the German armies invaded the West, the Pope sent personal telegrams to the rulers of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg which clearly demonstrated his indignation over the faked pretext under which Hitler had invaded these small neutral nations.

To Queen Wilhelmina, the Protestant ruler of a largely Protestant country, he cabled, "Deeply moved that the peace efforts of Your Majesty have not saved your noble people from becoming against its will and its right a theater of war. We pray God, the Supreme Judge of the fate of all peoples, to speed with His might the reestablishment of peace and freedom."

Duce Still Smarting

MEANWHILE, Pius XII concentrated all his efforts to prevent Italy from entering the war. Already, in September, 1939, he had sent to Mussolini his trusted adviser, Father Tacchi Venturi, S.J. The choice of intermediary was determined by the fact that Mussolini was known to have a high regard for this Jesuit, whose diplomatic skill had helped so materially to bridge the difficulty over Mussolini's own approach to the Pope's predecessor, Pius XI. The Lateran Treaty of 10 years earlier, that conciliation between the Vatican and the Italian state (aloof ever since the seizure of the papal states by the Kings of Italy in 1870), was one of the Duce's proudest boasts of his statesmanship.

This time, however, Mussolini would not receive Tacchi Venturi. The Fascist leader was still smarting from the moral defeat which he had felt over the Pope's antiwar broadcast of the month before. The Germans had not heeded that broadcast, but the Italian people had; the papal radio address had opened their eyes. The man in the street realized for the first time the chasm that threatened to open in front of him. Great crowds had gathered around public loudspeakers; all cafes, shops and other such places had switched to the Vatican wavelength; and the reception throughout Italy had produced the effect of a spontaneous plebiscite for peace.

In December, 1939, the King and Queen of Italy made their first state visit to the new Pope. Such a state visit to his predecessor had been returned by a cardinal as special ambassador. Pius XII, however, decided on a startling innovation, so as to be able to utilize his personal influence on the monarch with greater effect. He returned the King's visit in person, a most demonstrative gesture of good will, since no Pope had set foot in the Quirinal since the reigning King's grandfather had seized it from Pius IX.

An Effective Appeal

IN THE early spring of 1940, President Roosevelt sent his Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, on a peace exploratory mission to all the warring European capitals. Sumner Welles had a long talk with the Pope—all the better prepared, since soon after the outbreak of war the President had appointed Myron Taylor as his personal envoy to the Pope. Vatican and United States now timed a personal appeal to Mussolini. In April, 1940, the Pope and the American President each wrote a personal letter to the Italian dictator, a gesture which appealed to his vanity so much that for some little time it looked as if he might be swayed in the right direction.

Early in May the Pope had gone to the Church of Santa Maria Sopra Minerva, where lies the body of St. Catherine of Siena, whom a year before the Pope had proclaimed—with St. Francis of Assisi—the principal patron saint of Italy. There, in a sermon from the pulpit, Pius XII made yet another inspired appeal for peace. Its reception made it abundantly clear that the people of Italy wanted peace.

Had it not been for the rapid and complete success of the German march into France (up till then still generally considered the strongest military power on the Continent), the people's wish might have won. As things happened, the complete and sudden collapse of France made Mussolini hasten into the war so as not to lose his share of the spoils of his ally's victory (which share, as it turned out almost at once, amounted to next to nothing).

On June 10, 1940, the Allied diplomats accredited to the Vatican, with their staffs and families, moved their residences inside the territory of the independent and neutral Vatican City state. Four years later almost to the day, they were to be succeeded there by the Axis diplomats in a then Allied-occupied Rome.

The 'Five Victories'

RIGHT through the passion of abuse and hatred unleashed by the war, Pius XII considered it his bounden duty to remain the keeper of the world's conscience.

In his Christmas allocution of 1940 to the assembled cardinals, he formulated his five fundmental pillars for true peace, five points which he labored again and again to attain during all the subsequent war years. He wished for five "victories": victory over hatred, which divides the nations (implying the disappearance of systems which automatically breed such hatred); victory over distrust; victory over that "pernicious doctrine which makes might create right"; victory over the disequilibrium of world economy; victory over that egoism which "sullies the sound, just and ordered liberty of individuals."

The Princess of Piedmont, consort of Italy's Crown Prince Umberto, kneels to kiss the ring of Pope Pius XII on the pontiff's historic visit to the Quirinal Palace December 28, 1939. King Victor Emanuel is at the extreme right and Queen Elena stands beside the kneeling princess. The Pope was returning a royal visit to the Vatican

They are the essential directives, repeated in but another form when, at Christmas, 1944, he defined peace as "only worthy of the name when it means justice and truth; only then peace will be the mother of healthy freedom and assured greatness."

In his Easter, 1941, broadcast he admonished the Axis powers to let themselves be guided by their conscience and their honor in the treatment of occupied peoples. With the clear hint of a warning that one day they might find the roles changed, he counseled them not to take measures that they themselves would consider unjust if they were inflicted on their own people.

He charged his nuncio in Berlin, Msgr. Cesare Orsenigo, to protest the shooting of French hostages. His nuncio at Vichy called upon the then French Premier, M. Laval, to protest the Jewish pogrom in France. When this protest was brushed aside, the Cardinal Secretary of State called the French ambassador at the Vatican to task about "this gross infraction of the fundamental principles proclaimed by Marshal Petain himself on assuming power as head of state—an infraction irreconcilable with his often-professed faith."

Propagandists' Target

HOW heavy the war weighed on the Pope's mind echoes in a Christmas allocation to the cardinals: "You alone can fathom the tasks and duties, the sorrows and worries, the pains and fears, which lie on the shoulders, which grip the heart of one chosen by Providence to be the loving father of all."

As head of the universal church, the Pope stands of course above international disputes and rivalries. In the passionate clash of ideologies, hot-headed propagandists branded the Pope's supernational standpoint as lack of courage, but then in every war each warring camp has wanted the Holy See as an ally.

The western nations would have liked the Pope to condemn Germany out of hand, but to condemn an entire people for the faults of its rulers would have been a grave injustice—and which nation has the right to judge itself free of any guilt? The Holy See had already condemned Bolshevism in the encyclical, "Divini Redemptoris," and Nazi-ism in the encyclical, "Mit Brennender Sorge," as two equally rejectable heresies.

The Pope has also been criticized for his alleged failure to mediate in the war. As he put it himself in a broadcast of May, 1943, "We know that, as things stand at present, there is no chance of success for proposals for a just and lasting peace." Soon afterwards, as we know now from Mr. Churchill's own mouth, "the disastrous decision on unconditional surrender" made a further attempt stillborn.

Luciano's Far From Belmont, But He's Still No 'Crumb'

lic the affidavit. However, it took it into consideration in saying that Luciano's contribution to the war was zero. The affidavit, a Navy spokesman said, was made by Haffenden, not as an officer, but as an individual.

An effort to get the affidavit from Governor Dewey's office also was unsuccessful. Former Attorney General Breitel told The Washington Post back in November that, under the rules of his office, the document could not be made public without the consent of those involved.

WHEN Luciano was convicted on prostitution charges in 1936, it marked Dewey's most spectacular success as a crusading prosecutor. It represented, also, an important milestone in a political career that was to lead to the Governorship and to two Republican nominations for the Presidency.

Luciano, whose friends began calling him "Charley Lucky" in 1929 when he came back from what was supposed to be a one-way "ride," was truly a big shot. Al Capone was said to be afraid of him. His income from brothels was regarded as but a small part of the revenue that poured into his Waldorf-Astoria headquarters from various enterprises, including industrial rackets and gambling.

A free spender and race track plunger, he cut quite a swath on Broadway. He lived luxuriously and was known in the most expensive night clubs. He owned a Lockheed plane and used it to make his rounds to Hot Springs, Ark., and Miami.

Lucky was trying to improve himself in a social way, too. One of his lawyers, George Morton Levy, brought this out at his trial, saying:

"He was trying to elevate himself, and of late years has been associating himself with the better element at the race tracks, and not with prostitutes and procurers."

HE WAS arrested in Hot Springs for the New York authorities after being indicted as a vice lord. Prosecutor Dewey disclosed later that the gangster offered a $50,000 bribe to the Attorney General of Arkansas in an effort to block extradition.

Luciano, who was christened Salvatore, was brought to this country from Italy when he was 9. Reared on New York's East Side, he was a chronic truant from school. At the age of 18, he was an outright criminal. His record was such that he never bothered to apply for American citizenship, which explains why he is in Italy today, pining for the bright lights, the race tracks and the other pleasures he once knew in this country.

Irving W. Halpern, a New York probation officer, made a study of Luciano while he was on trial in 1936, and gave out this analysis of the gangster:

"His social outlook is essentially childish, in that it is dominated by recklessness and a craving for action. His only asset as a leader consists of his apparent calmness in times of stress. This characteristic, which appears to have been based on his feeling that he could escape involvement, has passed for reserve and strength.

"As a consequence, he is accorded a degree of underworld respect. He manifests a peasant-like faith in chance and has developed an attitude of nonchalance. His behavior patterns are essentially instinctive and primitive, his manner easy, copious and ingratiating.

"His freedom from conscience springs from his admitted philosophy: 'I never was a crumb, and if I have to be a crumb I'd rather be dead.'"

(Probation Officer Halpern noted that Luciano's description of a crumb would seem to fit the average conservative American.)

"His ideals of life," the analysis went on to say, "resolved themselves into money to spend, beautiful women to enjoy, silk underclothes and places to go in style . . . (He) is a shallow and parasitic individual who is considerably wrapped up in his own feelings."

LUCIANO'S sentence—30 to 50 years—was a shock to the underworld. Grumbling about a "bum rap," he began serving it on June 18, 1936, at Dannemora. That autumn, in an interview with a New York Evening Post reporter, he insisted that "Cokey Flo" and other witnesses against him had lied.

"They just lied because that was the way out for them," Luciano said. "Look around this jail. You'll see 2000 guys. There ain't one of them that won't send his own grandmother to jail if it means that it cuts his own bit."

Lucky, apparently, never dreamed that he would get out of prison in the way it really happened. In talking to the reporter, he talked only of how it would be when he was free once again in the United States.

"When I do (get out), watch me," he said. "I'll follow the horses from Saratoga to Belmont to Florida to California . . . I'll never lock a door again. I'll watch women laughing and dancing. I'll laugh and dance, too. I'll take a drink. When I get out, I'm going to be free."

Ultimately, Cokey Flo and other key witnesses recanted their testimony against Luciano. This, however, did him no good; he remained in prison.

First Try Failed

THEN, in 1942, an incredible thing happened, something, as the saying goes, beyond his wildest dreams. He who had been excoriated as a public enemy, who had been convicted of one of the most sordid of crimes, was to be interviewed and asked to give help, from his prison cell, to defeat the Axis.

Luciano was quick to take advantage of this break. George Wolf, his counsel, tried in the courts in 1943 to have his sentence suspended, arguing that he had aided the war effort. This attempt failed.

Two years later, another Luciano lawyer, Moses Polakoff, applied to Governor Dewey for a commutation of sentence. According to reports in the New York papers, Polakoff told Dewey that Luciano had furnished the authorities with information about Sicily that was helpful in the invasion of that island.

Governor Dewey, in commuting the sentence in the winter of '46, gave three grounds: (1) Luciano was deportable as an alien; (2) he had been asked for cooperation by the armed services and had given it, and (3) he had behaved well in prison.

Cautious Statement

DEWEY'S statement about Luciano's part in the war was very carefully worded. It said:

"Upon the entry of the United States into the war, Luciano's aid was sought by the armed services in inducing others to provide information concerning possible enemy attacks. It appears that he cooperated in such effort, although the actual value of the information is not clear."

Dewey did not explain what was meant by "enemy attacks." On January 4, 1946, the New York Herald Tribune carried a story of Dewey's action, and over it was a headline which read:

"Dewey Frees Luciano for Deportation To Italy as Reward for Aid in War."

Other New York newspapers also played up the war-service angle. Strangely, there was no controversy over Governor Dewey's action at the time, and, so far as the files show, no demand for an explanation of Luciano's part in the war. That was to come later.

Luciano was deported to Italy February 10, 1946. Frank Costello, now listed as the No. 1 man of the American underworld, a tag he insists is undeserved, paid a waterfront visit to Luciano just before he left for Naples aboard the freighter Laura Keene. This was seen as an example of Costello's devotion to old pals, even though he now is interested in meeting the "best people."

Cuba Shed Him

THE outcry over Luciano came later that year. In October it was discovered that he had made a clandestine voyage from Italy to Cuba, and was living a luxurious life in Havana. Federal officials here were disturbed. Harry J. Anslinger, Commissioner of Narcotics, notified the Cuban government that no more legitimate narcotic drugs would be sent to the island while Luciano was there. His presence, it was explained, might lead to the "diversion of drugs."

Luciano was arrested by Cuban police, and on March 20, 1947, started back to Italy aboard the Turkish steamship Bakir. When he arrived there, according to police, he had several gold ingots, a belt with his name in diamonds, 100 neckties, several bank books, $1000 in currency and a large diamond set in white gold.

Meantime, the story of Luciano's release and deportation in '46 was revived, and a lot of questions were asked. Assemblyman Owen McGivern said in the New York Legislature that the gangster's release was "premature." District Attorney Hogan said that the idea of bringing the underworld into the war effort was "a naval idea entirely." Murray I. Gurfein, who had been Hogan's assistant until he became an Army inteligence officer, said that all he did was to arrange for Commander Haffenden to meet attorneys for underworld characters, including Luciano's counsel, Polakoff.

Haffenden's superiors in the early war years—Rear Admiral Monroe Kelly and Capt. Roscoe C. MacFall—insisted that Luciano did nothing to help in the war. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, who commanded the Office of Strategic Services, said the same thing, and added that he didn't see "what he could have done anyway."

All this is topped off now by the Navy Department's disclaimer of any patriotic service by the mobster.

Taxpayers Benefited

PAUL LOCKWOOD, when he was Governor Dewey's secretary, explained that it was the practice in New York to make a periodical check of alien prisoners, and to deport them if they had served a reasonable length of time. Luciano was such a prisoner, Lockwood said, and added that his deportation had saved New York taxpayers the burden of feeding him.

Col. Garland Williams, director of the New York office of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, said he thought this was an unrealistic view of law enforcement. The Federal Government, he said, has been forced to send agents abroad to check on Luciano's activities. Foreign governments, he said, also have been forced to spend large sums because Luciano is out of prison.

"I regard Luciano as one of the most dangerous criminals in the world today," Colonel Williams said. "His influence in racketeering circles in the United States is almost as powerful as when he was on the scene. He receives at least one visit a week from the United States and two or three telephone calls a week from over here."

Luciano was asked in Rome about his income, about how he supports himself.

"Ah, one gets along," he said.

But the dreams he used to have in prison, it seems, have not been fulfilled. Belmont and Hialeah are far away. He "hates" Sicily, his birthplace. In Rome, he complains, the police are watching him "all the time," and have been ever since he "got out of the can."

"It's driving me nuts," he says.

Abdication Would Soothe Belgium

cally part Dutch-speaking and part French, respectively.

The king has historically been the unifying force. Leopold and his three predecessors were never Kings of Belgium, but Kings of the Belgians, in itself an indication of the deep cleavages within the country. Wallonia is anti-Leopold and Flanders is pro.

Controversy over Leopold began as a result of his surrender to the Germans May 28, 1940, after an 18-day resistance. The British and French accused him of betraying the Allied armies which were left exposed by the Belgian collapse, and making Dunkirk necessary.

Leopold remained in Belgium when the country's government fled to London, and thereafter occurred a series of events which undermined many Belgians' faith in him.

A Futile Mission

LEOPOLD paid a visit to Hitler at Berchtesgaden on November 19, 1940, to obtain, he has since maintained, the return of Belgian prisoners of war and improved rations for his people. That he got neither did not improve his position.

Then came his unpopular marriage. Widowed when the beloved Queen Astrid was killed in a motor accident, Leopold, on December 11, 1941, while a prisoner of war in a castle near Brussels, married a commoner, the comely Mary Lilly Baels.

Belgians considered his marriage, his bestowal on the bride of a title previously held by Queen Astrid, his Austrian honeymoon and his reported acceptance of Hitlerian gifts, as Leopold's greatest sins as King.

His actions, they said, belied his claim that he had remained behind to share the fate of his soldiers. In the King's defense, however, it must be said that many Belgians—particularly among that fifth of the population who became refugees in France and were returned in humiliation to Belgium when France fell—were grateful for his presence in their midst.

Insufficient Margin

THE controversy over Leopold's fitness as a king led to his exile upon the election of his younger brother, Charles, as Regent in September, 1944. It has since become a political problem as complex as it is explosive.

Everybody wants a settlement, but nobody wants to compromise. Leopold had let it be known that he would consider a 55 percent vote in his favor as enough of a mandate to warrant his return from Switzerland. The Socialists insisted that they would regard no less than 66 percent as a mandate. The King's 57 percent was decisive enough for the Social-Christians but not for the Socialists or Liberals, who withdrew from the cabinet and caused the government's fall.

The Social-Christians have since indicated that they regarded the referendum not only as a mandate for Leopold's return, but a call to them to rule. Their apparent determination to do so—to form an all-Social-Christian government—might well arouse the long-dormant republicanism of the Belgian Socialist Party.

There are also strong prorepublican currents within the Liberal Party, third largest political group.

Communists' Chance

WHATEVER happens, a long period of stalemate and what would amount to no government appears inevitable. Meanwhile the Communists will make hay among the jobless, stirring up trouble in Socialist as well as Social-Christian trade unions.

Dock strikes in Antwerp against unloading of Atlantic Pact arms, work stoppages in industrial plants whose output is needed by Belgium's partners in the European Recovery Program and other troubles—perhaps physical violence—should surprise no one.

Leopold holds the key to the situation. His abdication could open the door to Belgium's peaceful resumption of normal political and economic life. He is renowned less for his humility, however, than for his hard-headedness.

Three Cases Strike at Legal Props of Segregation

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

BLOCKED in Congress, the Truman Administration this week carries its civil rights battle before the Supreme Court, where it seeks a ruling that would knock down the legal props of racial segregation in the United States today.

If the Government should win and the court should strike down the 54-year-old doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities for Negroes and whites, the Administration's victory would be more far-reaching than even the result of the FEPC bill which it cannot get through Congress.

"The separate but equal" doctrine says that segregated schools, buses, restaurants, hotels and other public gathering places do not violate the Constitution, including that part adopted as the post-Civil War amendments designed to aid the newly freed slaves.

It is this doctrine, under attack before the court in three cases to be argued this week, that is the legal rock on which are built the segregated schools of 17 States and the District of Columbia, as well as other segregation practices of the South—and partially of the North, as well.

The betting around town, however, is that the court majority will find a way to duck the red-hot issue. It is a well-founded legal rule that the Supreme Court does not determine constitutional issues if other grounds for decision exist.

McGrath Debut Likely

TO LEND emphasis to the Administration's backing of civil rights measures, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath may argue one or more of the cases. He has yet to argue a case before the high court since taking over that post.

A decision voiding the "separate but equal" doctrine in one or more of the three cases—they will be argued one after the other, beginning Monday—would not immediately end any segregation practice. It would affect only the specific case. One involves railroad dining car segregation, another the segregated University of Texas Law School and the third the segregated classes in the University of Oklahoma Law School.

First, a look at the three cases and then some history behind them.

1. Elmer W. Henderson, now director of the American Council on Human Rights here in Washington, was a wartime employe of President Roosevelt's FEPC when he was denied service on a Southern Railway segregated car. Such cars today are divided by a curtain into tables for whites and Negroes. Henderson attacked the practice as unconstitutional but lost the case in the lower courts.

2. Heman Marion Sweatt of Houston seeks admission to the State university's white law school. He has told the State Supreme Court he would not attend a segregated law school, no matter how "equal" it might be in facilities. The State recently opened a Negro university at Houston with law school facilities.

3. G. W. McLaurin is the first Negro ever admitted to the University of Oklahoma Law School, but he is required to sit in a corridor outside the classroom door during lectures and otherwise to use the facilities on a segregated basis. He is challenging this practice as unconstitutional.

Other Cases Affected

SEVERAL other cases which have not yet reached the Supreme Court may stand or fall on the court's ruling in these three. Included are the recent cases in which the Court of Appeals here upheld the District's segregated schools by a 2-to-1 decision and a suit challenging the segregation practices of the District Recreation Board.

Similar cases being litigated in the States likewise are dependent on the outcome of Henderson-Sweatt-McLaurin. Even if "separate but equal" should be struck down, further years of litigation are in prospect, not to mention possible congressional and State legislation.

The Justice Department has entered each of the three cases as a "friend of the court" to support the Negroes. In the Henderson case, Alabama's Representative Sam Hobbs has been granted permission to argue the Southerners' case, something he was asked to do by several of his Southern colleagues on the House Judiciary Committee. Numerous groups have submitted, or have sought to submit, briefs as "friends of the court" in all three cases.

Extent Is Disputed

THE Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution ended human slavery. This amendment was aimed at the Federal Government, the States and private persons as well—it was all-embracing.

The Fourteenth Amendment, which contains the famous "due process" clause, was aimed at the State governments and their local governmental offspring. It attempted to extend to the Negro the rights of the whites. But the scope of that action (including the intent of those who drafted and passed on it) are matters of dispute, including the disputes before the court this week.

The Fourteenth Amendment says in part: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

This amendment became part of the Constitution in 1868. Before and after its enactment, Congress passed a number of civil rights acts, the last of which (1875) declared that all persons should be "entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the accommodation, advantages, facilities and privileges of inns, public conveyances . . . theaters and other places of public amusement . . ." The Senate version of this measure included schools but the House substitute did not.

One authority has written that these statutes "created a new concept of equality: that in the absence of slavery, no man should be subject to the incidents of slavery; that when the reality or substance of slavery is gone, its visible form or appearance should not be seen. The legislation was probably the first attempt in the history of mankind to destroy the branches of slavery after its root had been destroyed."

A Famous Dissent

BUT in 1883 the Supreme Court struck down most of these laws as unconstitutional on the ground that the Fourteenth Amendment was prohibitory only on the States and that the invasion of an individual's rights by another individual was not covered. In a much quoted dissent, Justice Harlan said:

"I cannot resist the conclusion that the substance and spirit of the recent amendments . . . have been sacrificed by a subtle and ingenious verbal criticism."

He noted that the court had approved the 1793 fugitive slave laws, directed against individuals. Then Harlan asked:

"Was it the purpose of the Nation simply to destroy the institution (slavery) and then remit the race . . . to the several States for such protection, in their civil rights . . . as those States, in their discretion, might choose to provide?"

The justice's question is difficult to answer, for no piece of legislation is more contested, and its origin more clouded, than the Fourteenth Amendment. Both sides in the present cases have pointed to the record to prove that the intent of the drafters was on their side of the "separate but equal" argument.

A book has been written on the origins of the amendment, in fact. One of its conclusions is that Congress intended "to make the Bill of Rights binding upon, or applicable to, the States." The book, written in 1908 and frequently quoted by the court, also concludes that it is "quite evident" the amendment was intended to confer on Congress power "to determine what were the privileges and immunities of citizens, thereby being enabled to secure equal privileges and immunities in hotels, theaters, schools" and so forth.

Only Political Equality

IN 1896 the court, in the Plessy case, upheld segregated railroad facilities. The majority held that the Fourteenth Amendment's object "was undoubtedly to enforce the absolute equality of the races before the law, but in the nature of things it could not have been intended to abolish distinctions based upon color or to enforce social, as distinguished from political, equality or a comingling of the two races upon terms satisfactory to either."

It is this decision that the Truman Administration is now attacking before the court as a "Constitutional anachronism which no longer deserves a place in our law.", The Government points to the same Justice Harlan's dissent in Plessy:

"We boast of the freedom enjoyed by our people above all other peoples. But it is difficult to reconcile that boast with a state of the law which, practically, puts the brand of servitude and degredation upon a large class of our fellow citizens, our equals before the law.

"The thin disguise of 'equal' accommodations for passengers in railroad coaches will not mislead anyone, nor atone for the wrong this day done."

Texas and Oklahoma—and they are supported by a brief filed by the other Southern States—contend that Congress never intended, in passing the amendment, to prohibit "separate but equal" facilities. The Texas brief says that "Congress itself maintained separate schools before, during and after the adoption of the amendment."

D. C. System Involved

HERE Texas is referring to the District's Negro schools, set up by an 1862 law. Texas considers it "convincing proof" of congressional intent at the time the amendment was adopted, that Congress passed an act consolidating the administration of the Negro and white school systems here under a single Board of Education.

Texas also contends that the right to go to school is not a civil right and never was; that it is a privilege.

The Texas position is that Congress intended to let each State decide "whether it was best for the education of the children of the State that white and Negro students should be taught in the same classroom or in separate buildings with equal facilities for all."

The court's insistence in recent years on separate facilities being equal has resulted in millions of dollars' worth of improvements to Negro school systems. But figures still show that separate facilities are generally not equal.

THE Constitution of the United States is an expression of the balance of powers between the Federal Government and the States in a federal system of union. Back in 1873, the court split 5-to-4 in a case in which the majority held that the Fourteenth Amendment was no transfer from the States to the Federal Government of the security and protection of civil rights; that fundamentally, civil rights are granted by the States, not the United States.

In this day of centralized power, the United States is in many ways an anomaly, even an anachronism, with its Federal system. Now the Supreme Court is asked to determine that system's flexibility to meet the problems of today.

In that 1873 case, a dissenting opinion by Justice Bradley expressed some of today's feeling. He described the Fourteenth Amendment as "an attempt to give voice to the strong national yearning for that time and that condition of things, in which American citizenship should be a sure guaranty of safety and in which every citizen of the United States might stand erect in every portion of its soil, in the full enjoyment of every right and privilege belonging to a freeman, without fear of violence or molestation."

The biggest question of the 1949-50 Supreme Court term is whether the justices will agree.

Colonial Store Fronts

Georgetown Envisions M St. 'Williamsburg'

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

GEORGETOWN is like an old lady who has had her face lifted and then suddenly realizes she prefers to grow old gracefully, even if it means admitting her age.

The town, which antedates the District of Columbia by at least 50 years, succumbed briefly to the modern apartment house influence in its residential area before the citizenry clamped down and made a stand for the old town houses of early Georgetown.

And now the business area, which has blossomed out in neonery, glass brickery and prefabricated store fronts, is facing an assault by determined groups which want to see Wisconsin ave. and M st. restored to their Colonial simplicity.

First move in this fight will be in Congress, and over a single M st. house.

Only Legends

IF you have ever toured Georgetown, you must have wondered about the little yellow stone house which stands at 3051 M st. nw. A plaque on the front says it was "George Washington's Engineering Headquarters."

There are no authentic records to prove this, or any of the other "history" the little house is supposed to have.. Rumors are that Pierre L'Enfant may there have laid out his plan for the Federal City; that General Braddock may have used the house for his headquarters.

John Nolen, jr., planning director for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, says the house probably is the earliest example of the "home of the common man" that this area has, and for that reason alone is worth preserving.

Probability is that the house was never more historically prominent than it is today. Certainly, however, it is one of the oldest houses in this area, and a Georgetown landmark.

Moving Opposed

TO members of the Progressive and Georgetown Citizens Associations, the little stone house has still another significance: it is the last house left on the Georgetown business part of M st. that looks anything like it did nearly 200 years ago.

Members of both associations were thrown into a frenzy of activity when they were approached by Sam and Lew Levy (not related) both Georgetown businessmen, who represent seven heirs who own the property. The Levys explained that they would be receptive to an offer by the associations to move the house off 3051 M st., since the ground is valuable for commercial purposes.

But association members want the stone house where it is, and they lost no time in going to the Hill to gain their point.

Right now, identical bills (S. 3232 and H. R. 7722) to save the structure are pending in both houses of Congress. These bills would provide for Federal purchase of the Old Stone House and its preservation as a part of the National Capital Parks system.

The bills provide that the property be "renovated, stabilized, maintained and preserved as one of the outstanding remaining examples in the City of Washington of eighteenth century architecture."

Far-Reaching Plans

IF Georgetownites are successful in getting the Old Stone House preserved, they will use the victory as an opening wedge in a campaign which they hope eventually will lead to a Georgetown business district which out-Williamsburgs Williamsburg.

As Horace Peaslee, Washington architect, puts it, the plan would change M st. from a "third rate store district into a first rate shopping district."

Peaslee, who has long been interested in the simplicity of old Georgetown, believes that restoring the town's business houses to Colonial period may be a lot cheaper for businessmen than installing prefabricated store fronts.

He cites as examples of what could be done there two business houses on Connecticut ave.—Colony House and Franklin Simon, near the Bureau of Standards.

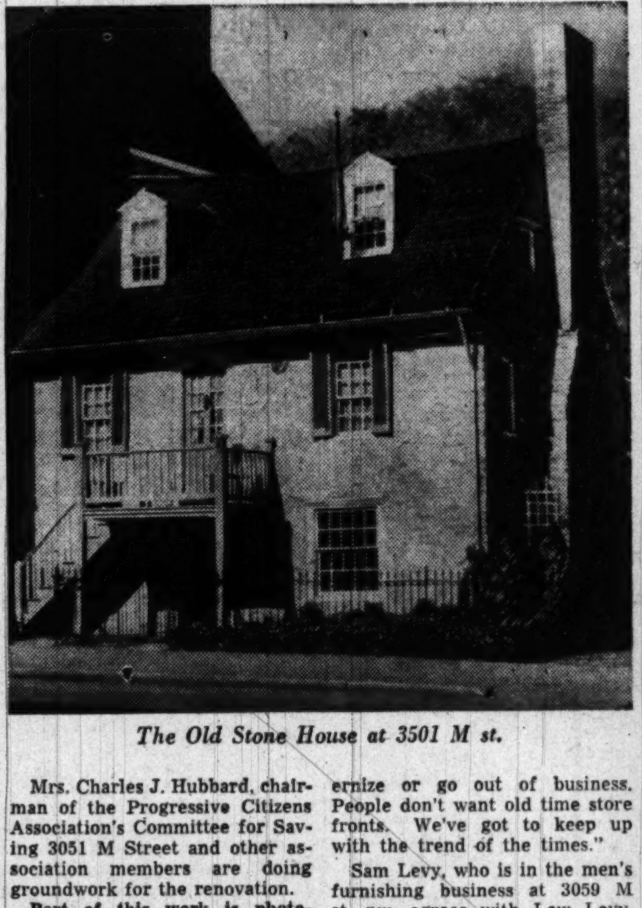
"Those are two buildings in the traditional character. They try to create an atmosphere that Georgetown already has."

Peaslee believes the transformation to Colonial times can be accomplished largely by paint and cleanup work on the upper brick facades of the old buildings there.

For store fronts themselves, he thinks the change would be in substituting eighteenth century materials, such as brick and Colonial design, for large sections of plate glass, neon lights and garish advertisements.

Legislative Backstop

THE GEORGETOWN restorers hope to be aided by the Wadsworth bill, introduced last month, which would require that all plans for changing, reconstructing or razing any building of historic interest within the Old Georgetown district be approved by the Fine Arts Commission.



The Old Stone House at 3501 M st.

Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, chairman of the Progressive Citizens Association's Committee for Saving 3051 M Street and other association members are doing groundwork for the renovation.

Part of this work is photographing the old building along M st. and Wisconsin ave. for interested architects, who will sketch the changes necessary to restore the structures. Mrs. Hubbard estimates this work will be completed by fall.

Mrs. Hubbard and her coworkers feel that, with the changes, Georgetown merchants could look forward to increased trade from persons interested in the picturesque; that branches of fashionable downtown stores might be established along M st. and Wisconsin ave.

Changing Times

HOW do the Georgetown merchants themselves feel about all this? The Levys are a sample.

Lew Levy, who runs Lew's Liquor Shoppe at 3249 M st. nw., declares, "I like Georgetown the way it is in the residential district. But the stores must modernize or go out of business. People don't want old time store fronts. We've got to keep up with the trend of the times."

Sam Levy, who is in the men's furnishing business at 3059 M st. nw, agrees with Lew Levy, but goes a bit further:

"There are too many old timers in the business district who won't see things that way. But I'd be willing to go along with what the majority want to do."

He believes there are too many old businesses whose owners "don't need too large an income" and are satisfied with what they get.

But, said Sam Levy, if a substantial firm did move into the old business district and did adopt the Colonial storefront—"Oh yes, if somebody started it, the rest of us would go along . . . We'd have to."

"We know," said Mrs. Hubbard, "that we have a huge selling job to do. But if we can save the Old Stone House, it will give us more time to demonstrate to Georgetown merchants just how they can be helped instead of hurt by the plan."

Virginia Apple-Raising Slumps

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

APPLE raising, for which Virginia has been famous for centuries, is on the decline in the Old Dominion, a joint survey by State and Federal agriculture authorities reveals.

The number of apple trees, about 2,700,000, is 35 percent less and the number of orchards has dropped 45 percent since a similar survey in 1937. This indicates that apple raising is now "big business," the smaller orchards proving uneconomical.

"Another reason for the drop," the survey states, "is the fact that when the 1937 survey was made, 63 percent of the apple trees had been planted prior to 1919. Many of these old trees have now died or are no longer profitable."

There has also been a shift in the areas growing apples. "The Northern Valley counties show a drop of about 25 percent in trees, while the Piedmont shows a drop of 46 percent and the Southern Valley a decline of 50 percent."

Frederick is still the leading apple county, Nelson is second, Augusta third, Clark and Albemarle tied for fourth and Rappahannock next.

The number of peach trees dropped about 15 percent to around a million. The number of peach orchards is about 25 percent less than in 1937. Leading peach counties in order of rank are Albemarle, Nelson, Frederick, Rockingham and Botetourt.

There are now 2200 Displaced Persons in Virginia, the Federal DP Commission reports. The State DP Committee has settled 120 families or 400 individuals on Virginia farms. The other 1600 have been settled by voluntary agencies.

Brannan Plan Rift

THE POWERFUL Ohio Farm Bureau may break with the National Farm Bureau Federation over the question of the Brannan Plan, flexible price supports, etc.

Last week the Ohio group asked its 63,000 members to vote on the various farm plans. Observers took this to mean that National President Allan B. Kline is losing his grip on the Buckeye members. Kline has been the bitterest critic of the Administration's farm proposal.

In announcing the vote, the Ohio bureau reported:

"There was agreement among the board members that the heart of the farm problem lies with what to do with actual and potential surplus farm production.

"A study of both the price support method now in use, and the production payment plan now advocated by some, brought forth the conclusion that 'we must have a combination of price supports and production payments for any farm program to work efficiently and economically.'"

The statement also indicates that the Ohio bureau doesn't agree with the national leadership on a sliding scale of price supports

"We believe that farm income should be 100 percent of parity," the board stated. "Farmers should strive to attain this objective through individual and collective efforts to the extent consistent with the general welfare."

Townsend Plan Skeleton Is Rattling

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

DON'T LOOK NOW, but here comes that man again.

We mean 83-year-old Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the original pension peddler, who was all but outmoded by bigger and better "ham and eggs" plans.

Now the old doc is back, by proxy at least, doing business on Capitol Hill.

House Democratic leaders couldn't believe it either until they took a peek at the Townsend Plan "discharge" petition on the House rostrum.

Last week it had 194 signatures—just 24 short of the 218 majority necessary to force the Townsend Plan to a House vote.

In other words, if just two dozen more members step up and sign, Congress, which turns strange somersaults in an election year, will be voting again on a nostrum far older than the Truman "Fair Deal."

Eleven years ago, fewer names on a Townsend petition scared the House Ways and Means Committee into swift action. Before the petition could be signed up, they rushed the plan to the floor with an unfavorable report, succeeded in voting it down.

But last week the news that the old doc was back, and within striking distance of a vote, hardly stirred a ripple.

Through half a dozen Congresses, Administration stategists have developed a more effective means of coping with the doc.

As new names go on the top of his petition, old names strangely drop off the bottom. Some party regulars who sign, to add another string to their political bow, are gently "persuaded" to withdraw.

To date, leaders haven't been sufficiently alarmed to even try to "persuade" in earnest. Only one of the original signatures has disappeared. But if the petition climbs high over 200, look out for the leadership to move in.

Even the most ardent of the Capitol's Townsendites privately concede the bill can never clear both Houses. Their chief hope is to get the plan through the House and messaged to the Senate. There they would try to use it as a lever to jack up old age payments in the House-passed Social Security bill, now before the Senate Finance Committee.

In its present dress, the Townsend Plan provides for a 3 percent tax on gross income. In lieu of the old "$200 a month" scheme Townsend used to market, the present plan is completely silent on amounts.

The idea is that the Treasury Secretary would count up the "take" from the tax, and prorate it among the pensioners. If the Townsendites' private estimates are correct, the pensions would amount to around $100 a month.

Catch is that the "take" would be divided among so many eligibles that the gleanings would spread thin. Not only would every retired person over 60 be eligible, but every widow with dependents could collect. Any person between 18 and 60 who had been disabled for six months or more, could qualify, too.

But the lure has lost little of its political magic with the old folks in an election year. If congressional "persuasion" fails, you may hear more about it soon.

79th All Over Again

TO CAPITOL Administration forces, it's a case of "all this and Doc Townsend, too," for never have Administration legislative prospects looked bleaker.

With a coalition roadblock ahead of every Fair Deal measure, and nothing of any consequence on the books, this Congress is beginning to take on the pattern of Truman's first—the Seventy-ninth.

That was the Congress that pulled the plugs out of OPA price controls and stymied every other Truman postwar domestic move. The Seventy-ninth's performance was followed by the 1946 off-year elections and the first Democratic congressional upset in 14 years.

Whatever happens to the Truman program, Democrats don't look for a 1946 repeat. In fact, they expect the dissident resurgence on Capitol Hill to react in the Administration's favor at the polls. Still, they're feeling mightly low.

Politicos on both sides of the aisle, incidentally, are predicting the "dirtiest" campaign since 1928.

Grandma Was Nimble

IF THE GRANDMOTHER of Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) were alive today, she would certainly have to register under the National Lobbying Act. For last week she influenced legislation on the Senate floor.

Johnson's grandmother came into the discussion when Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) offered an amendment to the natural gas bill. The amendment sought to empower the FPC to regulate independent gas producers whenever it found evidence of price-fixing.

Johnson opposed the amendment. He said it was too technical.

"My grandmother," he said, "told me to beware of amendments offered on the floor at the time a bill is about to be voted upon." O'Mahoney asked why he thought it was technical. "My grandmother," said Johnson, "told me to be careful about questions that lawyers ask."

The amendment was defeated. Up popped Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) with another. He said his amendment was simpler than O'Mahoney's but accomplished the same thing.

This time Johnson argued that any gas bill amendment had to be technical.

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) was puzzled. "Would Johnson's grandmother favor Mundt's amendment," he asked.

"I'm afraid to say she would," replied Johnson.

The Senate clerk called the roll. The amendment was defeated. Johnson's grandmother had scored again.

Demoted

WHITE HOUSE intimates vouch for the story that President Truman received a letter from an Eastern potentate with this flowery salutation:

"Your magnificence:"

Apparently the President's reply didn't please, for months later Mr. Truman received another letter from the same gentleman.

It began:

"Dear Sir:"

Galloway at Bay

DR. GEORGE B. GALLOWAY, staff director of the 1946 LaFollette-Monroney committee which tried to streamline Congress, last week was held to the letter of his own recommendations.

Now senior specialist in American Government for the Library of Congress, Galloway was one of the experts invited to appear before the House special committee investigating lobby activities.

Long ago, Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) determined to follow the time-saving procedures recommended in the LaFollette-Monroney report, which Galloway helped write. He decided to test the procedure on Galloway at the initial lobby hearings.

The LaFollette-Monroney Act specialist was duly notified to submit a prepared statement in advance so it could be digested by the committee and thus avoid "tedious oral repetition of written testimony."

The quoted words were Galloway's own, lifted from the reorganization report.

In a footnote to his letter, Buchanan rubbed it in.

"Not," he said, "that I believe your testimony would be tedious—I am just quoting from the report."

Reorganization Expert Galloway, now become its victim, submitted his statement three days in advance, skimmed rapidly through it on the witness stand.

Buchanan says he passed the test.

Capital Joke

CONGRESSIONAL "regulars" have a new name for the legislative commuters who spend their midweeks in Washington but long weekends out of town.

They call them "TWT's."

In cloakroom lingo, that means:

"In on Tuesday, here on Wednesday, out on Thursday."

ECA Asking a Lot of Europe

this fence. The Union will act as a clearinghouse for the nations of western Europe in settling their debts with each other and also, to some extent, as a bank to finance a deficit country—so long as that country is making every effort to put its financial house in order and increase exports to its neighbors.

Henceforth, each country will receive a pro rata allotment of Marshall Plan funds based on the previous divisions of aid.

We plan to withhold at the start not less than 600 million dollars from the total 1950-51 ECA appropriation, which can be available to the Payments Union to encourage the program of liberalized trade. Only as an effective Payments Union is put into operation will the full amount of the 1950-51 appropriation be made available to all the participating countries.

The United States is asking a great deal of western Europe. The steps we are asking amount to forcing in 25 months a process which might normally take 25 years. But I am not discouraged because I believe that the job can be done and is beginning to be done.

Meanwhile, there are some adjustments we shall have to make ourselves.

In financial terms, it was the "dollar gap" which was Europe's trouble in 1947, when Gen. George C. Marshall first proposed the plan which bears his name. Europe simply didn't have the dollars to buy the essential things she needed for survival, and she had no way to earn those dollars.

The dollar gap between Europe and America has been narrowed from about 7.5 billion dollars in 1947 to some four billion dollars in 1949-50.

The dollar gap actually has a long history, and unless we take steps on our side of the water, it may persist after June 30, 1952, with results very damaging to the cause of freedom. In every single year from 1914 to the present, part of western Europe's trade with the United States has been "on the cuff."

We have sold more abroad than we bought in return, and the American taxpayers have paid for most of the difference through a long series of peacetime loans and grants amounting to some 52 billion dollars.

I don't think the dollar gap can be completely closed by June 30, 1952, but I believe that with strenuous efforts in Europe, and if Americans are willing to take more imports, we can reduce it to manageable proportions.

Most of the gap can be closed with non-competitive goods and services—American tourist travel to Europe, materials for national defense, noncompetitive luxuries which enrich our own lives. Yet there will have to be some competitive imports if we are going to close the gap.

Perhaps by 1953 Europe will be in a position to sell us close to a billion and a quarter dollars' worth of goods competitive with our own.

Accepting these imports—which will be only a drop in the bucket compared with our own production in this country—will be essential to our strategy for total victory. By enabling a strong, united Europe to earn dollars to pay for what she buys, we can help Europeans raise their own living standards. Thereby we can defeat communism on its home and neighboring grounds.

In buying more from free Europe, we strengthen ourselves—and eventually reduce and eliminate the need for our staggering load of armaments.

If we are willing to lead the world along the better way of expanding living standards and free institutions, we can end the threat of communism.

Slavery behind the Iron Curtain must eventually break down as democracy in free Europe proves its greater benefits to the average man. If we are determined and unafraid, we can answer our questions about the hazardous future after June 30, 1952.

Why are the Republicans dragging their feet on the home-rule discharge petition? That question is being asked with increasing frequency not only in Washington but also out in the States where a good deal of interest in the fight for home rule in the District has been aroused. For example, it was asked recently in an informed and sympathetic editorial in the Boston Herald. Calling attention to the fact that the bill has been blocked by "a handful of Southern Bourbons" who "just can't swallow democracy even in the Nation's Capital," the Herald went on to say:

> But Republicans also share responsibility to some extent. Massachusetts' Representative John F. Kennedy, a Democrat, has filed a discharge petition for which he has now obtained 170 [since increased to 177] signatures. But 218 are needed. If the Republicans, who are the original authors of the home-rule movement for Washington, would throw their whole weight behind Mr. Kennedy's petition, it would go over with a rush.
> Republicans are committed to the home-rule principle by their 1948 platform. The reform is in keeping with the whole Republican tradition. Let's not drop the ball on this one. Our D. C. fellow citizens deserve a break. And so does the reputation of the Republican Party.

There are, to be sure, some stalwart Republicans on the list of those who have signed the discharge petition. Among them are Representatives Herter of Massachusetts and Leo E. Allen of Illinois. But the Republican signatures total only 50. Out of a total membership of 170 that is a poor showing. The name of Representative Martin, the minority leader, is especially conspicuous in its absence. A reasonable presumption is that the Boston Herald was addressing its suggestion to the head of the Republican Party in the House, who happens to be from Massachusetts. Mr. Martin is not averse to signing discharge petitions when he thinks a vital issue is at stake. It seems to us that he owes his party an obligation to assume leadership in carrying out the Republican platform on home rule.

Of course, the home-rule bill is not a partisan issue. The chief steam behind it came from Senator Kefauver, a Democrat, in the Senate and from Representative Auchincloss, a Republican, in the House. It has been indorsed by both political parties. But it is obvious that the Republicans will have to make a better showing than they have made to date on the discharge petition if they are to redeem their campaign pledge. Surely the Republicans would not wish to give the country the impression that they are in league with the reactionary clique from the South that is trying to prevent a vote on this urgent, reasonable and progressive measure!

Producers vs. Consumers

A good many Senators found themselves in strange company last week when they cast their votes on the Kerr bill exempting so-called independent natural-gas producers from Federal Power Commission regulation. The result, according to Senator Douglas, would be to exempt from Federal regulation 70 per cent of all gas that will be sold for interstate transportation in 1952, thereby depriving natural-gas consumers of effective protection against increases in natural-gas rates.

Nevertheless, Democratic Senators from Southwestern producing States, who supported the Kerr bill, suddenly discovered that Federal regulation of the independent gas producers, many of whom are large and flourishing companies, constituted a threat to free enterprise. Some Republicans, on the other hand, who habitually view with alarm any attempt to strengthen the regulatory authority of the Federal Government, experienced an equally surprising change of heart, protesting that the Kerr bill would deprive the consumers of their own States of needed regulatory protection against price gouging. Senator Ferguson, for instance, said that while he had "great sympathy with those who are opposed to Federal regulation . . . there does come a time when Federal regulation is essential." And he added that "if the people of Michigan are to have a voice in regard to the price they shall pay for gas, their voice must be heard in establishing the price where the gas is produced."

It would be unfair to many Senators, Democrats and Republicans alike, to claim that their votes were influenced by a desire to curry favor with their constituents. But the fact that Senators from the gas and oil producing States lined up to vote for the Kerr bill, while certain Republican stalwarts from States where consumer interests were dominant voted against it, indicates that a good many Senators were more disposed to curry favor with their constituents than to vote their convictions. The end result was a narrow victory for the gas and oil interests, with 28 Democrats and 16 Republicans voting against it.

By an even narrower vote the House, which had passed the bill last fall, approved the amended Senate measure on Friday. Again the vote cut across party lines, with spokesmen for consumers arrayed against representatives from the oil and gas producing States, including Speaker Rayburn, whose intervention probably saved the bill from defeat. In the House, however, a majority of the Republicans voted for the Kerr bill while a majority of the Democrats voted against it. However, we see no particular significance in these bipartisan alignments apart from the fact that they show what is already a matter of common knowledge, that senatorial votes are influenced by sectional considerations and often result in approval of legislation not in the national interest.

The Steel Report

When the Joint Committee on the Economic Report started its investigation of steel price increases, The Washington Post pointed out that the most significant aspect of the inquiry was the fact that the industry had been called upon to defend its pricing policies before a congressional committee. Under our system of free enterprise the man who has something to sell, whether he is the head of a giant steel company or an obscure shopkeeper, is free to charge any price he chooses for his goods in an open competitive market. That, of course, raises the question as to whether steel prices are really competitive.

All the Democratic members of the investigating committee concluded that the industry was able to raise prices last December only because competitive conditions were lacking. All the Republican members agreed that there was no direct evidence of lack of competition. However, the major dispute between the majority and minority members of the committee grows out of the character of the recommendations contained in the majority report. The Republicans maintain that if their colleagues are convinced that there is monopoly or restraint of trade in the steel industry, the remedy lies in prosecution under the Sherman law. Instead, the majority report recommends: (1) that information on prices, output, costs, and profits of the major steel producers be systematically collected by the FTC and kept currently available for use by Congress; (2) that steel producers be required to file with a Federal agency schedules of proposed price increases; that hearings be held to determine the reasons for the general economic effects of such increases. Industry-wide price increases would then be deferred for a stated period, possibly 30 days, following company announcements; (3) it is further recommended that the committee study the "means whereby a greater degree of competition within the industry may be achieved"; (4) that the committee also "examine the extent to which the steel industry has developed technological and economic similarity to public utilities and has acquired such strategic importance in war, peace, and in the maintenance of high-level employment as to become uniquely affected with a public interest, in order to determine what, if any, legislation should be adopted for the preservation of competition."

The minority report states—in our opinion quite rightly—that these recommendations betray a bias in favor of Government regulation of steel prices, and imply that the steel industry should be subjected to price fixing in the same way as public utilities. The Republicans also point out, quite pertinently, that other industries such as coal, petroleum and automobile manufacturing, are just as large, or even larger, than the steel industry and just as indispensable. The committee recommendations would, if accepted, be a long step in the direction of nationalization of the steel industry. And since the pricing policies of other basic industries have a profound effect on the national economy, we could not logically stop there; the next step would be extension of Government controls to various industries affected with a public interest. The end result would be state socialism, arrived at by indirection.

McCarthy's 'Evidence'

The "evidence" furnished by Senator McCarthy in support of his accusations boils down on examination to additional accusations. How does he know that Owen Lattimore is a Soviet agent? Somebody, unidentified of course, told him so—or told him, at least, that he had information to this effect from someone else, also unidentified. The whole of his long harangue to the Senate on Thursday is so fuzzy, so founded on imputation of guilt by association and so dependent on undisclosed affidavits by anonymous sources of unknown reliability that there is nothing for one to take hold of.

The Senator said, for exampe, "I also have the name of a witness which I am turning over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This witness has been used by the Justice Department as a Government witness in another matter . . . He will testify that Owen Lattimore was known to him to be a member of the Communist Party, a member over whom they had disciplinary powers." It would seem a fair presumption that the FBI already has the testimony of this witness, has investigated it and has found it to be erroneous. It is precisely because of the danger that disproved allegations would be misused in this way that the Director of the FBI has been unwilling to make the raw material in his files available to congressional investigators.

Mr. McCarthy has another document from an anonymous source asserting that Mr. Lattimore was "very obviously receiving instructions from the Soviet government concerning the line which the Institute of Pacific Relations ought to follow." This informant, said the Senator, "gave his consent to his name and this statement being given to the FBI . . . We had to promise, him, however, that his name would not be given to the committee." But Mr. McCarthy wants to force the FBI, by subpena, to turn over to the committee its entire confidential file on Mr. Lattimore in which the name of this informant would, of course, be included!

Without knowledge of the sources of the Senator's information, without anything more, indeed, than his own vague paraphrasing of the nature of the information, how can reasonable men accord it any weight against the tremendous mass of candid testimony by known persons of the highest repute in support of Mr. Lattimore's integrity and loyalty? What the Senator has offered is a very far cry from the promise he made to the Foreign Relations Subcommittee that he would "check all the information, document it, and give it to you." The information remains unchecked, undocumented and unavailable. If Attorney General McGrath is our guide, the Senator's "documents" "have fizzled so far as producing any spies" is concerned.

Bipartisanship

The President's response to Senator Vandenberg's plea for the renewal and strengthening of the "unpartisan" approach to foreign affairs is encouraging. Bipartisanship cannot be created without continuous collaboration at the take-off as well as at the crash landings, to borrow Mr. Stassen's phraseology. That means that occasionally the Republicans should be represented during conferences where policy on the spot has to be formulated. This the President has recognized. He has appointed former Senator John Sherman Cooper as top Republican consultant at the forthcoming Foreign Ministers' Conferences. The choice has been applauded by John Foster Dulles, who formerly held this position, and it is to be hoped that the Republican Senators will be equally approving.

Mr. Cooper has not the experience or the expertness of Mr. Dulles. But he is no novice, having been one of the American delegates at the last Assembly of the United Nations. There he made a very good impression. His seriousness of purpose, his abilities, his enlightened attitude, his sense of what might be called independent cooperation—all got favorable comment. This was no surprise to those who know Mr. Cooper. While he was in the Senate, he saw the need for a foreign economic program long before most of his colleagues, and a speech of his could almost be said to have anticipated the Marshall Plan. That he was defeated in his second senatorial bid in Kentucky occasioned widespread regret in the Capital. A big vote turned out for him, and he ran way ahead of his ticket, but the vote was not big enough to bring him back to the Capitol. That Mr. Cooper was not lost to public service is occasion for satisfaction to Democrat and Republican alike. Mr. Cooper will do well for America as a person, let alone as a symbol of American solidarity in a world given increasingly to doubts on that score.

Everybody's Census

As the vast undertaking of counting an estimated 151,000,000 persons in the United States gets under way, there is a temptation to assume that its accuracy will depend upon the 140,000 enumerators. Even more important, we suspect, will be your own cooperation when you are questioned about your age, job, ancestry, education and so forth. Indeed, this most ambitious census-taking venture in our history is, as Census Director Peel has called it, a "democratic self-appraisal." The enumerators who call on you will act only as interrogators and recording agents. The information that will actually go into the records will come from you and your neighbors all over the land.

Your census-taker will carry an identification card so that you need not be nervous about trusting him or her. Since he will have a good many questions to ask, he should obviously be invited to come inside and should be given a place where he can record your answers promptly. His questions will be specific and will call for simple answers. Long explanations are neither necessary nor desirable. Every fifth person will be asked how much he earned last year and how much he received from interest, dividends, pensions, veterans, allowances and rents. Of course, the enumerator should be given factual information and not mere guesses. It is desirable for every family to have such figures on hand, although the income questions can be answered on a special card that can be mailed directly to Washington if that is preferred.

The census taker will have plenty of trouble trying to find everyone that he is supposed to count. His problem would be greatly complicated if you should take the attitude that the census is a bureaucratic invasion of privacy. The information thus collected will be valuable not only to your Government but also to your business, profession or industry and to a vast number of civic and educational agencies. When the census-taker rings your doorbell, therefore, it would be well to remember that it is your census, too.

Exhaustible Resources

One extremely serious effect of the farm surpluses, aside from the shameful waste and folly involved in their disposal, is the impression created even among those high in the Nation's affairs (as evidenced by the proposals to dispose of the overproducion by such means as the Marshall Plan, a two-piece system, increased industrial use etc.) that we are drawing these surpluses from an inexhaustible source.

Nothing could be more misleading. Even before the use of mechanical power became general in farming, and when our population was very much smaller, the annual loss of topsoil from our lands was appalling. Under present-day intensive culture and with the enormously increased use of lime and fertilizer on tilled ground, which is largely responsible for the excess production, the drain on the humus content of our soils is so enormous that according to the qualified students of our soil resources we are less than a short generation away from having to seek part of our food and fiber in other parts of the world ourselves.

Orthodox Views

It seems to me that all radicals, homosexuals, whisky drinkers, drug addicts and gamblers should be excluded from responsible positions in the executive or legislative branches of the Government, because they are poor security risks in these dangerous times.

Why would it not be a good plan to require all applicants for Government positions to answer a series of questions which would indicate whether they were orthodox in their views on politics, religion, economics, ethics, morals and racial relationships?

These questions could be worded in such a way that the person taking the test would be led into exposing his real character. In addition a lie detecting machine could be used to make sure that they were answering the questions truthfully.

Upon the degree of orthodoxy, as proven by these examinations, would depend the applicants fitness for the job. General intelligence, knowledge and experience should be considered only of secondary importance. Why? Because in these days when the world is being divided between the sheep and the goats regularity is more important than brains.

Teacher Sick Leave

Recently introduced in the Senate and House of Representatives are identical bills (S. 2930, H. R. 7437) which make changes in the Sick and Emergency Leave Act of 1949 for District of Columbia public school teachers. Local 27 of the American Federation of Teachers together with other AFT locals in this city strongly supports this proposed legislation because it will provide security for the teacher and thus in turn redound to the benefit of school children.

The chief provision in the bill makes it possible for a teacher who has exhausted his leave with full pay to be absent an additional period of time at his own expense by his paying the substitute's fee. The superintendent of schools, although supporting many of the provisions, has indicated his opposition to the above because it would be possible for a teacher to be absent for as many as 130 days in a school year. This, he believes, is excessive.

Local 27 points out that to talk of the 130-day leave as occurring within a period of one year is to imply that a teacher might get 130 days the next year, or successive years. Under terms of the legislation and the amendment such is impossible because the teacher can accumulate only 10 days each year with a maximum of 60 days accumulation. (The remainder of the "130 days" comes from the leave with the substitute.) Thus only once in six or seven years would a teacher be eligible to take 130 days leave.

Wherry And McCarthy

Just a year ago, The Washington Post's cartoonist Herblock regaled readers with a sketch of a mortician, in high hat and black ribbon, shovel in hand, running back to pick up a hapless victim that the undertaker's vehicle had run down and killed on the sidewalk. The victim was designated "Civil Rights." The caption ran, "Tsk, Tsk! Another Suicide!" while the driver with the hat bore the features of one like unto Senator Wherry.

Perhaps only a few take great notice of Mr. Wherry any time. But today (in a recurring eruption) he is out with his "wagon and shovel" again, in a defamation of the Secretary of State. Here his attack sinks from something picturable as comedy to national and international tragedy. With nothing against Secretary Acheson but a McCarthy slur and nothing to support the slur but a political scream, we are wondering how long the everyday American, in an honest effort to make a democracy that goes, is to be forced to wait by and bear with all this slander.

Possibly there is some comfort in a sort of "I told you so!" for any observer could foretell that when voters let out a Senator like aged and wise George W. Norris and let in a breast-thumping Wherry, or pass up a LaFollette and take on a McCarthy, the kick-back is inevitable.

Stoffberg's Car

In your March 25 issue a story related that in the minutes of the D. C. Commissioners it was approved that Mr. Charles Stoffberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young was to be granted permission to use a District-owned automobile in transporting him back and forth from Edgewater Beach, Md., to his office in the District building. The reason being given, that in any great emergency, three-alarm fires, etc, he could "represent" the city head.

Now, in all common sense, I ask you, what good is Mr. Stoffberg going to do to rush madly up from his beach home on some icy night to get to a big fire? He is 22 miles away from town. How long has Mr. Stoffberg had this District-owned vehicle, for which the upkeep is paid by D. C. taxpayers? How many times has he come up from his beach place on an emergency? How many other quasi-officials in the District government have city-owned cars to galivant around in?

Health Plan Origin

The March 22 letter of Michael M. Davis explains the most baffling political mystery of our times: From whence came President Truman's weird compulsory health insurance scheme?

Mr. Davis explains: Dear old tax-spend-and-elect Harry Hopkins and another social theorist who had never practiced medicine gestated this un-American monster.

As a political realist, Mr. Truman consults organized labor on policies affecting workers. He does not repudiate collective bargaining because some John L. Lewis gets in his hair. Yet he allows minorities like the Davis Committee for the Nation's Health to dictate a repugnant health plan to this Nation's doctor-workers.

The Davis letter proves Mr. Truman inherited his health insurance liability along with Mr. Wallace. And what Mr. Truman did to Henry Wallace paid political dividends. He could kick another scoring goal if he aimed his foot in the right place. The Davis letter tells where.

Child Adoption Procedures

Malvina Lindsay referred in her column of March 9 to the article "Why You Can't Adopt A Baby" in the Woman's Home Companion. The thesis of the article is that Minnesota alone accepts as placeable not only normal healthy children, but all children legally available for adoption. In appearing to agree with the author, perhaps inadvertently, Miss Lindsay has done a disservice to a public which highly respects her point of view. As certain Minnesota agencies have attested since the article was published, their efforts and successes are neither new or unique; they are being practiced by many agencies throughout the country. This has been strongly confirmed by the Child Welfare League of America.

The people of the District are entitled to know that their local Child Welfare Division's adoption service, which makes approximately half of the adoption placements here, uses similar methods to those described as exclusive with Minnesota. In addition to normal infants, successful placements of school-age children and handicapped children are frequently made. The latter includes children with crossed eyes, birthmarks, allergies, and various crippling conditions. Children apparently below average in intelligence are not considered unplaceable because they often improve when they feel they are wanted and belong. A spastic child was found a warm and accepting home not so long ago.

Of course the process of finding homes for these, and for older children whose personalities and habits are already pretty well established, is costly and time consuming, but within the limitations of staff and funds the Adoption Service works unceasingly to find a home for every legally available child whatever his age, religion, color or physical condition.

Adoption staffs are deeply concerned that many applicants have a long frustrating waiting period. One major factor too seldom realized is that approximately 90 percent of the applications are for normal, healthy infants. In fact, there are more applications than there are babies available for adoption. Too few adoptive parents are willing to consider an older child or a handicapped child. Agencies are actively interested in finding these children permanent, secure homes.

Perhaps Miss Lindsay will one day write a column on the thinking of forward-looking agencies as to present-day adoption practices and how some of the so-called "bottlenecks," which certainly exist, can be resolved.

Assistance to Southeast Asia

By Andre Visson

United Western Policy

SECRETARY of State Dean Acheson and Ambassador Philip C. Jessup this week sought bipartisan support in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for increasing American economic and military aid, as well as for an educational campaign, in southeast Asia.

It was not difficult for Secretary Acheson and Ambassador Jessup to bring out, before the Senators, the economic, political and strategic importance of southeast Asia. Should this region ever fall, as did China, into the Soviet orbit, Moscow would get tin, rubber, drugs and —most important—badly needed oil. It is consequently of vital importance that we prevent the Soviet Union from extending her control over that area.

But how can this be done? Only by preventing the Moscow-led Communists from making allies of the Asiatic nationalists. The Communist danger was blocked in Indonesia because Indonesian nationalists succeeded in attaining their goals without allying themselves with the Indonesian Communists. As a matter of fact, the Indonesian nationalist leader, Soekarno, found the necessary courage to eliminate the Indonesian Communists by executing their leaders.

IN INDO-CHINA the situation is unfortunately different. There the nationalists are divided. Most can be found in the Communist guerrilla detachments of Ho Chin-minh. Some are sitting on the fence. Only a minority has joined Bao Dai, whom the French persuaded to head the anti-Communists Viet Nam regime.

For the time being most of the anti-Communist fighting in Indo-China is being done by the French metropolitan or colonial forces. And this makes the Indo-China problem so much more complicated than that of Indonesia.

In Indonesia we were able to exert friendly pressure on the Dutch to create an anti-Communist Indonesian national state. We could do this because the Indonesians were fighting both the Dutch and their own Communists.

In Indo-China it is very hard for us to convince the French that they should make further political concessions to the Indo-China nationalists, because most of the fighting there is done by the French. Since the end of the war the French have spent in Indo-China about one and one-half billion dollars. In 1949 alone their military expenditures reached about 450 million dollars. Their human losses are also considerable. They are complaining that in the last two years they have lost there more commissioned officers than the annual graduation of St. Cyr, France's West Point.

The Indo-China war is far from popular in France. If, under our pressure, the French government makes further concessions to the Indo-Chinese nationalists, the French parliament may refuse the necessary credits, and perhaps even the further use of French troops.

ON THE other hand there is strong feeling among the American observers of the Indo-China situation that unless the French make certain indispensable concessions to the Indo-Chinese nationalists, the latter will not rally to Bao Dai and will continue to fight in the ranks of Ho Chi-minh.

This vicious circle constitutes one of the major headaches of our policy makers at the present time. On one hand they are convinced that it is indispensable to prevent a Communist-nationalist alliance in Indo-China, as well as in all other Asiatic countries. On the other hand it is equally indispensable to maintain a united western front in Asia. And the trouble is that our western allies in the North Atlantic Pact—the British, the French and the Dutch—are being antagonized by the Asiatic nationalists whom we are so anxious to win over.

It is sufficiently lamentable that the Western powers, allied in the North Atlantic Pact, failed to work out a common policy in China. But if they should fail to work out a common policy for southeast Asia, it will be a major disaster—some observers believe an even greater one than that we suffered in China.

Solutions for the problems in southeast Asia are not easy to find. These problems call for patient and continued effort. But all our efforts will be in vain unless we succeed in establishing a united western approach to the southeast Asia problems. The establishment of such a united approach will be the major topic of the coming American-British-French conference.

Fairlington Voting

On behalf of the Joint Fairlington Precinct Committee on Registration, I want to express our appreciation for the splendid coverage you gave to the movement of our organization to encourage residents of Fairlington to register for voting in Arlington County.

May I also call your attention to the fact that you inadvertently omitted from the story of March 27 the names of two of the participating groups. In addition to the North and South Fairlington League of Women Voters, the other members of the committee are the Fairlington Parent-Teacher Association and the Fairlington Civic Association.

Crommelin Only Has to Behave

By Drew Pearson

ANY TIME Capt. John Crommelin wants to be restored to active Navy duty, all he has to do is walk into Admiral Sherman's office and promise to behave.

So reported the Chief of Naval Operations the other day behind closed doors of the Senate Appropriations Committee when he was testifying on the Navy's money needs.

"If Captain Crommelin walked in my office next week and gave me his word of honor that he would behave, I would take him back," Admiral Sherman said after being put on the spot by several nagging questions from Senator Homer Ferguson, Michigan Republican.

"Then why did you put him on furlough at half pay, to silence him?" demanded Ferguson.

"I don't want the junior officers and enlisted men presented with the spectacle of a senior officer on active duty setting an example of insubordination," Sherman shot back.

"In that case, why wasn't Crommelin court-martialed?" persisted the Senator.

"That would only have caused further airing of his case and a public commotion over the accuracy of everything he said about institutions and individuals," replied Sherman.

Senator John McClellan, Arkansas Dixiecrat, suggested that Navy Secretary Matthews was responsible for furloughing Crommelin.

"I made the recommendation," spoke up Sherman. "I thought it was a good opportunity to remove from the active list of the Navy an officer who was setting a bad example."

Senator Bill Knowland, California Republican, wanted to be sure Crommelin wasn't disciplined for anything he may have testified before Congress.

"I would protect an officer from punitive action for testifying before a congressional committee," Sherman said flatly.

With that, the Senators got back to the business of Navy appropriations.

Acheson on Britain

SECRETARY OF STATE Dean Acheson gave a congressional group some interesting insight recently into why Britain broke ranks with the United States and recognized the Chinese Communists.

"I had been telling Ernie Bevin all along that Britain ought to be spending more money on her possessions in Asia to build up their economy and living standards, but Bevin has always insisted that Britain couldn't afford this, because of pressing economic problems at home," Acheson reported.

Later, Britain recognized the Chinese Communists, in hopes the Communists would provide markets for British Asiatic possessions, Acheson explained. He added that he still thought Foreign Minister Bevin had made a mistake and that he, Acheson, probably would say, "I told you so," at the next meeting of Big Four Ministers.

Congressmen Anthony Tauriello and Franklin Roosevelt of New York said they hoped the Foreign Ministers would act on another matter—the banning of British arms shipments to Egyptian Arabs who have warred on Israel. Acheson, however, didn't rise to the bait. He said that British arms sales to the Arabs were "negligible."

He added that the hostility of the Arabs for Israel should not cause alarm, since it was only naural for the Arabs to be hostile, having been once defeated by Israel.

"They are still eating crow," said the Secretary. "Sometimes it takes a long time for crow to digest."

"Well, those arms shipments may be negligible now, but if it keeps up, the Arabs will eventually have a preponderance of arms, and that means war," replied Representative Isidore Dollinger of New York. "Unless the British stop these arms sales completely, then the United States ought to lift its arms embargo to Israel."

Attorney for the People

INTERIOR SECRETARY Oscar Chapman took a unique step the other day by appearing before a public commission as a "lawyer for the people."

Chapman's department is locked in a fight with private power interests over their attempt to grab half a billion dollars' worth of Government-developed power in the Central Valley of California. Therefore, Chapman made the unusual move of appearing personally before the Federal Power Commission to oppose Pacific Gas & Electric's bid to distribute Government power generated at the Kings River project.

His appearance was promptly challenged by a power company lawyer who charged that he appeared with a "cloak of immunity." Replied Chapman:

"I am not here as a Cabinet member. I am here as attorney for the people. I'll answer questions all day if necessary and debate you all night. The people's interests must be protected."

Prediction on Taxes

THE NEW TAX BILL will fall far short of President Truman's appeal for an extra billion of corporation taxes. The new bill will call for a boost of 2 percent, or about 500 million dollars, in corporation income taxes—just half of what the President requested. And instead of repealing 650 million dollars of excises, as Truman urged, the Ways and Means Committee will reduce or eliminate excise taxes totaling one billion dollars—in fact, on everything except liquor, beer and wine . . . Finally, instead of reducing excises levied since 1943, as President Truman suggested, the Ways and Means Committee takes a leaf from the 1941 schedule and will vote a 50 percent slash in the sales tax on automobiles and other excise levies dating from that year.

SMALL BUSINESS—While the President is debating aid to little business, his Defense Department could easily help the cause merely by obeying the law on military contracts. Though 95 percent of the companies in America are classified as "small business," they get only a fraction of the Defense Department's business. The exact percentage is difficult to determine, since the department has released misleading figures claiming some of the largest companies in America as "small business." The Defense Department is required by law to submit its contracts to competitive bidding, yet this is done in only 9 percent of the cases. The law is shockingly disobeyed, with the result that big business gets the breaks.

Our Political Economy

Baby Boom Brings School Crisis

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

IF THE 1940s were the decade of the great baby boom, the 1950s will be the decade of the great school crisis.

In 1947 there were 24.5 million pupils enrolled in our public and private schools. By 1958 the number will be over 34 million, an increase of 40 percent. The wave will of course hit the elementary schools first. The record number of babies born in 1947 will reach the first grade in 1953, and peak enrollment in elementary schools is expected in 1957. By 1962 the crest will have reached the high schools.

All of this adds up to serious trouble for our school system. It has been estimated that to give pupils the same relative plant they had in 1930 will require a 10 billion dollar building program during the next 10 years.

There are three factors contributing to the unprecedented educational burden. The first is the baby boom. But for many school districts, a problem of equal or greater magnitude is migration from other areas. A census survey in 1947 showed that 70 million Americans were living in dfferent dwellings than those they had occupied in 1940.

And, finally, there is the fact that Americans are demanding better education and are going to school longer than they once did.

Inflexible Source

FEDERAL aid to education seems to have died for this session of Congress, a victim of the controversy over religious schools. Nevertheless, it is a safe prediction that, like the Canterville ghost, it will return to haunt us until something is done about it. For we have not even faced, let alone solved, the problem of where the money shall come from to meet the needs of the next 10 years.

Normally, the main burden of support would fall on the local district. In 1946-47, 62 percent of school revenues came from county and local sources, 35 percent from the States and less than 3 percent from the Federal Government.

But local finances are the least adapted to provide the required expansion. They depend almost entirely on property taxes, a notoriously rigid and unadaptable form of taxation. Furthermore, the bonding and taxing powers of local districts are frequently limited by State law, so that with the best will in the world, they would still be unable to build enough schools.

New Rural Burden

PROPERTY TAXES do not respond to changes in national income. During the depression they went up, rather than down. And in 1946 property tax collections were only slightly above 1932 levels, though national income had risen 300 percent.

Migration has been an overwhelming experience for some communities. Rural areas which had never dealt with anything more serious than farm assessments were suddenly confronted with multimillion-dollar war plants and housing developments. These in turn brought a demand for schools, streets, public utilities, and police and fire protection.

It is surprising, in view of the problem, that so few States provide aid for school construction. In 1947 there were only 19 which assisted local districts in building schools, and in 7 of the 19, the help was nominal.

There are more than 100,000 school districts in the United States. Most of them have very limited financial resources, and many are too small and poor to support more than a one-room schoolhouse.

$67 Against $261

INFLATION, the high birth rate and wartime migration were national problems, and their solution is a national responsibility. It would be unrealistic to expect local government to face them alone.

In 1947-8 the United States spent a median of $180 for every pupil in average daily attendance. Yet we know what disparities that figure conceals: in Mississippi an annual expenditure of $67; in New Jersey, $261.

The fact is that the States with the smallest resources have the highest proportion of children. Many States which, like Mississippi, showed a poor performance in education, actually spent a major share of their revenues on the school system.

Even within the States, the load is very unequal. Here again we find that the poorest districts carry the heaviest load. Some districts spend 10 or 20 times as much on education as do the least favored. In Missouri, a fairly typical State, annual expenditure per classroom runs from a low of $200 in some rural districts, to a high of $4600 in the urban areas.

Citizens of World

LOCAL responsibility for the school system is an American tradition. But so is mutual help. In this case, State funds are urgently needed to equalize the burden among the States. President Conant of Harvard justified such a program in these words:

"Why should the citizens of a relatively wealthy State be taxed to help the education in poorer States? I often hear this question asked. The answer is obvious and twofold. First, all the youth of the country are future citizens of the entire country; their activities as citizens and voters will determine the kind of Nation we are going to be living in in the next quarter century. Indeed, I can go further and say the education of all our future citizens may well determine the kind of world we are going to live in."

The Magazine Rack

By Charles E. Davis, jr.

YOU ARE sitting beside your radio in a Midwestern city listening to a program originating in New York. Suddenly the notes of a tenor are silenced.

Your local station hurriedly starts fill-in music. Then, 11 minutes later, a breathless announcer reads a news flash from Philadelphia: A terrific explosion has been reported in New York City.

Within seven more minutes a terrible truth has become evident. Both New York and Washington have been blasted by atomic weapons. Yet this country's radar network on the Atlantic Coast had detected no approaching aircraft.

The answer? Snorkel submarines lying several hundred miles off our shores releasing guided atomic missles.

"Could this happen?" asks Look. It certainly could, the magazine asserts, adding that the threat of snorkel submarines to our coastal cities and shipping is now our Navy's No. 1 problem.

FLAIR devotes its new issue to Paris, and it is a superproduction. Both the written material and the art work are superb.

After studying it, you may agree with Mrs. Evangeline Bruce, wife of our Ambassador to France, who writes in the lead article that Paris is "poetry itself, and those who try to isolate her magic find that words become meaningless and adjectives lose their value, put to flight by that mysterious witchery which rises from the banks of the Seine."

These intimate glimpses of Paris provide, oddly, a taste of nostalgia for those of us who have never seen the capital of enchantment.

Housing Is Called Attlee's Top Problem

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

THE most urgent problem facing the Labor government of Britain, in the opinion of British voters, is the acute shortage of housing.

The Labor Government's next most important problem, according to the voters, is the ticklish one of staying in power with a precarious margin of three seats in the House of Commons.

This nation-wide survey by the British Institute of Public Opinion was begun immediately after the February 2 election. The British Institute achieved a remarkable record for accuracy by forecasting the outcome of that election with an error averaging only 0.8 percentage points on all parties.

The British survey asked voters:

What do you think is the most urgent problem facing the new government?"

The result:

Housing	21%
Staying in power with small majority	18
Closing dollar gap; planning for end of Marshall Plan aid	12
Keeping prices and cost of living down	12
Budget, taxes	8
Foreign policy, H-Bomb	8
Deciding on further nationalization	6
Food rationing	6
Full employment	5
Other	11
Don't know	8

(The table adds to more than 100 percent because some persons named more than one problem.)

In a second question, the British survey asked voters what they think caused the Labor victory in the election. The first four factors mentioned by voters were: (1) the record and policies of the party, (2) the support given Labor by the working class, (3) the fact that Liberal Party candidates split the vote in many districts, drawing strength away from the Conservative Party, and (4) full employment at the time of the election.

Matter of Fact

It's Just Fantasy—Not Fascist

By Stewart Alsop

THE POLITICAL enemies of Senator Claude Pepper of Florida are said to have hit on a remarkable device. Throughout the Florida backwoods, according to a story going the Washington rounds, the unfortunate Senator is being described in the following spine-chilling terms:

"Why, J. Edgar Hoover, the whole FBI and every member of Congress knows that Claude Pepper is"—a breathless pause—"a shameless extrovert. Moreover, there is reason to believe that he practices nepotism with his sister-in-law, and that his sister has been a thespian in sinful New York. Finally—and this is hard to believe—it is well known that before Pepper was married he regularly practiced"—a more breathless pause—"celibacy."

As far as is known, although he is certainly uninhibited, and was certainly once a bachelor, the Senator has never employed a sister-in-law, and his sister has never been an actress. Yet denials will do no good. And among those Florida voters with limited vocabularies, there is said to be much honest indignation at these horrifying revelations. The Pepper forces are seriously worried.

The story is amusing, especially because the joke is on the pompous Pepper, but is worth retelling for another reason. It quite accurately reflects what is happening in Washington today. And what is happening in Washington today is not altogether funny.

A Refugee's Reaction

THE POLITICAL technique of using character assassination by innuendo as a substitute for honest debate on the issues is by no means a new one. Yet never before has this slimy business been carried to such lengths as in the current "get Acheson" campaign.

A German woman who escaped from Hitler in the '30s remarked recently to this reporter, "But can't you see—of course it's happening here." There was no mistaking the sincerity in her tone. Yet what she said was nonsense. What is happening here is not fascism or anything like it. It is, instead, a kind of mass neurosis.

The neurotic is marked, according to the psychologists, by his tendency to escape into the unreal, into fantasy, and by his irrational fears and hatreds. The fears and hatreds find expression in Senator McCarthy's blanket charges of mass treachery in the State Department. As for fantasy, what could be sheerer fantasy than Senator Styles Bridges' charge that a "master spy" has been controlling American foreign policy for years, presumably whispering his orders into the ears of former Secretary of State George Marshall?

The neurosis is by no means confined only to an occasional McCarthy or Bridges. Both these men are essentially irresponsible. Senator Robert A. Taft is by no means irresponsible. Yet he has publicly acknowledged that he has encouraged McCarthy to keep bringing up names, on the theory that sooner or later he is sure to hit pay dirt. This is like saying that when one lie about an innocent person has been exploded, another should be tried. Only in a thoroughly neurotic atmosphere could a man of Taft's character and integrity have taken such a stand.

Phone Calls in the Night

THE EFFECT of the neurosis on those immediately involved was described by Mrs. Esther Caukins Brunauer. After challenging McCarthy to repeat in public the charges he had made against her under the protection of congressional immunity (a challenge the gallant McCarthy has showed no signs of accepting), Mrs. Brunauer testified:

"We have received anonymous telephone calls, at all hours of the day and night, accompanied by threats and profanity, with such advice as, 'Get out of this neighborhood, you Communists, or you will be carried out in a box.' " There is nothing amusing about this.

Even those who are in no way directly involved feel the general unease. A favorite subject of conversation these days is how to foil the wiretappers. One way, it is said, is to tap the receiver regularly with a pen or pencil—this is supposed to jar the needle of the recording machine. No doubt this sort of thing is fantasy, too—probably very few telephones are actually tapped. Yet this is an essentially unamusing symptom of the general neurosis.

Again according to the psychologists, the fantasies and fears of the neurotic spring from an inability to face the real facts of life, which leads to the escape into the unreal. In Washington today, the real facts of life are consistently being shoved under the rug—the facts of the long, painful, expensive effort which must be made if the free world is to survive. Given real leadership, this country is now, as always, perfectly capable of facing the facts of life. The question is whether leadership will now be forthcoming. There is nothing at all amusing about what is likely to happen if it is not forthcoming soon.

Storekeeping Scandal

Reds Go In for Merchandising

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

STOREKEEPING in Russia has become a national scandal, although the Bolsheviks prefer to call it a temporary "shortcoming."

Many of the Soviet Union's retail trade troubles stem from the Slav's historical prejudice against merchants. Merchants were regarded as usurers or outright thieves, and any Russian of worth would seek a career in the army, government, law, the clergy or farming.

In recent years, of course, the pinnacle of respectability was found in industry and diplomacy. Failing such heights, practically any form of production was better than storekeeping.

A second source of trouble was created by the Communists themselves at the outset of the Revolution. The Bolsheviks indiscriminately liquidated the so-called "bourgeois capitalists" and to this day have not been able to fill the void with equally capable merchants.

Goods Available

UP to now, however, the lack of consumer trade facilities has been overshadowed by the more serious lack of goods. But with more goods being made to meet consumer demand, Soviet leaders find that their long-promised shops and merchandising plans are largely on paper. This dearth of trade facilities has become a political liability, creating all sorts of tensions between the people and the government.

Top Communists are now passing the buck to store administrators and local party bosses, charging them with gross neglect in failing to provide stores and store personnel.

A non-Soviet study reveals, however, that the lack of shops is almost of secondary importance to the padding of store staffs with Communist favorites. It is not unusual to find stores with more than half of their personnel consisting of administrators, maintenance directors and service specialists.

As for actual salespeople, they are usually inferior in both intelligence and education. They are nevertheless handled gently, because people even of that caliber have been hard to get for store work.

Lures and Threats

THIS LOW STATE of affairs has persisted despite all sorts of government inducements, including free day nurseries, clubs, bonuses and even a kind of profit-sharing in what is called the "director's store profit fund."

Once on the payroll, the employes are made aware of another "incentive" to stay on the job. That is the threat of social and political ostracism by the Communist Party—a penalty which means the loss of livelihood at any except the most menial tasks.

Yet even threats of imprisonment have not prevented many cases of theft and, worse, speculation with scarce or rationed goods. Most of these, it appears, have been acts of desperation by persons long in want.

One of the most common practices, according to Soviet press accounts, is "illegal" markups—that is, the store director marks up certain items slightly above the authorized price and pockets the difference.

All the while, domestic production of consumer goods is expanding and imported goods from Czechoslovakia, Poland and other satellites are reported in greater amounts.

Job Played Up

THE government is well aware of these "shortcomings." Many government pronouncements take note of the situation. In a preelection speech two weeks ago, Deputy Premier Anastace Mikoyan said:

"We have to eradicate the prejudice that trading is easy and simple. The trade organs shall insure the training and raising of qualified cadres—from retail sellers to manager."

Mikoyan also stressed the importance of satisfying the customer, hitherto of slight concern to the Bolsheviks. Soviet customers, he indicated, have now become more demanding as well as critical.

Mikoyan then disclosed that the Soviet government actually proposes to embark on an ambitious program of consumer advertising.

"It is time," he said, "to think seriously of the organization of trade advertising and to intensify it. It is true that we do not aspire to overtake the capitalist countries in this field where advertising is a means for a shameless deception. . . . Yet we have to develop our Soviet advertising, a cultural and progressive one, to push forward the issue of trade advertising."

A Ballot Can Be Waste Paper

By Harry N. Stull

THE COMMISSIONERS, acting on the assumption that Congress will enact legislation authorizing them to declare daylight saving time, say they are desirous of knowing how the residents feel about the matter, but the results of the balloting will be merely "advisory." In the absence of voting machinery, it is no small job to secure the correct views of the people on any given subject.

STULL

The plan adopted is not ideal but it may result in sufficient ballots being cast to justify the effort. The only real way, the only democratic way, to secure the views of District citizens is to establish official voting machinery by which we not only can select our governing body but can vote upon matters submitted for referendum, as provided in the Kefauver bill.

There are matters, however, far more important than daylight saving upon which the Commissioners could be guided by public sentiment. The referendum recently held on home rule showed an overwhelming sentiment for it which was not apparent in the testimony of District officials before the Kefauver committee.

If the result of the balloting is merely "advisory," and if the Commissioners can disregard the expressed sentiments of the community, it is hardly worth the effort.

Crime's Spawning Grounds

THE SUGGESTION of Police Superintendent Barrett that the only two comfort stations operated by the District be abolished, is worthy of the attention of civic groups. The two stations, at 13th and E sts. nw. and 9th st. and New York ave. nw., are said to be used primarily by panhandlers, alcoholics and perverts. The police are in the best position to know of conditions surrounding these stations, and if they constitute gathering places for undesirables, their usefulness is at an end. The amount of money saved by their abolition would be small, but if they are breeding places for crime, no expenditure of public funds for their upkeep can be justified.

STATISTICS recently released show Washington's crime record for 1949 as nothing to cheer about. In aggravated assaults (4314, or nearly 12 a day), the District led the country and increased its total over the preceding year. Though the report shows a decrease in robberies, larcenies, burglaries and auto thefts, our murder record of 78 was greater than those of Cleveland, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, all with larger populations.

The average citizen will want to know why our record is so high, and what is being done about it. The statement that this is a tourist city and that we have to deal with thousands of visitors annually does not explain the record.

In one citizen association, the president announced that many women members had stated that they would not attend the organization's meetings because of fear of being on the streets at night. When citizens hesitate to walk down the city streets for fear of molestation, there is something definitely wrong in our protective agencies. The investigation by a House District Subcommittee has, up to this time, thrown no light on the matter.

Marshall Heights Stalemate

NO APPARENT PROGRESS is being made toward slum clearance in Marshall Heights. The lack of appropriations for the purpose, the attitude of the area's residents and the report of the House Appropriations Committee all seem to indicate that a stalemate has been reached.

The freeze order issued under the Redevelopment Act of 1946 is resented by the residents of Marshall Heights, and the agencies concerned are not in agreement as to what should be done under the circumstances. The failure of Congress to appropriate funds for the operation of the Redevelopment Land Agency is fatal to any plan for the elimination of this sore spot in the city's development.

Since the residents there are in opposition to any large-scale plan of redevelopment, preferring to make their own repairs at their leisure, it might be wise to drop the whole thing for the present and await a time when those most concerned will cooperate in this effort.

A Flagon of Oil for Rep. Stanley

By Benjamin Muse

THE PEOPLE of Virginia should begin to get acquainted with the Hon. Thoms B. Stanley, Representative in Congress of the Fifth District.

Tom is the choice of the "organization," or the Byrd machine, for Governor of Virginia in 1954.

MUSE

To say that Stanley has already been "anointed" might be premature. Something might conceivably happen to upset the plan, and that expression is particularly vague as to time. Only a few of the inner circle know the exact date at which the top leaders agree on the man and Senator Harry Byrd gives his final stamp of approval. This takes place many months before the Senator commits himself in public.

In fact, the whole matter of anointment, though highly important in the political system of Virginia, needs some explanation for the general public. The expression comes originally from the ceremony of anointing the kings-to-be of ancient Israel by pouring oil on their heads in token of consecration. It has long been used among Virginia politicians to denote the stage in a contest for Governor when the bigwigs of the Democratic organization put their stamp of approval upon the man whose election they intend to bring about.

Anointment by the political high priest—for the past two decades, Senator Byrd—is, of course, purely figurative. No oil is poured on the candidate's head, but, with a strange unanimity from that point on, the stalwarts acclaim him as a natural for the office of Governor of this State.

A 1948 Disappointment

THE QUESTION of whose "turn" it is is an important factor in organization calculations. Next time it will be definitely Stanley's turn.

Tom was in the hopeful class as early as 1945; in 1948 he was really ready to go. It was a bitter disappointment to him, and to many of his friends, when he was pushed aside for John Battle, and he sulked behind a threat to run anyway until the following January. His announcement of support for Battle, when it came at last, followed strenuous machine pow-wows, in which it is safe to assume that the way was cleared for Stanley in 1953.

At any rate, the word has gone around that Stanley is the man, and wise men are climbing on the bandwagon. At the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner last month, Stanley got a big hand—not the polite clapping expected for a Congressman, but the more sustained ovation that indicates a candidate headed for the Governorship. Attorney General Lindsay A. Almond also got more than the routine applause, but still only enough to say, "We are thinking of you, but for later on. You are younger and can wait for 1957."

A big furniture man, Stanley is well-heeled financially. He owns 500 head of pedigreed Herefords—which makes him a farmer. He will be 60 next July.

Time to Speak Up

SINCE HIS election to Congress in 1946, his eyes have remained pinned on the Capitol in Richmond, where he served for 16 years as a member of the House of Delegates. He was an able legislator and was for five years a member of the Governor's Budget Advisory Board.

As Speaker of the House in 1942, 1944 and 1946, he enjoyed all the glamour that usually comes to Speakers of the House in Virginia, and a little more: he presided over the joint session which received Churchill and Eisenhower in 1946. But the Speaker of the House under the Byrd machine regime in Virginia has little opportunity for public pronouncement; he leaves the talking to the Governor. In fact, Stanley has never really sounded off about anything.

Barring the 1948 unpleasantness, Tom's career has been completely orthodox from the point of view of the Byrd machine. The thing is to make few commitments on public questions and to demonstrate your ability to the machine hierarchy and cultive the leaders first. But the public must come into the picture soon. During the next four years Stanley will have to make himself known in a big way.

All this may seem a bit rugged to those who get their political science out of school books, but it is not very different from the goings-on in other States, or among the antimachine faction here. It is just more so. And Tom Stanley is a mighty good fellow. But for all the genteel benevolence of the Byrd machine, and the personal integrity of its leaders, the government of Virginia rests, more, perhaps, than that of any other State, upon the dubious foundations of the smoke-filled room.

Plight of the '6th Largest City'

By James P. Connolly

ANNOUNCEMENT that Baltimore is expected to replace Cleveland as the Nation's sixth largest city in the 1950 census, renews emphasis on the unequal and unfair position of Baltimore and the more populous Maryland counties in the State Legislature.

CONNOLLY

Thomas Settle, Maryland district supervisor of the Census Bureau, reported that sample surveys made in 1948 showed that, percentage-wise, Baltimore's population was expanding more than Cleveland's.

Baltimore already has more than half the State's population and contributes more than half the State's taxes, but its representation in the General Assembly is less than a third of the whole. The city has 42 representatives in a total of 152 in both houses.

The representation of the more populous and prosperous counties is similarly disproportionate, and the anticipated population growth in Baltimore (and undoubtedly in some of the more urban or suburban counties) will serve only to widen the disparity.

A Timely Referendum

THE BEST PROSPECT for bringing the legislative situation into better balance lies in the calling of a constitutional convention and the adoption of a new constitution. The formula for proportionate representation is contained in the constitution (if proportionate is not a misnomer).

Maryland has not had a new constitution or a constitutional convention since 1867, but it might be timely that a referendum on the question of calling a convention is on the ballot for the general election next November 7, no thanks to the Legislature.

The Assembly has authority to call a convention without a referendum, but it did not originate the referendum coming up. The constitution itself requires a convention referendum every 20 years and this happens to be a year for one.

It is anticipated that a convention will be approved next November. It is practically a foregone conclusion that it will be approved in those subdivisions which feel slighted in legislative voice. It is to their natural interst and advantage to approve it.

Past referendums have had interesting results, especially the last one, in which the Legislature balked the only convention the people had approved in 80 years. In previous referendums, a convention had been disapproved on the ground that the constitution had hardly become shopworn.

In 1930, however, the convention won a majority of those voting on it but not a majority of all taking part in the election. Usually, any issue draws only about 50 percent of the total vote. The question was raised then whether a convention requires a majority of all the voters or only those voting on the question.

The Legislature declined to pass a bill calling the convention, and there was nothing that could be done about it. As a legal authority said: "You can't mandamus the Assembly."

The Same Complexion

IF A CONVENTION is approved, it will be up to the Legislature to name the time and place and to decide how delegates shall be elected—provided, of course, that the Assembly doesn't balk the convention again.

Delegates must be nominated, but the nominations may be either by primary or petition. One suggestion as to the number is that they be apportioned on the same basis as legislative representation.

If they happen to be also of the same mind as the legislators—and they are apt to be, coming from the same localities—then there is doubt that much will be done to equalize matters at Annapolis.

The Legislature itself, or the rural bloc in it, always has been strongly resistant to any efforts at adjustment. There is a bland assumption that virtue and integrity are intrinsically rural and that the rustic makes the superior statesman. But, actually, the opposition to any change is based on much more human and practical grounds.

The rural forces in the Assembly hold the whip hand and like to do the driving. They can't be forced if they won't yield. They have given ground slightly.

An effort to even the situation was one of Governor Lane's campaign promises. The effort failed. A measure freezing the status quo did get through the last session of the Assembly but it, too, is subject to referendum next fall. Its purpose is to prevent the smaller political units from increasing their power, at least at their larger neighbors' further expense.

The storming of the Fortress of Chapultepec at Mexico City on September 12, 1847, last important battle of the Mexican War

Historian Adds to Understanding

Mr. Polk's Not Inglorious War

THE STORY OF THE MEXICAN WAR. By Robert Selph Henry. Bobbs-Merrill. 524 pp. $4.50.

NO MATTER what the Whig politicians said about it, the Mexican War was popular with many, and——

"Green grow the lilacs, all sparkling with dew,
I'm lonely, my Darling, since parting with you,
But by our next meeting I'll hope to prove true
And change the green lilacs to the red, white and blue."

might almost have been a theme song.

When war broke out and the Government called for 12-month volunteers under the Act of May 13, 1846, there was a flash flood of volunteers ready to go to the support of General Taylor on the border.

Three weeks after Ohio received its quota of men to be raised, it had three regiments in camp and was turning away companies still coming in. Illinois' quota was three regiments; 14 regiments volunteered. Kentucky's quota was filled so rapidly that the Governor had to issue a proclamation to stop volunteering.

Within 36 hours from the time they volunteered, a Baltimore company entrained for Washington to join the men of the District. In Tennessee, more than 30,000 men volunteered when the call went out for three regiments totaling 2800; men tried to purchase places in the ranks, and the companies accepted had to be chosen by drawing lots.

A Training Ground

IT WAS A WAR in some respects like other American wars: Inadequate preparation beforehand, politicians confusing their own welfare with that of the country, rivalry between the regulars and the volunteers.

It was a war with interesting sidelights: The first American war in which steamboats played an important part in transportation; presumably the first war in which "war" pictures were taken by the camera.

The war was also a training ground for the fighters of the Civil War. Robert E. Lee was a captain of engineers; George B. McClellan was a second lieutenant of engineers; U. S. Grant was a lieutenant in the Fourth Infantry; Lewis A. Armistead, Winfield Scott Hancock, James Longstreet, George E. Pickett, George G. Meade were all there.

Robert Selph Henry, whose "The Story of the Confederacy" has received the praise of Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman and other critics, makes due mention in his narrative of the Mexican War of the future fate of these fledgling leaders.

Revaluation of Polk

THE PICTURE drawn by the Whigs of what they called "Mr. Polk's War," and emphasized by later abolitionists, has persisted for a century. It is a picture of a big and predatory United States forcing war upon weak, neighboring Mexico to provide more territory for American slaveholders. The United States has been rather shamefaced about it.

Forty years ago, Henry says in his preface, this bully thesis began to be modified by historians, a modification helped by the publication in 1910 of the diary of President Polk—a man once written off as one of the weaker of the Presidents but in a recent consensus of historians ranked the tenth greatest. Opinions change slowly, however, and Henry's book is dedicated to increasing the understanding of the Mexican War as "an inescapable and a not inglorious step in the historical process."

Henry presents such factors as the slowness of communications at the time which led to misunderstanding; the pressure of independent Texas to be admitted to the Union, with the threat of otherwise joining Britain; the American fear that California would fall to some foreign power; the instability of Mexican government, with the belief there that the United States and Britain would soon be battling over the Oregon boundary. Mexico, too, was misled—as have been foreign nations since—by anti-war sentiment in Congress.

The Role of Slavery

AS FOR slavery, Henry says "it is much more likely that the existence of slavery retarded rather than hastened Southwestern settlement . . . The settlers of Texas were no more the emissaries of some potent 'slave power' than the settlers north of the Missouri were advance agents of organized abolition."

Henry presents the Mexican side of the war with tact and sympathy, and his book appears to be as fair as it is thorough and readable.—LEE GROVE.

The Breakup Of a Brood

FIRST FAMILY. By Richard Scowcroft. Houghton, Mifflin. 345 pp. $3.

THE Gannons were a large and prosperous family in Clark City. The children were handsome, healthy, intelligent, and, as far as their mother could see, properly happy.

Yet Jack, the eldest son, went East to Harvard, failed miserably and emerged worthless. Eddie, the family beauty, ran with the fastest boy in town, later made a respectable, bitterly unhappy marriage and became a shrew.

Family pride gently but firmly separated pretty Louise and her one true young love, and Louise's life withered away in dutiful loneliness. Babe, the daughter who never felt as good as the rest of them, ran away with a man her mother could not countenance, and returned only once, years later, wealthy, beautiful and almost happy.

It is left to Gus, the baby of the family, to grow up and assume its tangled responsibilities.

"First Family" is a well-written novel, not without nostalgia, of the Middle West during the past three decades. Richard Scowcroft has considerable insight into that influential institution known as the family.—L. G.

Un-American Americans

Our Breed of Traitor Apparently Declining

By Alfred Steinberg

TREASON. By Nathaniel Weyl. Public Affairs Press. 483 pp. $4.50.

FEW topics are so fraught with suspense and drama as treason. What names give American historians so many conflicting emotions as Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr? What crimes are so heinous that their very mention can seldom be accomplished without raising one's voice?

Nathaniel Weyl has written what appears to be the first American book devoted entirely to the narration of the deeds and lives of homegrown traitors. The immense success of Rebecca West's "Meaning of Treason," dealing with the British variety, made it only a question of time before treason on this side of the ocean would get its just deserts.

Our early traitors led fascinating lives in the main and were persons of outstanding abilities. Among others, Mr. Weyl has hit the highlights of the careers of Maj. Gen. Charles Lee, Benedict Arnold, Aaron Burr, the Whisky Rebels and Thomas Dorr,

As for the later traitors, those of both World Wars, there was something petty about their activities. Their minds were warped by their frustrations and their desire to get even with the rest of us.

Motives Obscure

THIS is probably the clearest conclusion one can draw from Mr. Weyl's book. Early traitors were leaders who would have taken supreme command had they succeeded. Later traitors were merely agents of more important individuals or powers. Whether the logical further conclusion is that less talented people are getting into the game, or that it is no longer possible for a single individual to foment enough treason to emerge the blackguard leader, is open to speculation.

Historians may shade in lighter or darker tones some of his sweeping statements and thumbnail descriptions, but Mr. Weyl has covered a great deal of territory and hairsplitting is not sporting with so many un-American Americans involved. Where Mr. Weyl might have added considerably to the value of his book would have been a sharper analysis of the motives—both psychological and social.

A New Definition

MR. WEYL covers the Hiss, Coplon and Communist trials, although a legal definition of treason would have excluded all three from a book so titled, no matter what one thinks of the parties involved. On closer examination, these recent cases serve mainly as a convenient tool for Mr. Weyl's final conclusions and recommendations.

In his last chapter, Mr. Weyl argues that the preservation of our form of government requires that we bring up to date the meaning of treason. He poses a new definition—treason against democracy—and declares that "treason under the Constitution is a betrayal of a free society."

Who would deny that the Cold War is sorely testing our security? But have we any reason to believe we can maintain democracy by undermining our own freedom? Mr. Weyl's conclusion would lead to the judging of emotional values and would involve extreme penalties. In the end, we would have thought control.

Democracy means a market place for all ideas and a faith in the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and our judicial system to safeguard what was won in '76. These are ample to control the treasonous: If we narrow the meaning of democracy in the name of democracy, we will soon not know what it is we are trying to preserve.

SIMON AND SCHUSTER

Parish Priest to Red Hat

The Ecclesiastical Life Humanized in a Novel

By Connie Zatkovich

THE CARDINAL. By Henry Morton Robinson. Simon & Schuster. Cloth, 580 pp., $3.50; paper, 520 pp., $1.

CURATE, rector, monsignor, bishop and, finally, the red hat of a cardinal. That is the ecclesiastical ladder young Stephen Fermoyle, in 1915 fresh from the North American College in Rome, was destined to climb in his complicated business of taking care of men's souls.

Henry Robinson has taken "a composite of all the priests he has ever known," and toned and colored it to create the full, deep character of an Irish boy from Medford, Mass.

First, there was his love for his family: for Din, his father, sincere and plodding, who operates Trolley 3 on the Medford line; his mother, Celia, patient and loving with her own; Florrie, spiteful, unmarried; Mona, beautiful but weak in virtues; George, full grown at 20, eager to study law; Ellen, mystical and frail, forced to return from the convent because of her health, and Dennis, an Irish "thrush" ever out of a job. Stephen enjoyed his family, but his work was among souls unrelated to him by blood, only by spirit.

Apparent to Some

STEPHEN, "a man with a soft heart and a hard mind, possessing linquistic powers and personal charm," was shaped for great things, and his good friends Captain Orselli, Italian master of the Vesuvio, and Monsignor Quarenghi, his brilliant teacher in Rome, predicted his climb. It took more time for "Dollar-Bill" Monaghan, his first pastor, and Cardinal Glennon to see his potentialities.

Through a series of artistically knit incidents, humorous and trying alike, Father Fermoyle proves his capabilities as a leader and adviser. He is extremely humble, but his name comes to the attention of such personages as Pius XI and Eugenio Pacelli (later Pius XII). His intellectual qualities win respect in Rome and America alike.

In every paragraph, without strain or pedantry, Robinson blends Catholic ritual, doctrine and custom into various incidents. Separation of church and state, birth control, war and communism and a general weighing of modern spiritual values are worked into the novel. This is one of the few books which has attempted to humanize the ecclesiastical life, and it has succeeded admirably.

As pastor of the run-down St. Patrick's, Stephen does not become a parish drudge. As secretary to Cardinal Glennon, he accompanies him to Rome, where Merry del Val sees value in this young monsignor and he is made attache to the Vatican Secretariat of State. The hierarchy sees in him a potential envoy between Rome and America.

During this period of his spiritual climb, Monsignor Fermoyle hits a snag in the person of Countessa Gheslana Falerni, who for a time he cannot forget.

History Dubbed In

THROUGH flashed-in paragraphs, the author keeps his reader up-to-date as Il Duce marches on Rome "and the crescendo of European events rises in a brutal scream.

Monsignor Fermoyle is summoned frequently by Pius XI to act as interpreter. After four years in Rome, he is sent to Washington as assistant to the Apostolic Delegate. At 44 he becomes the youngest archbishop, and finally is named cardinal for liaison work between the Holy See and the White House.

The author in his preface tells his readers that his book is "neither propaganda for nor against the Church . . . It is a purely fictional tale, a story to be read as a narrative woven by a watcher of our world, who believes—in spite of evils fearfully apparent—that faith, hope and compassion animate men of good will everywhere."

Early Days

Hornblower's First Foe Is Seasickness

MR. MIDSHIPMAN HORNBLOWER. By C. S. Forester. Little, Brown. 310 pp. $3.

SIXTH of the Hornblower series to be written and the first chronologically, "Mr. Midshipman Hornblower" launches the career of one of the doughtiest seadogs the Royal Navy is ever presumed to have known.

It was "a skinny young man only just leaving boyhood behind, something above middle height, with feet whose adolescent proportions to his size were accentuated by the thinness of his legs and his big half-boots," who presented himself aboard HMS Justinian one January day.

For a time it looked as if the shy 17-year-old Hornblower (he was born July 3, 1776, C. S. Forester tells us) was going to be known around the fleet as the man who was "seasick in Spithead." But a duel followed by transfer to the frigate Indefatigable gets young Hornblower past his first shoals.

If admirers (and they include mariners as well as landsmen) think that the first chapter moves a little slowly, they have only to read on to hear the beat to quarters and the roar of guns.

In succeeding chapters Hornblower:

-Takes command of a French prize with a cargo of rice and loses it;

Is captured by a French privateer, sets it afire and is rescued by the Indefatigable;

Sees a tar, his hands tied, battle rats with his teeth for sport;

Participates in a futile invasion of Revolutionary France with French Royalists who bring along a guillotine;

Captures a Spanish galley, in a daring small action; saves an English ship from a Spanish fireboat; has a brush with the Black Plague in Oran; and

Is captured by the Spanish and freed in recognition of his saving some Spanish lives.

From all these adventures, related in Forester's one-plane prose, the future Lord Hornblower gains in wisdom and wins his commission as lieutenant.

Readers, secure in the knowledge that Hornblower will survive each adventure, will nevertheless keep their eyes glued to the page. —L. G.

The Coffin Corner . . .

TICKET TO OBLIVION. By Robert Parker. Rinehart. $2.50.

PETER MORROW goes to Paris as an American intelligence agent, disguised as a newspaper correspondent, and within five minutes is plunged into the machinations of a Russian spy ring. A red-haired, green-eyed girl is the lure, an oddly marked cigarette lighter is the entree and a fat man is Peter's opponent. The Russian design is sabotage of French transportation and industry to thwart Marshall Plan recovery, with the head of the Surete a secret ally of the Soviet and the Paris police commissaire in Morrow's camp. The action ranges as far afield as Budapest, Geneva and especially the Swiss border, and the author knows every cafe, hotel and embassy interior, every street intersection and railroad stop, in the considerable ground he covers. Mr. Parker, who has been both a foreign correspondent and a United States Government agent in Warsaw, Budapest, Istanbul, Shanghai and, of course, Paris, gives this high-speed adventure story the authenticity of a Baedeker and the realism of tomorrow's dispatches from the fringe of the Iron Curtain. It is a superior combination of fiction and fact.

"At the Indian Camp," one of the Henry Bugbee Kane drawings in the new edition of Thoreau's "The Maine Woods"

In a Nutshell

THE MAINE WOODS. By Henry David Thoreau. Edited by Dudley C. Lunt. Norton. 340 pp. Ill. $3.

THOREAU made trips into the Maine woods in 1846, 1853 and 1857, sometimes covering territory he had passed through previously and causing repetition in his journals. In "The Maine Woods," Dudley C. Lunt has rearranged the material to eliminate the repetition and give a connected narrative. He has also provided careful, informative notes. Illustrations have been supplied by Henry B. Kane, and the book is one that will be enjoyed by nature lovers and admirers of Thoreau. The publisher, Norton, also plans to issue Thoreau's "Cape Cod," "A Week on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers" and "Walden" in similar handsome format.

THE SECOND OLDEST PROFESSION. By Robert Sylvester. Dial. 320 pp. $3.

A USUAL complaint about a newspaper novel or movie is that the author wouldn't know a proof press from a composing-room foreman. Mr. Sylvester is an ink-stained veteran with an intimate knowledge of the men and machines that put out a newspaper, and his step-by-step development of a "big story" is as authentic as shoptalk at a press club bar. Unfortunately, Mr. Sylvester is a better newspaperman than he is a novelist. The "yellow" journal of his fast-moving story has its unlamented prototypes, and some of his characters are recognizable composites, but Sylvester doesn't quite succeed in his attempt to explain the widening breach between a once crusading reporter and his high-minded wife. The Ned Gorse of the novel remains too sympathetic a character to deserve his several fates. Mr. Sylvester almost makes up for that fault, however, with a wealth of subplots and "city room" anecdotes.

FAMOUS MEN OF MEDICINE. By Caroline A. Chandler, M. D. Dodd, Mead. 140 pp. Ill. $2.50.

DR. CAROLINE Chandler of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, in a series of sketches, each several pages long, has told the story of famous medical men from Hippocrates to the leaders of the profession today, and indirectly the story of medicine from prescriptions of barley gruel to antibiotics. The book, illustrated with portraits, is adressed to younger readers, but adults will also find it interesting.

THE NAME IS FOGARTY. By Jonathan Titulescu Fogarty, Esq. Vanguard. 126 pp. $1.50.

JONATHAN TITELESCU FOGARTY, ESQ., and James T. Farrell, it is generally suspected, see one and the same man in the mirror when they shave. And Mr. Farrell—pardon, Fogarty—in the role of, say Mr. Dooley, is an intriguing thought, but where Mr. Dooley, say, is loquacious, Mr. Fogarty is verbose. This concern with "the World Brain"—these ruminations about Mr. Stalin, Mr. Henry Wallace, Senator Taft and Mr. G. B. Shaw—are not too entertaining.

GIVE BEAUTY BACK. By Francis X. Connolly. Button. 222 pp. $2.75.

Notes On the Margin

By Lee Grove

ANGLO-IRISH ELIZABETH BOWEN, author of "To the North," "The Heat of the Bay" and "The Death of the Heart," among other books, paid a brief visit to Washington a few days ago in the course of her first visit to the United States since 1933.

She proved to be a tall and well-boned woman of 50, with a handsome strength and an attractive femininity of dress.

Miss Bowen said that she had laid aside her previously reported plans for a book of four long short stories.

"I still want to do the book," she explained, "but I have been overtaken by a novel. As an interim thing, I am writing a history of the Shelbourne Hotel in Dublin, founded in 1824—a 40,000-word book."

The Shelbourne, Miss Bowen said, figured prominently in Irish history and social life, and as an illustration said that all during the 1916 uprising, people kept pouring into the hotel for tea.

Speaking of why England has produced no writers of the Sinclair Lewis type, she said: "I think myself the American people must be more detached and hard-boiled. I think it must be a reflection on English writers, who are perhaps jollying the readers along. The Irish do it much more. The only thing that has been attacked in England is the public (private) schools."

Miss Bowen—who in private life is the wife of a gramophone company executive, Alan Charles Cameron, a Highland Scot — ordinarily spends seven to eight months a year in England and the remainder at eighteenth century Bowen's Court, County Cork.

Describing the censorship of books in Eire, she said that "it is a terribly serious thing to see the work of leading writers technically outlawed in their own country. I think it is a great tribute to them," she said, referring to the writers, "that they are still so patriotic."

The censorship can be by delayed action, she said; a book that has been a family classic for years can be denounced.

Miss Bowen said that after nine years she had given up reviewing books for the Tatler, "so I could read some of the old books. I want to read the Bible through as a literary work. I think any book reviewer should be allowed a sabbatical once in a while to read the old books."

Her first book was published when she was scarcely out of girlhood. "The critics liked it and people kept asking me when I was going to do another," she said, "so . . .

The Patient Rallied Remarkably

A Premature Interment Of Conservative Party

Edited by John Barkham

THE DECLINE AND FALL OF BRITISH CAPITALISM. By Keith Hutchison. Scribner. 300 pp. $3.50.

WITH the results of the British general election before him, the reviewer can hardly avoid challenging Mr. Hutchison's contention that British capitalism is withering on the vine while socialism flourishes like the green bay tree. If the election proved anything at all, it proved that the British middle class, which made capitalism, has not yet lost faith in it. This fact should be borne in mind while weighing the author's statement that the British workers have not shifted an iota of their allegiance to the Labor Party. And, as he aptly reminds us, nothing can now be done in Britain without the positive consent of the workers.

This is a sober and painstaking survey which makes a most persuasive case for issuing a burial certificate to the Tory Party. The British ruling class has been in retreat for 70 years, Mr. Hutchison maintains, hence nothing can ever bring back "the good old days." The book is written with informed assurance and an obvious confidence in the correctness of its arguments. The author buttresses his case for dying capitalism with a long and impressive list of authorities. The only apparent flaw in his diagnosis is his patient's recent and remarkable rally.

Southern Intrigues

WAIT FOR TOMORROW. By Robert Wilder. Putnam. 408 pp. $3.50.

THOSE who read this novel of Mexico will recall the futile attempt of former King Carol of Romania to enter the United States some years ago with his blonde mistress, despite the efforts of a high-pressure public relations expert from New York. Mr. Wilder has built his story around a somewhat similar situation.

The "expert" in this case is a Texas oil man, who has contracted to get a sleazy king and his mistress (a wanton right out of the old silents) across the border. Smack into the middle of this menage falls Slade Compton, a New York newspaperman. Himself a notably amoral operator, Slade swiftly becomes enmeshed in a whirl of intrigue, sex, violence and betrayal that lies outside the orbit of even his experience.

Slade is a notable specimen of the modern heel-hero who has slunk through so much current fiction — hard-boiled, unprincipled, faster with his fists than with his brain. It is questionable whether Compton is worth the care Mr. Wilder lavishes on him, for our author writes with poise and ease. His Mexico City is recognizable right down to the sights, sounds and smells, and his coteries of shady emigres and vicious expatriates are equally convincing. As a whole, the story has pace and excitement, but Mr. Wilder can, and doubtless will, do better than this.

Preacher and Psychiatrist

THE ART OF REAL HAPPINESS. By Norman Vincent Peale and Smiley Blanton. Prentice-Hall. 288 pp. $2.75.

THERE are some who believe that the cure for modern man's malaise lies in a return to religion. Others, usually younger, maintain that our problems are psychological, and must be treated through the mind, not the heart. This book seeks to combine both approaches.

Written by a popular preacher and a psychiatrist who was a student of Freud, it describes in detail the methods employed at the psychiatric-religious clinic of the Marble Collegiate Church in New York City. First, Dr. Peale endeavors to identify and isolate the trouble with old-fashioned comfort and consolation. Then Dr. Blanton tries to exorcise it with psychiatry. In this way, they claim, they have solved problems of marriage, excessive drinking, growing old and the like.

The book exudes a glowing optimism that many readers will doubtless find heartening in considering their own emotional difficulties. Even those who have reservations on the Peale-Blanton technique will at least find the case histories entertaining.

CHICAGO CONFIDENTIAL, by Jack Lait and Lee Mortimer. Crown. 308 pp. $2.

IT never takes very much probing to turn up the sleazy side of Chicago, but the authors of this book have gone to considerable pains to do a real expose job on it. Sober citizens living in and around the Windy City will sometimes wonder whether this is the same Chicago they know.

Not that Lait and Mortimer have produced a work of fiction. On the contrary, everything they say about Chicago's gaudy nightlife is buttressed by what appears to be chapter and verse. It is just that they have concentrated on the seamy side of Chicago life.

Intending visitors to the city who read this book will be torn between titillation at the excitement it can offer and fear at the risks they may run. A readable but sensational portrait—all warts and no beauty.

The Story of Lilian Baylis

Struggles of 'Old Vic Can Teach Us a Lesson

OLD VIC SAGA. By Harcourt Williams. Macdonald & Co. 239 pages. 123 illustrations. $2.40.

THIS rich volume closely follows two others of British origin on the American market, Audrey Williamson's "Old Vic Drama" and "The Old Vic," a handsome collection of performance photographs.

However, Harcourt Williams outdoes both by tracing the story of London's fabled theater from 1880, when Emma Cons founded the Royal Victoria Hall, through the 1948 season. The devaluation price of $2.40 for this rewarding book makes it a rare buy, and if Washington booksellers look at you blankly, tell them the New York offices of Macdonald and Co. are at 37 Madison ave., N. Y. 10.

Mr. Williams is uniquely associated with the Old Vic. He was the theater's director for four seasons and acted for seven, including the more stirring ones of recent times, under the Olivier-Richardson-Burrell triumvirate. Washington theatergoers will recall Harcourt Williams as a member of John Gielgud's "Love for Love" company.

The success of the Old Vic—and the subsequent birth of a national theater approach in Britain—is to a large extent the story of the late Lilian Baylis. This remarkable woman inherited the management from her aunt, Miss Cons, and it was always her policy to cater to the masses—cheap seats and modestly-mounted productions. In 1914 she hit upon Shakespeare as a worthy entertainment for the lowly of the Waterloo Road area whose lives she was dedicated to keeping out of the saloons and gambling joints.

How this policy of presenting the finest in the English-speaking culture—but never as Art—resulted in some of the greatest performances of our time, gives one pause to wonder at the limitations of instant, easy commercial success. It was always an uphill struggle to make ends meet, and Williams' descriptions of backstage conditions paint an extremely barren picture.

All that while the leading actors of our day worked for next to nothing, but they became such names at John Gielgud, Edith Evans, Sybil Thorndyke, Olivier, Richardson, Vivien Leigh, Fay Compton, Martita Hunt and that American-by-adoption, Maurice Evans. Glance at the list of players at the Old Vic printed in the back of this book and you'll find scarcely a one missing of the generation's great.

That this could be done in lowly Waterloo Road indeed gives one pause for our own shortcomings. A burning spirit such as Lilian Baylis' is needed, and Williams has paid that vivid, cajoling woman a worthy tribute. America has no counterpart for either Lilian Baylis or her Old Vic.—RICHARD L. COE.

'Scientific Method' Is Given Serious Ribbing by Chemist

SCIENCE IS A SACRED COW. By Anthony Standen. Dutton. 221 pp. $2.75.

DON'T be misled by the title; this book is built on serious humor. It has its place, and that place is in the hands of any scientist whenever he begins to feel his importance too much.

"Science Is a Sacred Cow" was written by a chemist, presently engaged in editing a chemical encyclopedia. His purpose, which he fulfills in his book, was to expose the sophists who overextend and overextoll the scientific method.

There is only one true science, and that is mathematics, Standen maintains. The next nearest group to approach the scientific method is the physicists. Biology is a more questionable science; the social sciences just aren't scientific.

Particularly barbed is his chapter on the education of scientists. Today's scientific teaching is the survey course (in contrast to past teaching systems of Pick and Choose and Spread It Thin, respectively though not respectfully).

"The Survey Course," writes Standen, "means that it bounces airily over a huge range of subjects, without coming down to earth much . . . This then is the problem: flit airily over a dozen different sciences and the famous scientific method becomes so diluted as to be hardly recognizable."

Maybe Standen is a bit rough on scientists and science educators, but, as he says, in effect—they've had it too nice for too long.—N. S. HASELTINE.

HOW RELIGIOUS PRINCIPLES and faith in God have given us strength and purpose as a democracy
THIS NATION UNDER GOD

by ELBERT D. THOMAS
U. S. Senator from Utah
In these days of doubt and uncertainty, faith in God has been attacked by some as unrealistic and contrary to democratic principles. In this book Senator Thomas speaks out strongly against such doubts. He shows how this nation from its very beginnings has been guided and influenced by religious principles, both the people and their leaders.
Senator Thomas has written a unique story of religious influence in American life. He shows that vital religion has been a factor in the heritage of America and will be an even more important factor in its destiny. His book features biographical sketches of our presidents, excerpts from important speeches and papers, and an unusually informative chart of over 30,000 facts of our national life.

It's No April Fools' Prank: Nats 8, Reds 6

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

ORLANDO, FLA., April 1.—Bucky Harris is on the verge of risking the headache of managing Bobo Newsom and giving him a Washington contract, so dismal are the Nats' pitching prospects otherwise . . . Newsom has been following the Washington club at Tinker Field and on its road trips, and smirking daily at the defeats . . . and his bargaining position has changed. Previously begging to be taken on by the Nats, Bobo now wonders publicly if they can pay him as much as he'll make with the Chattanooga farm club, with his radio and soft-drink connections in Chattanooga . . . Only in the Detroit camp at Lakeland has the pitching mound been built up to the required new 15-inch height, and Tiger pitchers are complaining that it is too high and making them wild . . . The Yankees are worried that Tommy Henrich's bum knee may keep him out of the lineup at the season's start . . .

POVICH

The Phillies who get a false sense of their own power every spring because of the ease with which they hit homers out of their tiny Clearwater Park, have had enough of that nonsense. They've prevailed on the city to move the right and right center fences back 50 more feet.

MAJOR LEAGUE ball players in the exhibition games at the Miami Beach Stadium, home of the Sun Sox of the Class B Florida-International League, never had it so good . . . Dressing rooms for the players are pink tiled with ventilated locker space, and a cocktail lounge for the players' wives . . . Dr. David Tracy, the hypnotist who has been hired to rid the Browns of their defeatist complex, was no raging success when he tried his charms on the St. Francis College basketball team. It went into a losing streak . . . the Pittsburgh Pirates have taken so many beatings in player deals with Branch Rickey, the Pirate owners dare not make any more deals with Brooklyn for fear of the fans' wrath . . . The Nats say the best pitching they have faced all spring came out of the left hand of Adrian Zabala, of the Minneapolis club, and they wonder why the Giants are keeping him down on their farm . . . The Red Sox, who were supposed to have the best pitching in the A. L., now have their pitching worries. Ellis Kinder, last year's 23-game winner, is slowed by a broken rib; Chuck Stobbs' arm is sore, and whiz-kid Maurice McDermott is having a horrible time of it trying to get the hitters out.

IF THE YANKEES' pitching improves, and there is no frequent need for their relief ace, and if Joe Page makes only 32 rescue dashes from the bullpen, during the 1950 season, he will be paid at the rate of $1000 per appearance . . . At $32,500 he's the highest-paid relief pitcher in the history of baseball . . . Burt Shotton, Dodgers' manager, was miffed when First Baseman Gil Hodges, given permission to report "a couple of days late" because Mrs. Hodges was expecting a baby, didn't show up for three weeks. "Mr. Rickey will change the mating season," avowed Shotton . . . Johnny Lindell, of the Yankees, believes all the trade talk involving the Yanks and Nats. When a batch of his special model bats failed to arrive in the Yanks' camp, Lindell sugested, "they're probably on their way to Washington." . . . Jack Kramer says he and Pancho Gonzales have already pocketed $55,000 each from their tennis tour profits, and that they have expectations of taking down $75,000 before they finish their campaign . . . Catcher Mickey Grasso of the Nats declares that Dick Welk can't miss being a big winner this year. "Sure he's been walking too many batters," said Grasso, "but he's only missing that plate by an inch most of the time and this club shouldn't worry about his control."

CORRESPONDENTS with the Boston Braves assert that club is dealing stupidly with Sam Jethroe, their high-priced colored rookie outfielder from Montreal who has been the flop of spring training . . . The writers point out that Jethroe doesn't live in the same hotel with the other players in race-conscious Bradenton, has no roomie, and is forced into a "loner" existence. They point out that Bill Veeck at Cleveland always took pains to operate with at least two colored players . . . Ralph Kiner, the National League home run king who hasn't played a full game for the Pirates in 20 days, hurt his wrist while trying to break his fall after stumbling over first base . . . One of the American League's good pitchers complain that the shorter umpires call everything a couple of inches above the hitter's waist a ball because the ump thinks of the batter in terms of their own height . . . Ellis Clary, the former Nat second baseman signed by Chattanooga, had an off-season job as sports columnist for a Valdosta, Ga., daily . . . The Tigers are genuinely alarmed over Hal Newhouser's sore arm and doubt that he'll be available for the season's opener.

3d Title for Astounding Aussie

Marshall Keeps in AAU Swim With 2 More World Records

New Haven, Conn., April 1 (AP).—John Marshall, the sleek Australian, tonight bettered two more world swimming records including one made by Japan's great Hironoshin Furuhashi. Marshall sped the 400-meters free style in 5:29.5 and 440 yards in 4:31.2.

Marshall, in winning his third National AAU individual crown, placed his name boldly alongside swimming's immortals. Only five men in the 46 years of the American championships have won three crowns, and none has assaulted world records the way Marshall did.

Last night Marshall lowered the 200-yard free style records, but his performance tonight was even greater.

The listed record for 400 meters is 4:30.6 by Furuhashi, who was the sensation of the outdoor championships last summer in Los Angeles. The 440-yard mark is 4:38.5, by Bill Smith. Furuhashi has a time of 4:33.3 for 400 meters pending, but Marshall's super performance tonight knocked almost four seconds off it.

Up to now the high mark of the indoor championships was Johnny Weismuller's triple victory in 1927 when he set three meet records.

Marshall's victories led the Yale freshmen to the National team championship—an unprecedented occurrence. The yearlings piled up 43 points to 35 for Ohio State, national collegiate champions.

2 Local Boys Place In YMCA Swimming

Princeton, N. J., April 1.—Two boys from Washington, D. C., placed in the Central Atlantic Area YMCA Swimming meet at Princeton University this afternoon.

Ray Ascherfeld was third in the 13 and 14-year old 100-yard free-style with a time of 1:07.2 while Kirke Bent was second in the 12-and under 25-yard freestyle. He finished in 0:14.7.

In Fight Description

Janiro's Hometown Fans Burn at Radio, TV Contrast

Youngstown, Ohio, April 1 (AP).—Boxing fans in this home town of Tony Janiro were still stirred today by the contrast in radio and television accounts of his fight with Rocky Graziano.

The match last night in Madison Square Garden ended in a draw.

Some radio listeners said they got the impression that Janiro was being licked.

Numerous television viewers, however, said they were certain Janiro was entitled to the draw, if not a victory.

In many night spots where customers were offered both radio and television accounts of the fight, there were cries of "turn off the radio" and "is that guy (the announcer) seeing the same fight we are?"

Some radio listeners hesitated to believe a radio report that Janiro's face was a "bloody mess" after television viewers said Janiro's face appeared unmarked.

"I think the fans are forgetting we had Janiro winning in the early rounds," radio broadcaster Don Dunphy said. "If any broadcast made it seem Graziano won, I can only say one judge also thought he won."

Dunphy denied saying Janiro's face was a "bloody mess."

Fazio Tied By Harrison For Lead in Open at 209

By Ken Alyta

Wilmington, N. C., April 1 (AP).—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, golf's Arkansas traveler, came charging through the third round of the $10,000 Wilmington Azalea Open tournament today to make up five strokes on George Fazio and tie him for the 54-hole lead at 209.

Harrison, playing out of St. Andrews, Ill., racked up a 34, 35—69, while Fazio, pro at Washington's Woodmont club, with whom he was playing in the day's last threesome, fell off to 37, 37—74, two over par for the 6652-yard Cape Fear Country Club course.

Two strokes back with 211 after 71 today came National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff from Ormond Beach, Fla. Still in contention with 213 following a third-round 74 was Joe Kirkwood, jr., Hollywood, Calif., locked in fifth place at 214.

Mangrum, Furgol 5 Strokes Back

Five strokes from the lead were Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, and Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich. Furgol, trailing by three strokes in second place at the start of the round was as cold as the dark, windy day. He needed 76 after a fat 41 on the first nine.

Fazio simply couldn't buy a birdie today and that, briefly, was his trouble. Those long putts he canned the first two days when he scored 67, 68, just didn't drop. He had 16 pars and shot over twice. On the par 3 eighth he overshot the green for his 4 and on 16, another short hole, he missed his putt for a par.

Harrison, who last year won the Canadian Open title, which Fazio took down in 1946, played a steady, unspectacular round that, coupled with Fazio's inability to master par, gave him his tie.

The stoop-shouldered veteran amassed 15 pars and 3 birdies. On three he canned a 12-foot putt and on six, another par five, he chipped to within 6 inches of the pin for an easy 4.

Alexander's 67 Best In Round

On No. 15, where Fazio failed to get his birdie four, Harrison succeeded to square the tournament, going into tomorrow's final round.

Middlecoff had a scrambling front nine in getting his par 36. He balanced two pars with two holes on which he went over. Two birdies coming in made up for a lapse on short tenth.

The day's best round, A 32, 35—67, went to North Carolina's Skip Alexander, playing out of Knoxville, Tenn., but his total was 216, seven strokes off the front end.

Jimmy Clark, Huntington Beach, Calif., pro, followed a front side 40 with a 31 coming home for the tournament's best nine. It gave him 219 for 54 holes.

Jimmy McHale of Philadelphia wrested the amateur lead from Bill Stalls, Greenville, N. C., with 73 for 222, three strokes ahead of his East Carolina Teachers College rival.

Giants Drop Hank Behrman

Phoenix, Ariz., April 1 (AP).—The New York Giants today dropped Hank Behrman, former pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Infielder Roy Zimmerman, once a member of the New York Yankees' farm system from their roster.

Both were released to Oakland of the Pacific Coast League by the National League club.

Masterson Stops Yanks For Bosox

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 1 (AP).—Ted Williams hit his third homer of the exhibition season and his teammates reeled off five double plays as the Boston Red Sox defeated the New York Yankees today, 4-0, to win the spring series with the world champions, three games to two.

Walter Masterson and a rookie righthander, Jim Suchecki hurled for the Bosox, Masterson blanking the Bombers on five singles in the first five innings. Suchecki, going the rest of the way, yielded only two singles.

Bob Porterfield gave up the first three Boston runs. After being tagged for the Williams homer in the first inning, the Yankee righthander yielded two more runs in the second on a pass, a triple by Bill Goodman and a long fly by Tommy O'Brien.

West Tops East, 66-59

New York, April 1 (AP).—A smoother working West team, sparked by players from the Big Ten, Missouri Valley and Pacific Coast, whipped the East, 66 to 59, before 18,000 at Madison Square Garden tonight in the fifth annual basketball all-star game for the benefit of the Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund.

With Dick Schnittker, of Ohio State; Paul Unruh of Bradley; George Yardley of Stanford; and George Stanich of UCLA alternating in sinking baskets, the West pulled away in the last 10 minutes to win handily.

Schnittker, later selected as the most valuable player of the game, hit for 14 points. Unruh, with his left handed jump shot, got 12. Stanich had nine and Yardley eight mostly in the second half.

Charley Share of Bowling Green, dunked 14 points for the East squad. Gerry Calabrese of St. John's got 11 and Bob Cousy, Holy Cross star, 10 in addition to handing out four scoring assists.

Team Discards Flannels for Shorts

New Look Comes to Baseball

HOLLYWOOD, APRIL 1 (AP). The Hollywood Baseball Club startled the fans and probably the baseball world today when the Stars took the field wearing shorts.

Manager Fred Haney developed the idea and said it was no April Fool joke. It was a well-kept secret until near game time.

Appearing in the abbreviated garb similar to a pair of basketball pants and a light short-sleeve rayon shirt, the Stars drew raised eyebrows and a generous share of ribbing from their rivals in the Pacific Coast League, the Portland Beavers.

Haney said that as far as he knew, it was the first major change in baseball uniforms in 111 years of the game.

"This is no publicity stunt," said Haney, emphatically. "We are doing it to increase the speed of the players as well as give them comfort."

The club plans to use them only on warm days or at night if the weather is hot.

Haney pointed out that the players often lose speed and stamina—"they sweat it out"—in the heavier, conventional flannel, below-the-knee pants. He said all of the players after trying them out were enthusiastic. All expect ribbing from opponents, however.

Just before the game Manager Bill Sweeney of Portland burst out of the dugout and raced to home plate to greet the scanty-panted Haney. Sweeney was wearing a flaring skirt and a grotesque lady's bonnet on. He carried a floor mop, and promply embraced Haney.

One fan, carrying a cup of coffee in his hand, took one look and gasped. The coffee spilled on the neck of the patron sitting just in front.

"Well—what in the hell," was all both could say.

Terps Win 2 Events in Carolina Races

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 1.—A disqualification spoiled a record-breaking performance by Maryland's quarter-mile relay team and kept the Terps from winning a third first-place in the Carolina Relays here today.

Maryland and Penn each won two relay events as six varsity and two freshman standards were set in this five-year-old event in which no team scores are kept.

Jim Kehoe's College Park squad won the 880-yard relay and the shuttle hurdle relay and took seconds in the distance medley and mile relay.

Jack Unterkofler was Maryland's only individual winner with a 47-foot 3-inch shot toss. Paul Hawley took a second in the discus throw.

North Carolina's Bill Albans was hurt after breaking his own broad jump record; tying for first in the high jump and finishing second in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Bermuda, April 1 (AP).—Bill Talbert, Davis Cup veteran from New York, won the Bermuda tennis championship today by whipping young Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, 6—3, 1—6, 6—1, 6—2, in the final.

Nagy, Shoulder O. K., Makes First Start for Nats Today

Orlando, Fla., April 1.—Steve Nagy will emerge from his cellophane wrapper tomorrow and establish the fact there is such a guy on the Washington pitching roster. He'll pitch for the Nats in what practically amounts to an event.

Nagy has been a man apart, in the Nats' camp thus far this Spring. A pitcher, he hasn't pitched a ball in competition. He's been the subject of a delicacy of treatment by Manager Bucky Harris who left it to Nagy to decide when he should work.

So the 29-year-old left hander from the Coast League has decided it will be tomorrow when the Nats play Louisville at Tinker Field. "My arm feels good," says Nagy. In fact, he said, it never has felt otherwise. He merely didn't want to rush himself along.

Nagy has Harris' blessings in his delayed-action strategy. Desperate as he is for pitchers, Harris is counting heavily on the aging rookie who formerly was up with Brooklyn and the Pirates. He knew that Nagy was bothered with a sore shoulder last season, wanted to have no

Quattrocchi Cuts Thrash, Loses Decision

State College, Pa., April 1 (AP).—Maryland's Andy Quattrocchi was beaten out for the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 130-pound championship tonight by a freak ruling which could happen only in college boxing.

Tad Thrash, defending champion from Louisiana State, suffered a cut forehead at the hands of Quattrocchi in the first round and tournament doctors ordered the bout halted.

Thrash, however, was awarded the decision under the rule which calls for rendering a verdict when bouts are stopped in the first round because of cuts.

The two judges disagreed in their point scores, but Referee Gene Rankin of Wisconsin indicated a decision for Thrash after giving each fighter 10 points for the round.

Paul Kostopoulos, Maryland's other finalist, lost a decision to Everett Conley, Washington State 135-pounder.

Two dark horse teams from the West, Idaho and Gonzaga, tied for the team championship as favored Michigan State saw three finalists go down to defeat.

Idaho and Gonzaga, winning two individual titles apiece, earned 18 points each. Michigan State finished third with 13 points, one more than Louisiana State, last year's champion, and Penn State.

NCAA FINALS

125-POUND CLASS—Mac Martinez, San Jose (Calif.) State, outpointed Henry Amos, Michigan State.

130-POUND CLASS—Tad Thrash, Louisiana State, outpointed Andy Quattrocchi, Maryland (bout stopped in first round because Thrash cut; Thrash leading on points when it ended).

135-POUND CLASS—Everett Conley, Washington State, outpointed Paul Kostopoulos, Maryland.

145-POUND CLASS—Leonard Walker, Idaho, outpointed Ben Dolphin, Syracuse.

165-POUND CLASS: Herb Carlson, Idaho, outpointed Jim Rollier, Syracuse.

175-POUND CLASS: Carl Maxey, Idaho, outpointed Charles Spieser, Michigan State.

HEAVYWEIGHT CLASS: Chuck Drazenovich, Penn State, outpointed Gabriel Marek, Michigan State.

Final points scores: Idaho and Gonzaga, 18 each; Michigan State, 13; Louisiana State and Penn State, 12 each; San Jose State, 10; Washington State, 9; Syracuse, 8; Maryland, 7; Wisconsin, 2; Catholic University, Minnesota and Miami, 1 each.

Robinson's 3 Hits Lead Rallies in 6th and 7th

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 1.—On this April Fool's day the Cincinnati Reds outhit the Nats, 15 to 7, but the joke was on the Reds. They could read it on the scoreboard at the finish:

Washington 8; Cincinnati 6.

This was a very satisfactory victory for the Nats, who were beating the champions of the Grapefruit League. The Reds moved into Orlando with 13 victories in 18 jousts with major league clubs and were supposed to be hot articles.

The Nats dug out from under a 5-1 deficit in the sixth inning to win the ball game with a four-run splurge in that inning, a three-run uprising in the seventh. Unlike the Reds, who were prodigal with their blows, the Nats put theirs to potent use. Only one of Washington's seven hits didn't figure in the scoring.

Nat Pitching Unspectacular

Washington's pitching was nothing to write home about, what with Mickey Harris and Lloyd Hittle being belted freely, but Eddie Robinson continued to afford story subject. He made three more hits today, and raised his spring average to a neat .460.

John Hetki, a right-hander up from their Syracuse farm, commenced the pitching for the Reds today and took into the game a string of nine consecutive scoreless innings against major league opposition. Irv Noren put an end to that right away, with a first-inning home run that lifted the Nats to a 1-0 lead.

Harris gave the Nats a hard time of it after that, though. From the first to the sixth, he didn't allow any kind of a hit, and meanwhile the Reds were hammering at Harris for a 5-1, lead.

And then Hetki blew it, with an assist from Second Baseman Lou Klein. Hetki opened the sixth by hitting Gil Coan on the shoulder, and Klein immediately booted Dente's soft grounder. Noren flied out, but Robinson singled to center to cut the Reds' lead to 5-2.

Eddie Stewart also singled to center for another run, and Yost drew a walk to fill the bases with one out. But Robertson lifted only a short fly to left on which nobody could run. However, Mickey Grasso came up with a fiery single to center that unloaded two runs across the plate.

In the seventh, Frank Fanovich let the game get out of hand for the Reds. He pitched a single to Al Evans and then wild-pitched him to second. He loaded the bases on walks, with one out, and then ran smack into a left-field single by Robinson that gave the Nats two more runs. A third scored on Yost's long fly.

Harris gave up 10 hits in the six innings he pitched, and four of them were two-baggers—by Sammy Meeks, Hetki, Sam Adams and Dixie Howell.

Nats Great on Defense

Hittle neatly protected the Nats' lead despite the five hits and one run he allowed in the last three innings. He got an assist from Dente who grabbed Meeks' hot grounder in the seventh and cut off a run at the plate with a fiery peg to Evans.

The Nats' defenses, in fact, were on the sensational side. With Hittle in trouble in the eighth, Dente grabbed up Adams' grounder and started a double-play. And in the ninth, Yost speared a drive off Meeks' bat and flipped it around the bases for another double play that wound up the game with the tying run on base.

IN SHORT . . . Noren's homer in the first inning was the season's longest drive over the right field wall . . . Little Meeks, the Reds' shortstop, was once the property of the Nats. He singled, doubled and was robbed on another hit by Noren's running catch . . . Despite the 10 hits he allowed, Mickey Harris was pleased as one man. "I was just working on my control," he said . . .

Physician Finds Nothing Wrong With Newhouser's Arm

Lakeland, Fla., April 1 (AP).—An examining physician reported today he could find no cause for Hal Newhouser's ailing left arm.

Dr. Edgar Watson said X-rays showed no calcium deposits, no arthritic condition or abnormalties in the pitching arm of the star Detroit southpaw.

Newhouser, who has pitched only two innings of an exhibition game this spring, cut short his throwing in batting practice Tuesday. He complained: "My arm hurts."

After the checkup by Dr. Watson, Newhouser went to the Tiger clubhouse for treatment by Trainer John Homel. He is not donning a uniform these days.

And Pay Hike

So Pete King Gets 2 Jobs At Roanoke

ONE of professional baseball's most unusual and successful holdouts was staged this spring by Pete King, former George Washington University pitcher.

Pete, now a first baseman, held out for a raise in pay and the job of business manager of the Roanoke club of the Piedmont League. He got both.

King, a good hitting pitcher in college, hurt his arm and was signed as a first baseman by Roanoke last year. He batted only .277, but he hit for distance and turned in some classy fielding.

Discouraged by his low batting average, King was ready to quit this season. He sent back his contract, with a note which said, in effect:

"I'm a family man, and don't see any future in playing first base for Roanoke unless I have, as security, the guarantee of a job as business manager in 1951."

King was astonished to receive acceptance of his terms in return mail.

JIM McCAULEY, former end at McKinley Tech, has quit Clemson after two years, and will play football for Wilson Teachers this fall. He's a close friend of Bugs Thompson, who also quit Clemson to play for a home-town college, Georgetown. A third Tech football product, Glenn Smith, is staying at Clemson after being named to the Southern Conference's all-sophomore team last season . . . Car Credit, sandlot champion of Washington for three years, takes its football seriously. With baseball season just starting, Car Credit has its eyes set ahead, and called its opening spring football practice today, 4:30 p. m., at Edgewood playground, 3d and Evarts st. nw. . . . Andra McLaughlin of Colorado Springs passed up an offer to stage a figure skating exhibition in Moscow so she could concentrate on the championships here last week. The 16-year-old blond was named as the most artistic performer over champion Yvonne Sherman.

SAFFORD-CHANDLER, which claims it sells the best autos in town, boasts now that it also has the best amateur basketball team—and with good reason.

The team which it sponsors won 46 out of 48 games this season, and wound up with the D. C. Recreation Department championship for the fifth straight time. It avenged a two-point overtime loss to McKee by winning two return engagements. And it reversed a loss to C. Y. O. in the title game.

Star of the team is a 35-year-old fireman, Acky Viana. Acky, only 5 feet, 8 inches tall, wasn't good enough to make Central High's great team of 18 years ago, but for the last 10 years, he's been the sweetest player in independent ranks. He averaged 15 points this season.

Ormond Beach, Fla., April 1. (AP)—The Bauer sisters—only feminine entrants in the Ormond Beach Invitational golf tournament—bowed out today.

Marlene, the pretty 16-year-old, was eliminated this afternnon in the third round by Dynamite Boodloe, the five-by-five golfer from Valdosta, Ga., who scored a 4 and 3 victory.

Alice, the 2-year-old personality girl, was eliminated in the quarterfinal round also, losing 6 and 4, to veteran amateur Wilford Wehrle of Louisville, Ky.

Gaetz Hurls 7-Hitter For Terps

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., April 1.—Maryland junked its three-platoon battery system as Norman Gaetz pitched a 12-inning 4-2 victory over Navy here today.

Throwing a sidearm curve into the teeth of a biting wind, Gaetz, a Cumberland, Md., senior, restricted the Middies to seven hits.

The Terrapins pulled the game out for him in the top of the twelfth on singles by Johnny Hunton, Eddie Crescenze and Bill Graham and a wild throw by Catcher Johnny (Mighty Moe) Morrissey.

Morrissey's Homer Ties It

Morrissey had prolonged the game with a 380-foot home run which landed atop the left field bank in the last of the ninth. Maryland had taken a brief 2-to-1 lead in its half of the ninth when Dick Johnston singled and scored as Centerfielder Gene Saylor booted Gaetz's single.

Bill Hawkins, the Navy fullback of two years ago, made a heroic effort to win for the Middies.

Bothered by a sore arm all spring, Hawkins nevertheless pitched the distance for the Middies, and although touched for 14 hits, he was tight in the pinches.

Coach Max Bishop used Hawkins as his cleanup hitter too, and Bill walked twice, hit a single, stole a base and scored the first run.

The victory was Maryland's second in three games. It was Navy's opener after postponements against Fordham and Delaware.

Five of the seven matches were captured by margins as narrow as the pins marking the putting cups. Dartmouth's Tom McMahon had to travel 20 holes to overcome Al Williams of Navy in the No. 1 twosome. Dartmouth won its other two matches on the eighteenth green and one of Navy's four victories hinged on the final putt.

Just Want Streamlining

Schneiter Says Golf Stars Will Stay in PGA, Denies Revolt

Charlotte, N. C., April 1 (AP).—George Schneiter said today that tournament golfers simply want a chance to legislate for themselves.

Schneiter, tourament bureau director of the Professional Golfers of America, thus set forth the purpose of what has been called a revolt in the ranks of the PGA. The Charlotte News interviewed him by telephone in Wilmington.

"There is no malicious intention or any revolt involved in what we're trying to do," Schneiter said. "We simply feel that the tournament golfers should legislate for themselves, rather than have someone who isn't playing tournament golf legislate for them."

Schneiter had reference to the executives of the PGA, which is headed by Joe Novak, president, and Tom Crane, executive secretary, and operates from offices in Chicago.

The movement is not nearly so dramatic as painted, Schneiter contended. "We shall all remain members of the PGA and continue to play tournament golf as we have. No golfers will be frozen out. No prize money changes enforced. All we have in mind is streamlining the conduct of tournament activities."

"And what if the PGA takes a dim view of these objectives?

"After they see the soundness of it, I think they'll see it our way."

There will be no officers, Schneiter said, only a board of governors that now includes Sam Snead, Clayton Haefner, Jimmy Demaret, Lloyd Mangrum, Ben Hogan, Cary Middlecoff and Johnny Palmer among others. Schneiter would continue in his present capacity as director.

American U. Loses Twice To Lynchburg

Lynchburg, April 1 (AP). — The Lynchburg College baseball team opened its 1950 Mason-Dixon Conference season here this afternoon with a twin victory over last year's champion American University, 14-6 and 4-2.

Playing in a drizzling rain and cold wind, the Hornets took full advantage of American miscues and came through with timely work at the plate. But Moon and Jack Kauffman also turned in two top notch pitching performances for the Lynchburg team.

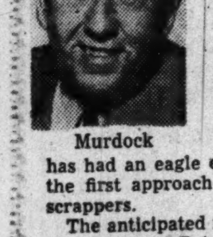
At Occoquan

Hickory Shad Appear

By Ralph Murdock

D. E. JAMESON informs us that a school of hickory shad have put in at Occoquan Creek. The anglers who were fortunate enough to be on the spot did all right for themselves.



Murdock

The hickories were taken on casting rods with the use of small shad spoons. "It's great sport," says Jameson, who has had an eagle eye peeled for the first approach of the silver scrappers.

The anticipated run of herring in the upper Potomac River is still in its infancy. Some catches are being made in the narrows. So far, the Chain Bridge area has produced the best results but the situation should show vast improvement in a couple days. The white perch are still conspicuous by their absence at this location.

CAPT. DOYLE KENDALL of Deale, Md., has never let up in his battle with the striped bass in Chesapeake Bay. Doyle is one of those guides who is ready to fish at the drop of a hat. Weather conditions mean little to this hardy skipper. His analysis is: "If the fisherman can stand it, it's right down my alley. In fact, some of my best catches were made in what appeared to be bad fishing weather. It's a tough job outguessing the rock."

Two of his good hauls during the week were catches of 42 and 84 rock. On each occasion he only had a single angler aboard the Bonnie Bett. His favorite spots are a Bloody Point Light on Eastern Bay and an edge which he spotted about four miles north of the Gooses.

A RECORD 270-pound mako shark was caught in the Gulf Stream off Fort Lauderdale, Fla., by Arthur J. Stevens of Joliet, Ill. It measured 8 feet and 4 inches in length and was landed on a 15-thread line. (Nice trick if you can do it.) The skipper was Capt. Jim Vreeland. Records show that the previous world mark was a 236-pound bruiser.

THE WEST VIRGINIA Conservation Commission, after three years of experiments, is convinced that fall stocking of trout in its streams is not successful. Out of every 100 trout stocked each year seldom are more than 25 percent caught by anglers. The experiments were made on Seneca Creek and the North Fork of Cherry River.

Of 9200 placed in Seneca, anglers caught 21.8 percent. At the North Fork, 8050 were released and only 5.8 percent fell into the hands of the anglers. The rainbows fared even worse. Of 1000 placed in the North Fork only .2 percent were taken by fishermen. The return from 1000 placed in Seneca in the fall was 10.7 percent.

G. W. BULLER, chief of the fish division in Virginia, reports that a fine supply of fighting rainbow and brook trout have been put in the State's trout streams since February 1. Buller said that many of the fish were 2 and 3 years old and that they all measured from 10 to 18 inches in length. The open season is April 20.

Kirk Pilots Fleet Argo to Record at Laurel Before 21,826

$18.80 Shot Wins Stakes In 1.10 1-5

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., April 1.—Smashing a track record that has stood since 1934, Fleet Argo, an $18.80 shot, carried the colors of Dion K. Kerr, jr., of Washington, to a half length decision in the Laurel Stakes, a fixture here since 1914.

Before the season's top crowd of 21,826 (last Saturday it was 21,620) the son of Happy Argo was kept going by Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., to stave off the closing rush of Mrs. Jack Carson's Kinsman, the favorite and Chesapeake Stakes hope. Three parts of a length farther back came R. M. Wood's High Frequency.

Laurel Handle Goes Past Million Mark

Laurel, Md., April 1.—Betting topped the million-dollar mark here today. The total was $1,140,201 with the day's best single race bring the Laurel Stakes with $161,441 going into the tote.

Fleet Argo, winner on only 1 race in 16 tries last year was clocked for the six furlongs in 1:10 1/5, sending into discard the mark of Star Porter of 1:10 4/5. The Laurel has been run at a variety of distances but this was the first time at three quarters of a mile since Kathleen won in 1918.

This was the second start of the year for the 3-year-old gelding, who was second in an allowance affair in his first outing. The track was lightning fast today and in the best condition of the meeting up to this point.

High Ground Stable's Prepared proved the April Fool horse of the race. He was out in front three times, but that was before the field left the gate, the son of Roman breaking through despite the efforts of Mike Basile to restrain him.

When the real start came High Frequency bounded to the front, followed by Fleet Argo, Jess Linthicum and Mystagogue. Kinsman was off next to last in the 12-horse field.

Kirk rated Fleet Argo close to High Frequency to the stretch where the pacemaker began to weaken. Kirk took this as his cue and sent Fleet Argo to the top. Jess Linthicum then tired leaving the contention to Fleet Argo and High Frequency with Kinsman coming on with a rush.

In the late stretch, Fleet Argo was game but Kirk was forced to use all the urging tactics in the book to make him maintain an advantage. Kinsman closed like the wind, and doubtlessly, would have been the winner in a few more strides. However, Fleet Argo's victory was deserved as the track record time will attest.

Fleet Argo took down $6215 in earnings, for his little more than a minute of action.

Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Post Card carried the mail in the Alexandria Purse, the day's secondary feature. With Aubrey Snellings in the saddle role, the colt from the mare Ace Card came into the wire two lengths in front of Mrs. T. A. Randolph's Mahoon.

Third money went to B. W. Dulany's Major Hugh who might have been closer but for darting toward the outside fence entering the stretch. Post Card paid $11 and was clocked in a creditable 1:11 1-5 for the six furlongs.

Investors in the daily double who backed the 1 and 8 combination collected a $99 double. Eddie Sanders, who rode his first race on any track at Charles Town last month, was aboard R. G. Watkins' Damson in the first and brought him home at $14.20. The second race went to G. R. King's Shine On, ridden by Jimmy Lynch and a $9.60 shot.

DAMSON joined the first flight in the run along the backstretch, was taken outside to wrest command and drew clear while being kept to intermittent pressure. FIESTA raced GARY LESLIE into defeat but was no match for the top one. FLYING NUN, slow to settle into stride, rallied from the outside and closed full of run. A LADY raced forwardly and tired. GARY LESLIE weakened after a half mile and probably needed the race. MAD PASS was through early. ALAN C. refused to break.

DAILY DOUBLE—DAMSON AND SHINE ON—PAID $99.00.

SHINE ON attained a slight lead during the early stages, shook off LOTOFTOWN after a half mile to draw clear and easily held sway. MINADDIE raced forwardly from the start but failed to seriously menace the top one. SUNNY SOUTH, steadied just off the first flight, rallied mildly through the stretch. YOUNG SCAMP, slow to settle into stride, made up much ground. LOTOFTOWN vied for the lead into the stretch and tired. BLUE FEDORA showed nothing. SIR BIM flattened out badly through the stretch. COCKOFTHEWALK was shuffled early and failed to recover.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $3000. For 3-year olds; claiming. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:02. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, P. Cassagne's ch. f. (3) by Market Wise—Hamite. Trained by L. Sauviac. Time, 1:11⅘.

TICKER TAPE, $33.60, $11.20, $6.60; AFTERWARDS, $9.00, $5.60; TRANS EGRET, $3.80.

TICKER TAPE raced forwardly from the start, assumed a clear lead in early stretch and held on tenaciously to outfinish AFTERWARDS. The latter, always prominently placed, continued on gamely to be wearing down the top one. TRANS EGRET lacked a menacing rally. SURPASS held a slight lead into the stretch and quit. PINK GLOVES dropped back immediately after the start and failed to threaten. OMITTED was hard held throughout while a bit rank. WORLD EMPRESS faltered badly.

ABBOTTSTOWN, $18.40, $9.60, $7.80; FRITZ MAISEL, $10.00, $7.40; GOOD EGG, $13.60.

ABBOTTSTOWN raced GOOD EGG into defeat rounding the bend, drew clear inside the furlong pole and was under pressure to hold FRITZ MAISEL safe. The latter improved his position steadily and was getting to the top one. GOOD EGG, alertly handled leaving the gate, retained a clear lead along the backstretch and faltered only slightly in the closing test. KING MIDAS dropped back on the turn and closed with a belated rush. GAMBLER, within striking distance from the start, lacked a rally under his heavy impost. ILLUSTRATE tired, as did SNOWFLARES. SANDLOT showed nothing. SENDOFF probably needed the race.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $4500. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:03. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' br. c. (3) by Firethorn—Ace Card. Trained by O. White. Time, 1:11⅕.

POST CARD, $11.00, $8.00, $4.40; MAHOON, $20.00, $9.00; MAJOR HUGH, $3.40.

POST CARD, forwardly placed from the outset, wrested command from MAHOON at the furlong pole and drew clear to win easily. MAHOON raced with the pace to the furlong pole and tired. MAJOR HUGH wrested the lead nearing the stretch, raced extremely wide and recovered too late to again threaten. BALKAN lacked a menacing rally. RADICAL saved ground but failed to menace the top flight. CALL OVER broke badly. IN MY BONES tired after half mile. PHIL HARRIS quit.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $7500 added. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:36. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, b. g. (3) by Happy Argo—Hunting Party. Trained by D. K. Kerr, jr. Time, 1:10⅕.

FLEET ARGO, $18.80, $8.00, $4.80; KINSMAN, $4.40, $3.20; HIGH FREQUENCY, $7.40.

FLEET ARGO showed good speed from the start to press the pace of HIGH FREQUENCY, wore down that one in early stretch and held on tenaciously to hold KINSMAN safe. The latter was sluggish in the early running, was forced to lose considerable ground while rallying and closed with a late rush to be going best at the end. HIGH FREQUENCY set the pace into the stretch and held on fairly well. EASTERN FLYWAY, slow to settle into stride, made up ground in a good effort. BROKEN CROWN raced forwardly but lacked a menacing rally. MYSTAGOGUE tired, as did PREPARED. SULEIMAN was outrun. JESS LINTHICUM faltered after racing forwardly to the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $2000. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:06½. Start good from gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Winner, Mrs. S. Lewin's b. g. (4) by Good Goods—Polly Hundred. Trained by D. Shea. Time, 1:52⅘.

TWO G'S, $5.60, $3.60, $2.60; JOE'S SUN, $4.00, $3.00; BATTLE CLAMP, $3.80.

TWO G'S was taken under restraint when unable to stay with GAY PILATE early, wrested command on the final bend, drew clear slightly and retained his advantage to win cleverly. JOE'S SUN, rated within easy striking distance while on the inside, was taken out for his stretch challenge but was not good enough. BATTLE CLAMP raced forwardly throughout, moved well nearing the stretch but drifted out badly while tiring. SHASTA TURBAN could not threaten. MISS PEBBLE was outrun. GAY PILATE held a commanding lead for a bit more than a half mile and quit.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $4500. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Went to post at 5:35. Off at 5:35½. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. L. G. Bedwell's b. g. (6) by Gallant Gay—Andria. Trained by L. G. Bedwell. Time, 1:44.

GALLANT G. I. assumed command at once, was smartly rated and withstood the extended drive of TACARO BRIAR. The latter, steadied while forwardly placed early, rallied when set down for the drive but was not good enough. CERTIFIED, prominent from the start, tired slightly in the closing quarter. LEAMOUR rallied from well back and may improve. CARMAGO BILL showed nothing. IRON PIGEON moved well to the stretch and weakened. MARCH CHICK was through early.

Mountain Briar Wins Hunt Show

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Warrenton, Va., April 1.—Mountain Briar, owned by Courtney Burton and capably handled by Picken Hamilton of Warrenton, won the grand championship award at Spring Hill Farm in the Casanova Hunt schooling show and hunter trials today.

Col. and Mrs. H. H. Pohl's Fitzrada, who's 20-odd years did nothing to mar its smooth performance, was riden by Jane Pohl Rust to second place, finishing only one point behnd Mountain Briar.

Mountain Briar won the halfbred hunter trial event, the middle and heavyweight working hunters, the open working hunters, and took a third place in the middle and heavyweight conformation and a fourth in the open hunter trials for 18 points. Fitzrada was first in the open trials, thoroughbred trials, lightweight working hunters, and third in the open working for 17 points.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm, with a new rider, Miss Georgene Lee, saw their Moonlight Bay account for the lightweight conformation hunter and the open conformation hunter events, while stablemate Sultan's War added the middle and heavyweight green hunter blues and a third in the green hunters under saddle.

Joe Smith's Flick, a Washington entry, accounted for a nice win in the junior hunter hack class and a fourth in the junior event.

Olympia Wins Easily In Jamaica Feature

New York, April 1 (AP).—Favored Olympia galloped to an easy victory today in the $25,000-added Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica before a crowd of 50,518 customers—second largest opening day in the track's history.

It was a return to a favorite track for Olympia, Fred W. Hooper's Kentucky Derby favorite of last year.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro shot the bay 4-year-old colt in front shortly after start of the 6-furlong event, and he rolled to the wire with plenty to spare. Addison Stable's Arise was second, and Woolford Farm's Delegate third in the field of 15.

The winner was timed in 1:10 4-5 and returned $6.60, $4.60 and $3.10. Jamaica's record opening day crowd was 56,115 in 1946.

Bill Bennings Says

AT LAUREL,

Dear Folks:

Alan Clarke is beginning to believe there's a plot to buy him out of the horse business. Two of his horses, Marion Clarke and Alan C. have been claimed from him since the start of the meeting. Charles Town horses have been doing very well on the big time, having a high percentage of being both in the winner's circle, and in the money. Pity the poor guy who held a winning ticket on Saturday's $99 daily double and said, "I always hoped to cash a $100 double and the darned thing is a buck short." He didn't tear up the ticket.

While we are patting the backs of jockeys for making comebacks let's save a few kindly slaps for Lou Pikor who probably came from further back than any of them and is riding in great form now.—BILL.

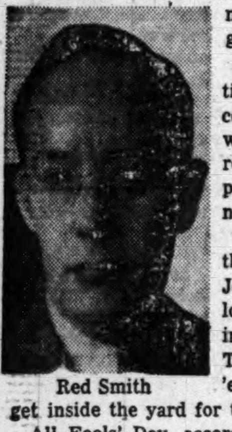
All Fools' Day—50,518 at Jamaica

By Red Smith

NEW YORK (NYHT), April 1.—In Green Bay, Wisc., Mr. Leo Vander Plas had fed the pigs and stood outside the pen with a small boy, watching the hungry scramble around the trough. Mr. Vander Plas was a contemplative man.

"They sure named them right when they called 'em pigs," he mused aloud. "Ain't they the most hoggish things you ever saw?"



Red Smith

After a great many years, his observation was recalled today when the horses, complete with mutuels, gray skies and a wind that bit like the tooth of poverty, returned to New York at Jamaica. It happened to be All Fools' Day. They sure named it right.

There were 50,518 of 'em present in the comfy corral of the Metropolitan Jockey Club, making this the most populous opening day, with a single exception, in the long history of New York racing. The exception was in 1946 when 56,115 of 'em contrived by some unnatural means to get inside the yard for the start of the first postwar season.

All Fools' Day, according to the scholars, is a universal feast which some say dates back to the abduction of the Sabine women by a pack of Roman gentlemen. This unprovoked case of taking dolls unto themselves in massed formation occurred on the feast of Neptune, April 1, and set a record for foolishness which has been commemorated ever since. Never was it memorialized in more appropriate fashion than today.

ROCKY GRAZIANO, returning to Madison Square Garden after an absence of four years, thrust enough knuckles into the choir-boy features of Tony Janiro Friday night to give the young man a fair-to-middling whipping, and was extravagantly pleased to wind up with an official draw.

The decision was the only thing that did please him, though. With the possible exception of Janiro, who was rendered somewhat puny in the late rounds, Graziano was less gratified by Rocky's performance than any other fan in the hall.

You never saw greater suspense inside a ring between the closing bell and the announcement of the verdict. Young Otto's ballot, the first to be read off, favored Janiro, five rounds to four, with one even. When he heard that, Tony dropped to one knee and blessed himself, his lips moving. Rocky paced nervously, scowling.

Artie Aidala voted for Graziano, six to three with one even. Rocky continued to pace. Tony clutched the ropes in one corner and stared at the floor, lips still moving. Then came the opinion of George Walsh, the referee. Five rounds to five, which settled nothing.

"THE POINTS," Johnny Addie continued, "are ten for Graziano, ten for Janiro." You could see both fighters pondering that, calculating. "The decision," Addie said, "is a draw."

Rocky, laughing, flung his arms about Janiro and lifted him off the floor, sort of dangling him. Tony kissed Rocky. Everybody in the ring hugged everybody else. After this affecting scene, Rocky spoke with distaste of man's love for man.

"Maybe I like the litle thus-and-such too much," he said of Janiro, whom he had reproved three times during the bout for attempting to thumb out his eyes. Graziano's eyes, both red-rimmed and bleary, testified to his fond indulgence of the little thus-and-such.

"I promised not to rough him up too much," the Rock said. "Maybe that loused me up." Only once had he mislaid his temper. In the sixth round he grabbed Janiro's profile with an open glove that heaved him across the ring, as though putting the shot. "Dammit," Rocky said, "I hate to fight a so-and-so that I like."

PERHAPS GRAZIANO'S physical edge was blunted by the head cold he took into the ring. He felt, and the customers saw, that he lacked his customery fire.

He had trouble reaching Janiro's head with a right, but in the ninth he connected and knocked Tony marble-eyed. Janiro was there to be had in that instant, but Graziano couldn't come in and get him. He said his timing was off and he couldn't find the range.

Still, he came back after losing four of the first five rounds and slugged his man severely enough to destroy anything less absorbent than Janiro's chin.

The vote here was six rounds to four in Rocky's favor. If you ignored the round-by-round point system and just asked yourself, "Who licked which?" you'd have to say Graziano.

Hoyas to Honor Dr. McCarthy

Georgetown's "G" Club has named Dr. Ralph McCarthy, Boston Red Sox team physician, as this year's outstanding contributor to Georgetown athletics among the alumni. He will receive an award at the club banquet April 20 at the Mayflower.

McCarthy, of Peabody, Mass., played center field for Georgetown in 1930 and coached the baseball team for two years after his graduation.

The award won last year by Pete Haley is presented to the individual who has done the most to foster Georgetown athletics in his community.

Ben Zola, chairman of the banquet committee, also announced that local coaches Jim Tatum, Maryland; Bo Rowland, George Washington; Staff Cassell, American U., and Jan Jankowski, Catholic U., have accepted invitations

Cambridge Wins Over Oxford Crew

London, April 1 (AP). — Cambridge's powerful eight-oared crew skimmed through the rough waters of the Thames River today to a three and a half length victory over Oxford in the 96th rowing of the world's oldest collegiate boat race.

It was the fourth straight victory for Cambridge which now has won the venerable event 51 times. Oxford has triumphed 44 times. There was a tie in 1877. Cambridge's time was 20 minutes, 15 seconds, almost 2½ minutes off the record it set in 1948.

GW, Terps Extend Football Series

Max Farrington, director of athletics at George Washington University, yesterday announced the continuation of the G. W.-Maryland football series for 1951 and 1952.

The series was resumed in 1948 after a lapse of over 20 years. This year's game will be played at College Park, as will the game in 1951. The site of the 1952 game is undecided.

Howard Fetes Fight Figures

Howard University's fifth annual boxing clinic in the school's temporary gym Tuesday at 2 p. m., will be attended by well-known fight figures.

Among those who will address the gathering are Harry Markson, general manager of New York's International Boxing Club, Lester Bromberg, the World-Telegram, and Nat Fleischer, publisher of Ring Magazine.

Also participating in the discussions will be world's lightweight king Ike Williams, leading featherweight contender Sandy Saddler, outstanding heavyweight Joe Walcott, Barney Ross, former lightweight and welterweight champion of the world, and Charlie Johnson, prominent manager.

Following the clinic, members of the Howard U. team will box exhibitions and guests will be honored at a dinner at 6 p. m.

Scrolls and medals of recognition will be presented to the visitors.

The public is invited to attend the clinic and presentation ceremonies. Dinner is priced at $2 per plate.

Texas Wins In Own Meet

Austin, Tex., April 1 (AP).—The niversity of Texas dominated its own Texas relays today with a point total of 28, earned largely through the efforts of Flyin' Charley Parker, who won the 100-yard dash in 9.6 and anchored two sprint relay teams.

Kansas State and Oklahoma A. and M. tied for second with 23 each and Kansas, which furnished the outstanding performer of the meet—Pat Bowers, great distance runner—was fourth with 18.

Bowers was selected because he ran a ¾ mile in 3:02.4 in the distance medley relay, a 4:16 mile in the 4-mile relay and a 1:52.0 half-mile in the 2-mile relay.

Sugar Ray Signs

Detroit, April 1 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson will meet Middleweight Ray Barnes in a non-title 10-round bout at Olympia Stadium here April 28.

Army Shooters Shade Terps

Balinger's 290 Leads Area Scores

Annapolis, April 1.—Maryland won the Middle Atlantic rifle championship for the second straight year, but lost its national collegiate title to Army in a photo finish here today.

ratt The Terps fired 1417/1500, same as Army was shooting at the Eastern sectionals at West Point. But the Cadets were awarded the title because of their higher 447 score from the standing position. Maryland had only 443 from the offhand stance.

Collegiate riflemen competed at 14 ranges throughout the country and the results were wired to the National Rifle Association headquarters in Washington.

Trailing Army and Maryland were Wyoming with 1415; Navy, 1411; Coast Guard Academy, 1410; George Washington, 1410; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1408, and Georgetown, 1402.

Balinger Finishes Fourth

Individual honors at the Middle Atlantic shooting were won by George Washington's Dick Balinger, a rare "left-eyed" shooter, who tied the old National Intercollegiate record with 290 out of a possible 300.

However, Dick had to be content with fourth place nationally. Herbert Boelcker, 20-year old M. I. T. student from Tonawanda, N. Y., set a record in winning the championship with 293. Then came Duane Colby, University of Washington, 291, and George Earley of Wyoming, 290. Earley nosed out Balinger in offhand shooting, 95 to 94.

Navy's Engle Has 299

Closest to Balinger here was Navy's Ray Engle with 289. Georgetown's Hank Cross, unusual bespectacled shooter, was third with 287. Maryland's John Gilbert and Navy's Tom Robinson also had 287 totals but Cross won with a slightly better offhand performance.

Woodward Eicke, jr., George Washington's defending national champ, slipped to sixteenth with 283. Eicke came back with a 287 score in the team matches to lead the Colonials' third-place finish.

Balinger made a game try to give GW the individual championship three years running. Before Eicke, Tom Moncure won for the Colonials in 1948.

Insists on Using Left Eye

Balinger, only 5-foot-5 and almost lost in his padded khaki shooting jacket, shot a perfect 100 from the prone positions; 96 kneeling and 94 offhand.

An engineering major, Balinger insisted upon following his unorthodox "left-eye" style. It's as hard to find as a cross-handed batter in baseball as rifle instructors try to steer their pupils to the right eye which generally is stronger.

Nevertheless, Balinger's style paid off handsomely here today.

INDIVIDUALS

1. Dick Balinger, GW, 290. 2. Ray Engle, Navy, 289. 3. Hank Cross, Georgetown, 287. 4. John Gilbert, Maryland, 287. 5. Tom Robinson, Navy, 287. 6. Joe Bornstein, Navy, 286. 7. Don Holmes, Navy, 285. 8. Nelson Devard, Penn State, 284. 9. Jim Wells, Maryland, 284. 10. John F. Stoufdt, Penn State, 284. 11. Charley Gillespie, Navy, 284. 12. John Niesse, Navy, 284.

TEAMS

1. Maryland, 1417 (James Maxwell, 288; George Bailey, 286; Walter Harrison, 283; James Wells, 282; Robert Jordan, 278).
2. Navy, 1411 (J. E. Niesse, 288; R. E. Engle, 286; C. R. Gillespie, 283; T. W. Robinson, 277; E. H. Woolwine, 277).
3. George Washington, 1410 (Woodward Eicke, jr., 287; Dick Balinger, 284; Fred Gunn, 283; Jim Dyer, 283; Bill Koolman, 273).
4. Georgetown U., 1402 (Hank Cross, 284; H. H. Collier, 284; A. J. Fox, 280; R. D. Bluntzer, 277; J. P. Keevers, 277).

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

ON THE TARGET—Richard K. Balinger, 2640 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va., a 23-year-old senior at George Washington University, was individual high scorer yesterday in the Middle Atlantic section of the national intercollegiate rifle meet. Balinger had a score of 290 of a possible 300 on the Naval Academy range at Annapolis

Silver Duck Wins Hunt Cup

Richmond, Va., April 1 (AP).—Silver Duck, 8-year-old gelded son of Thellusson and Hasty Lass, won the Deep Run Hunt Cup at Strawberry Hill here today.

Owned by Mrs. Beverley Bryant of Ivy, Va., Silver Duck was ridden by Bobby Motch of Cleveland, Ohio.

Silver Duck broke away just after the last of the 18 jumps to finish ahead of favored Royal Mission in the 3-mile course over post and rails.

Toyford came in third. The winner's time was 5:59.8, a new course record.

Hopes for Shot at Maxim

Brothers Boxes Vern Williams In Turner Feature Monday

Elkins Brothers meets Vern Williams in the 10-round feature bout at Turner's Arena tomorrow night.

World's light heavyweight champ, Joey Maxim, has agreed to meet the winner if he makes a good showing, according to Matchmaker Gabe Menendez.

Brothers, who has won 24 out of 27 of his fights, will have a weight advantage of about 5 pounds.

Williams, a tough Philadelphia scrapper, has won 19 of 23 bouts.

The supporting card brings together Johnny Holt and Harvey Jones, light-heavyweights, in a five-rounder and featherweights Billy Wilkinson and Red Gaddis in another five.

Four-round preliminaries pair Bobby Busick with Frank Ball, Jimmy O'Brien against Ralph Brown and Tex Newby and Scott Richardson.

Nagy Makes First Start

sion today with General Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, his son-in-law, trying without luck to wheedle a pitcher out of Cronin. The latter pointed out that the Red Sox's own pitching situation was none too happy what with sore arms affecting the staff.

Both Harris and Griffith are confessing utter helplessness in their search for more—and better—pitching. No teams are selling at this point, and the Nats have no trading material.

Their only hope is to await the squad-cutting deadline on May 18, and at that point they can expect only the culls, nothing of a solid nature.

The picture took a bit brighter turn today when Sid Hudson, after learning that his X-rays showed nothing of serious import, actually cut loose for the first time since his back injury last week. He was throwing both overhand and sidearm without pain.

BRILLIANT OPPORTUNITY GOES HUNTING FOR THE RIGHT KIND OF MEN

FORTY-TWO MEN ARE NEEDED IMMEDIATELY

We are finding them slowly but surely, and we will continue looking for them until we find our normal staff . . . then we will stop looking.

We reject more men than we accept, our standards are high but if we do accept you, you will be on your way toward at least $10,000 a year. You will be carefully trained and observed until you are good at it.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY RIGHT FROM THE VERY FIRST DAY.

The product is most unusual, as you will agree when you see it. It's amazingly versatile and enjoys unprecedented consumer acceptance.

It is because we are a new and expanding organization in Washington that we go hunting for more of the right type of men.

Just one hour of your time will convince you, beyond the shadow of doubt, that the earnings are quite comprehensive and the opportunity magnificent. Our requirements are: that you must be ambitious and willing to work as you have never worked before [illegible] You should [illegible] men [illegible] is done. You must have a car and preferably be between the ages 23 and 35. There is no canvassing. All appointments are made for you.

Right this minute we could use 42 men, several in managerial capacities. No man in our Washington office earns less than $100 weekly and there are those who earn $10,000 yearly and above. If there are any "Doubting Thomases," they can open the company's books and prove it to you. If there were only one or two up in that bracket we wouldn't mention it, but with so many men with such high earnings, you should certainly say to yourself, "If they can do it, I can, too."

It will take less than one hour of your time to investigate, to see our product and to hear more about the opportunities and high promotional opportunities. For further information, be at the

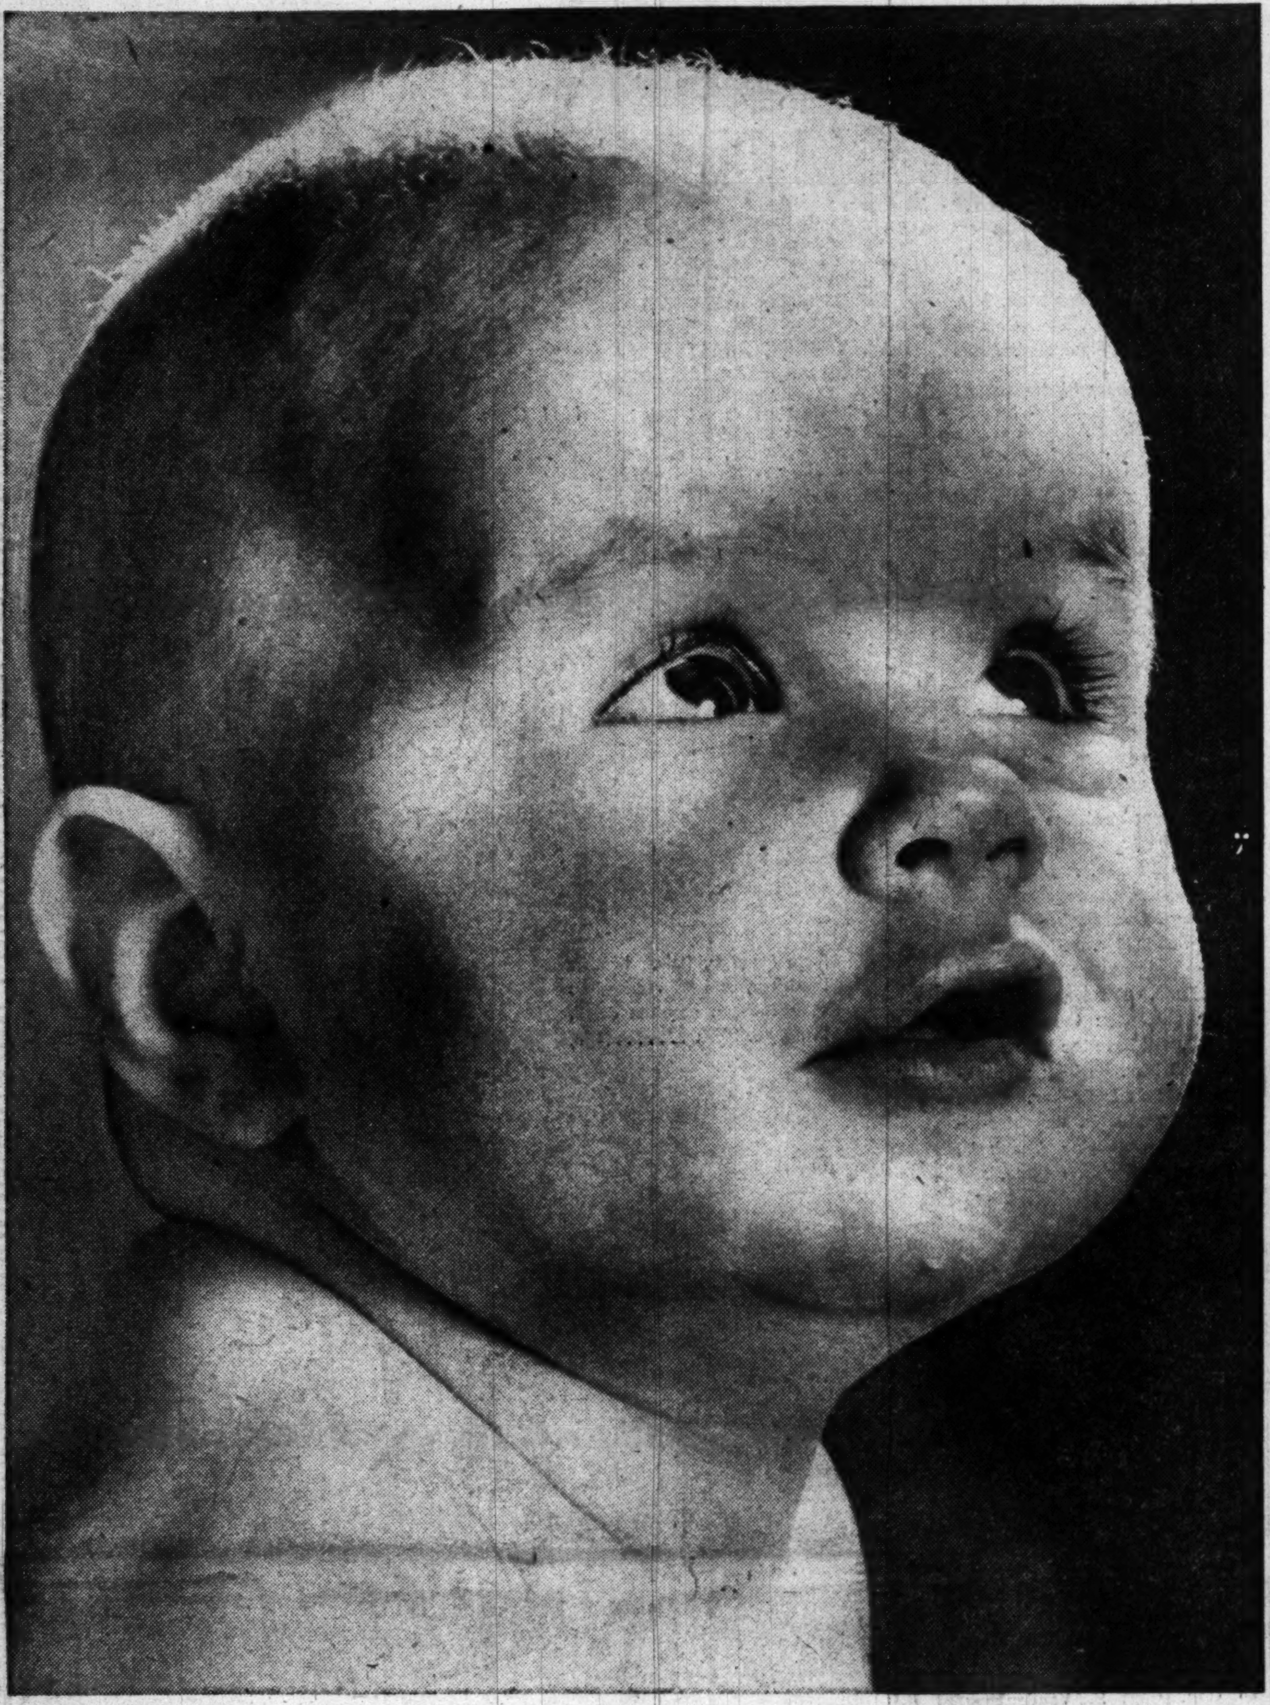
These Babies Are Bright . . . How Does Your Child Compare?



Photograph by Constance Bannister.

Do you consider it really mature to let people kiss you the very first time you meet?

HOW does your youngster stack up with the eight pictured on this page? Do you have a picture of him, or her, in an unusual pose? And can you write an amusing or appealing caption that ties in with the picture? If so, you are all set for a competition in which The Washington Post is offering weekly prizes.

The pictures shown today are taken from the book, "The Baby" (copyright, 1950, by Simon & Schuster, Inc.) On the next two Sundays, other photographs from the same book will be presented, just to give you the general idea. They are typical of what The Washington Post expects to find hereabouts.

On Sunday, April 23, the first of the winning photographs sent in locally will be published. For the picture judged the best each Sunday, The Washington Post will pay $25. It will pay $5 each for all other pictures used. The competition will continue for several Sundays.

Awards will be made on the basis both of the suitability of the entry and the caption. Pictures must be of children who were under 18 months of age when taken. The picture may be years old or brand new. The caption must accompany the photo, and the funnier it is, the better.

Pictures must come directly from the children's parents or guardians, with written authorization for their publication. Send postage if you wish the picture returned. Employes of this newspaper and their families are excluded from participation. Mail entires to:

Mary Haworth's Mail

Financially Independent, Attractive, 39, Woman Wonders Why She Prefers Freedom To Marriage; Is It Wise Choice, She Asks

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 39, reasonably attractive, with enough means to dress better than average, maintain my own apartment and car. Am I unnatural in not wanting to assume the responsibility of marriage?

Several years ago I was formally engaged and six weeks before the wedding we called it off. There were no hard feelings; we just knew it wouldn't work. Since then there have been other men and I've often wondered if there is something wrong with me. If so, it's not sex. I enjoy being loved—and it is done discreetly. But I shy away from the thought of being at someone's beck-and-call, and I get a lift out of being alone.

I am in love, or think I am, with a man who loves me. We've known each other for many years, have mutual tastes and mutual friends and he makes an excellent living. He could give me everything I have now, except freedom.

I just can't tell him bluntly that I prefer freedom to being with him, because I'm not sure it's true. I am perfectly happy when we are together, be it for an hour or a day, but afterwards there is always a feeling of relief at being alone again for a few minutes, not having to do anything I don't want to.

Always Burdened by Self Reproach

I CAN'T explain this feeling to friends and they think I am foolish not to marry and settle down. It would be so nice to have someone in your old age, they tell me; one gets so lonesome and all that sort of thing. As to having children, the thought of that is enough to keep me single permanently. It is not childbearing that scares me; it is the prospect of rearing them.

I enjoy children, other people's, knowing when I tire of them I can go home and not be bothered. With my own I couldn't do that. And while one might marry and decide "no children," still there's no guarantee that nature won't surprise you. I've tried talking things over with my doctor in search of clarification, but he says he can't help me, that it's something I must decide for myself. Am I unwise to put freedom above marriage?

D. V.

Is She Afraid of Being Known?

DEAR D. V.: Healthy personalities take to matehood and parenthood as naturally as a duck takes to water. You shy away from marriage not because you love freedom, but because you shrink in panic from being "found out" at your unconscious estimate of yourself, whatever it may be. And you are afraid of child rearing because someone made a mess of your childhood, I think.

You like being loved, you say. Which probably means that you feel somewhat comforted in your forlorn state by a would-be lover's synthetic approximation of emotional closeness. And maybe also you feel almost self confident in the role of being "wanted" as an elusive charmer, whereas you simply haven't the basic self esteem to take your chances on earning permanent acceptance in an honest, ingenuous, nonflirtatious affectional relationship with a man.

Energies Absorbed in Inner Conflict

ALL THIS insistence on being able to take or leave men, and liking solitude best, sounds to me like sour-grapes clamor. It is my guess that you've been so hurt at some past time, by not being loved when your whole being called for it, and when your very existence seemed to require it, that you are profoundly inhibited from letting yourself "care" that way again. Or it could be that you are acting out, puppet-like, some cynical rejection of love, men and marriage that your mother transmitted to you in early preachments against her fate—and against the alleged cause of it.

Whatever the background, as matters stand your emotional energies are too involved in unconscious conflict between desires and fears, to permit of normal interpersonal relations. Such relations require more than you've got to give in your neurotic state, and that is why you find people such a strain, why being alone brings a sense of relief; also why you are always going in circles, driven by inexplicable tensions.

It is understandable that a conscientious doctor might hesitate to endorse you for marriage; and yet it's possible that marriage to a good man might be your salvation psychologically. But don't expect improvement unless you work for it, and don't dramatize yourself any longer as you are.

M. H.

Planes Fly Native Products To Deck Hall for Navy Ball

The Navy has answered the call to the colors. All tickets for the annual Navy Relief Ball were taken more than two weeks before the gala event April 14.

Leis from Hawaii, fish nets and shells from the Virgin Islands, magnolia leaves from North Carolina, and palm leaves and coconuts from Miami, Fla., are being flown into the Capital to decorate the sail loft of the Naval Gun Factory for the party.

Mrs. W. K. Gates and her decorating committee already have begun the mammoth project of dressing up the sail loft for the occasion. They'll also have green bamboo from southern Maryland. And the Hawaiian Delegate Joseph F. Farrington is arranging to have giant ferns, torch ginger and antherium flown from his home island.

Mrs. Fahrion Heads Group

Mrs. Frank G. Fahrion, wife of the superintendent of the Gun Factory, is busier than ever during the closing days before the ball, putting the finishing touches on the elaborate plans. Her executive committee includes Mrs. Ray Robinson, Mrs. Howard E. Orem, Mrs. Charles Gordon DeKay and Mrs. Louis Gordon Pooler.

All proceeds will be turned over to the Navy Relief Society headed by Rear Admiral Glenn B. Davis, USN. The society is an outgrowth of the resolution by the University of Pennsylvania in 1903 to turn over gate receipts of the Army and Navy football game to a relief fund for dependent widows and orphans of officers and enlisted men of the services.

Fashionables Await Concert By Nikolaidi

A brilliant audience will welcome Elena Nikolaidi, celebrated Greek contralto, making her first Washington appearance in concert at Constitution Hall tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

The Ambassador of Greece and Mme. Dendramis, under whose patronage the singer is coming, will have the Vice President and Mrs. Barkley as ranking guests in their box. Mme. Pandora Tsaldaris, daughter-in-law of Constantine Tsaldaris, former Premier of Greece, and high ranking Government officials and their wives will complete the guest list.

Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, honorary chairman of the sponsors committee, and Mr. Dewey are having as their guests, Baron and Baroness Costa de Beauregard, Baroness de Neuflize, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who are among the concert sponsors, are hurrying back from Nassau for the concert, and Mme. Draper Boncompagni is delaying her return to New York in order to entertain friends in her box.

The Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, called away, have turned over their box to Col. Godfrey MacHugh, AF, aide to Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff. His guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clark, Miss Jane Lingo and Miss Nina Lunn.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George C. McGhee are giving a reception honoring Mme. Nikolaidi following the concert. Among those asked to meet the singer are members of the Athens College group here, friends of Mr. McGhee's in the State Department, and others who have worked for the success of the concert, proceeds from which go to the scholarship fund of the college, an American school in Greece.

The Ambassador and Mme. Studied Simplicity the Keynote of Spring Fashions

By Peggy Preston

SHORT formal frocks are the springtime favorites. Ceil Chapman designed this winsome frock, fashioned of blue and white hand-embroidered Swiss organdy. Available at Julius Garfinckel & Co.

STUDIED simplicity—the trade mark of all good fashion—is having a major inning this season. Particularly in the dress division.

The elaborate fussiness of a few years ago has vanished, taking with it the trailing, over-full skirts, dust ruffles and bric-a-brac. In its place have come smooth, fluid lines, blending together to form a pared-down silhouette.

We have, for instance, in place of honor, a 1950 version of the venerable shirtwaist frock with softly bloused top and slender, graceful skirt; cape or capelet to enliven the straight line of a skirt. Then again, lending variety and interest to a skirt, a couple of peg-top pockets.

Interest Is at the Top

THE over-all effect of the daytime silhouette is one of pronounced detail at the top of the dress. Collars, novel sleeve effects, the bloused bodice—all these contribute to the "interest at the top." Shoulderlines are rounded and the natural waistline accented with a narrow belt. Beneath the belt the skirt falls in slender lines to stop at mid-calf.

For late afternoon the silhouette widens a bit. Topflight Spring fashion, the coat dress, may have softly billowing sleeves, a skirt gathered from the waistline. Another favorite is the dress with smooth torso lines, flaring out bell-shape fashion below the knee.

Evening modes cling to the short dress in simple cocktail or formal dance versions. Here the full skirt comes into its own once more, matched with the strapless bodice that is still a reigning favorite.

BUT for important formal occasions, the party dresses this year are full length, the skirt bouffant or pencil slim. Every woman still wants at least one trailing gown in her wardrobe, even though she wears the short, more practical evening dress often.

The quiet simplicity of daytime dresses provide an excellent background for imaginative touches of trimming or accessories.

Collars and cuffs, for instance, are making almost as strong a comeback as the shirtwaist dress. "Little boy" collars, starched and gleaming white, give a debonair grace to dark woolens and early summer linens. A "Pilgrim" collar, wide and becoming, may be made of crisp pique or organdy, worn with a gray silk faille. There are yoke collars, too, of cotton eyelet that are attractive and useful. One of these may be buttoned on a strapless sun dress to transform it for street or office wear.

Flowers Stage Comeback

ARTIFICIAL flowers are having their greatest surge of popularity in several years. A happy little bunch of simulated field flowers, ready-equipped with a two-pronged pin, can be handily attached to the lapel of a suit, the brim of a hat, or the pocket of a dress. Bright flowers clustered at the wide scooped-out neckline of a dress are also effective.

Pearl studs for your long-sleeved shirtwaist . . . wide bracelets to break the line from the short cape sleeves to the wrist . . . a colorful silk four-in-hand tie for a starched collar. These are but a few of the individual touches that can make your Easter dress yours, and yours alone.

EASTER'S bloused silhouette is executed here in a costume of light gray wool. Buttoned into the divided bodice is a front-piece of sun yellow grosgrain ribbon, matching the color of the leather belt. Skirt, with peg-top pockets, is cut in redingote effect. A Martini dress, it may be ordered through Woodward & Lothrop's

Tobe' Says . . .

Way to Wear Bracelets Is Above the Elbow

WHENEVER there is a big dominating fashion such as sleevelessness in this year, a whole lot of smart accessory fashions are born, especially designed to wear with sleeveless dresses.

Perhaps the smartest and most exciting of these is the upper-arm bracelet which made the fashion headlines when it first appeared at the Paris openings in February.

These new bracelets are worn above the elbow—usually on one arm only—but sometimes in a matched pair—one on each arm. I find four different types particularly interesting—the wide bangle slave bracelet set with flat jewel stones, the big flexible gold link bracelet, the spiral snake bracelet in either gold or rhinestones, and the multi-strand pearl bracelet with a dangling clasp.

Long, Narrow Ties Make Trim Windsor Knots for Men

By Bert Bacharach

NEW TIE: Here's the new longer and narrower tie that is growing in popularity. It measures 50 to 52 inches which allows a good Windsor knot. The narrower shape has a streamlined look and fits better into conventional-sized tie holders.

BEGINNINGS: A visiting British polo player turned down the brim of his fedora to shade his eyes from the sun. Thus the snap-brim hat was born.

NEW IDEAS: There's a new silk raincoat that's so light it can be pulled through a finger ring. (Without the buttons, of course.) . . . New mattress has an adjustment to make it harder or softer . . . Plastic pant legs that can be slipped on to keep trousers dry during rainstorms. (Raincoats cover everything else.) . . . Golf bag has built-in wheels for easier self-caddying . . . Clothes hangers that are adjustable to size of garment and made to hold a supply of moth crystals.

ASCOT SCARF: Shown below is a simple way to fold the Ascot; (1), spread open a flat surface; (2), turn two opposite corners in to center; (3), fold same ends in once more; (4), last fold joins top and bottom sides; (5), give scarf loose loop

Chile's Charming First Lady

By Marie McNair

CHILE'S First Lady, beautiful, intelligent, and loved in her own country, has known all the best things of life.

And because the gods have been kind to her, she's constantly working to help the lot of her less fortunate sisters. Senora de Gonzales Videla, who'll brighten the Washington scene for a brief three days will be seeing the United States for the first time when she arrives with her husband, the President of Chile on April 12. Not only has Senora Rosa Gonzales Videla, been an important factor in her husband's career, but she's largely responsible for the progress of Chilean women. A grandmother, but no one would guess it—Senora Gonzales Videla worked consistently for women's rights, with the result that since January they've been allowed to vote.

Referring to diplomatic life, la Senora has said that in the beginning when her husband was Ambassador to France "We suffered all the inconveniences and enjoyed none of the advantages of diplomatic life. Paris, crushed by Nazi occupation, was not the 'City of Light' others had been fortunate enough to see. On the contrary, people lived in the most depressing shadow, obsessed by fear and suspicion. It was tragic to see the most sovereign country in the world in chains."

SENORA DE GONZALES VIDELA
. . . her first visit to this country

Unprepared for Diplomatic Role

IN PERFECT English Senora Gonzales Videla has told interviewers:

"I was prepared to be my husband's wife, but not to be first lady. The present panorama is altogether different. Nevertheless, I have tried to face facts with courage, loyalty to my purpose to be at all times a good companion to Gabriel. I never thought that the romantic saying, 'I could go to the end of the world with you,' would some day come home to me demanding that I should live up to it in real life."

"I thought, when I spoke those words they were only to convey the idea of love, constancy and limitless loyalty. However, the time came when I had to fulfill my promise, and I went with my husband to the end of the world, the Antarctic. On our cruise to those remote regions I also received my reward, for I would have never enjoyed such marvelous scenery and pure emotions. . . . My eyes marveled at the sight of the feast of color in the sky and mountains of ice. This is a memory I will always cherish as a dream, and refresh the spirit when depressed . . ."

SILVIA DE CAMPOS

With the Chilean First Family there's a loyalty and a bond of devotion that's good to see. One daughter, Silvia, whose husband is Alfonso Campos of the House of Representatives in Chile, will accompany her parents to Washington. Rositia is the other daughter—she's Senora Jose Clare—but she's remaining with her husband, distinguished Chilean lawyer.

The bells which will ring for the first time today at the little Wicomico Church in Virginia's Northumberland County, will toll in memory of a distinguished soldier. Mrs. Albert W. Bowley of Washington has presented the bells and the belfry in memory of her husband, Lieut. General Bowley, to the church built on the site of the old Ball chapel, worshipping place of her family for generations. A small group of Mrs. Bowley's relatives and close friends will attend the dedication today, with the presentation to be made by Gen. Albert E. Cox, and consecration by the Rev. James Baldwin, rector.

Mrs. duPont to Entertain

MRS. BOWLEY'S sister, Mrs. Alfred I. duPont of Nemours, Wilmington, Del., who owns Ditchley, the old Lee-Ball estate, will entertain at a buffet supper this evening for Mrs. Bowley's guests, and there'll be a luncheon by the ladies of the church, preceding the ceremony at Colonel and Mrs. Tignor's river home, Magnolia. Going down from Washington are the New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen, Gen. and Mrs. Anthony C. McAuliffe, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Bryden, Col. and Mrs. Walter O'Brien, Mrs. Albert Cox, Col. and Mrs. Edgar Wright and Col. and Mrs. Howard John.

Gen. and Mrs. John N. Greely left yesterday to be weekend guests of Mrs. Bowley at Edge Hill, her home not far from the church.

The Addison Bakers and Mr. and Mrs. Taliaferro Thompson will be there from Richmond, and also attending the dedication will be Dr. and Mrs. H. B. Bristow of Tappahanock, Va., and Col. and Mrs. J. Perrine Barney of Princeton, N. J.

PARRY-PHRASING

Rep. Bolton's Clock Took Half a Lifetime to Strike

By Ellen Buell Parry

IT WAS quite an occasion in Representative Frances P. Bolton's family when the clock, now hanging on the wall of her home on Wyoming ave. first struck. She remembers the very old clock from childhood days in Cleveland, but it had never run up to the time she came to Washington to live. She took the clock to the Naval Observatory, where tools were specially made to fix it, and it has been running ever since.

MRS. BOLTON

Mrs. Bolton has a superb collection of jade, and many exquisite Chinese chests. One of these houses her large radio. In her drawing room are several interesting family portraits, including one of Elisha Payne, her great-grandfather who founded Colgate College.

The Bolton residence is just one of 10 attractive houses and embassies to be open to the public during the ninth annual House and Embassy Tour on Saturday, for the benefit of the Washington Home for Incurables, of which Mrs. Bolton is an ardent supporter.

A SOMEWHAT suppressed excitement is astir across the river in Alexandria as old Seminary Hill, presently in Lenten retirement, prepares for one of its most colorful events, the Easter Monday German. ("German" is another name for a cotillion or old-fashioned ball.)

Interest will be increasingly high from now until Easter as names of the attractive young ladies who will promenade with "The Hill" gentlemen are announced.

Miss Josephine Black, daughter of Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, will lead the figure with Dr. Robert Burwell Nelson, jr., of Washington, nephew of the late Thomas Kinloch Nelson, for whom the Seminary parish house is named. Miss Virginia Avery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston Avery, will be the partner of Maj. Walter Du Bois Brookings of Menokin, and Bruce C. Gunnell, senior warden of the parish, will have as his partner Miss Gary Cunningham, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Julian Cunningham of Belle Haven.

Miss Louisa Fontaine Washington Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dawson, will be attended by Gen. William Taylor Thurman; Capt. Walter Karig will escort Miss Peggy Tompkins, daughter of the Charles Vawter Tompkins, and Capt. Leslie Richardson will squire Miss Peggy Fink, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. Beaufort Fink.

Col. William H. Crom will promenade with Miss Lucille Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Shaw, and Miss Aurilla Sweeley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sweeley, will be escorted by Archer Hobson.

No Bachelors' Cotillion this . . . but the Seminary Hill German has its own distinction, for the gentlemen taking part in the central figure of the ball are all vestrymen or former vestrymen of the historic old chapel, Immanuel-on-the-Hill.

A number of parties and small dinners honoring the participants will precede the German.

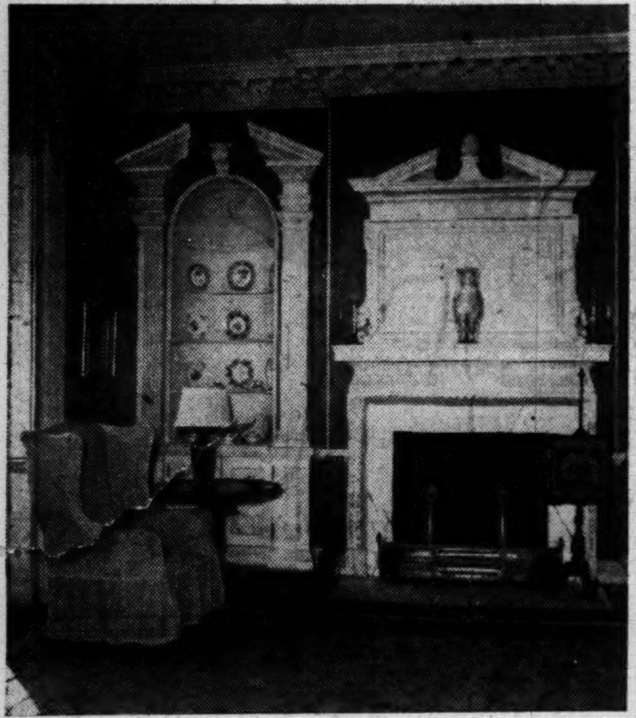
Tour of Virginia's Historic Gardens Winds Graciously Into 17th Century

DINING room at Springsbury in Clarke County has a complete set of Du Four handblocked paper made in 1810 in France. Enlarged in 1935, the new sections of the house are all in the same architectural style as the original section built in 1792. Wallpaper, lighting fixtures and furniture were brought from all over the world



GUNSTON HALL, near Alexandria, Va., was built between 1755 and 1758 by George Mason, author of the Bill of Rights and one of the framers of the Constitution. The interior, designed by William Buckland, was restored by the late Louis D. Hertle. Funds raised in the 1947 Virginia Gardens tour will be used to restore the lovely garden, which contains boxwood older than that at Mt. Vernon

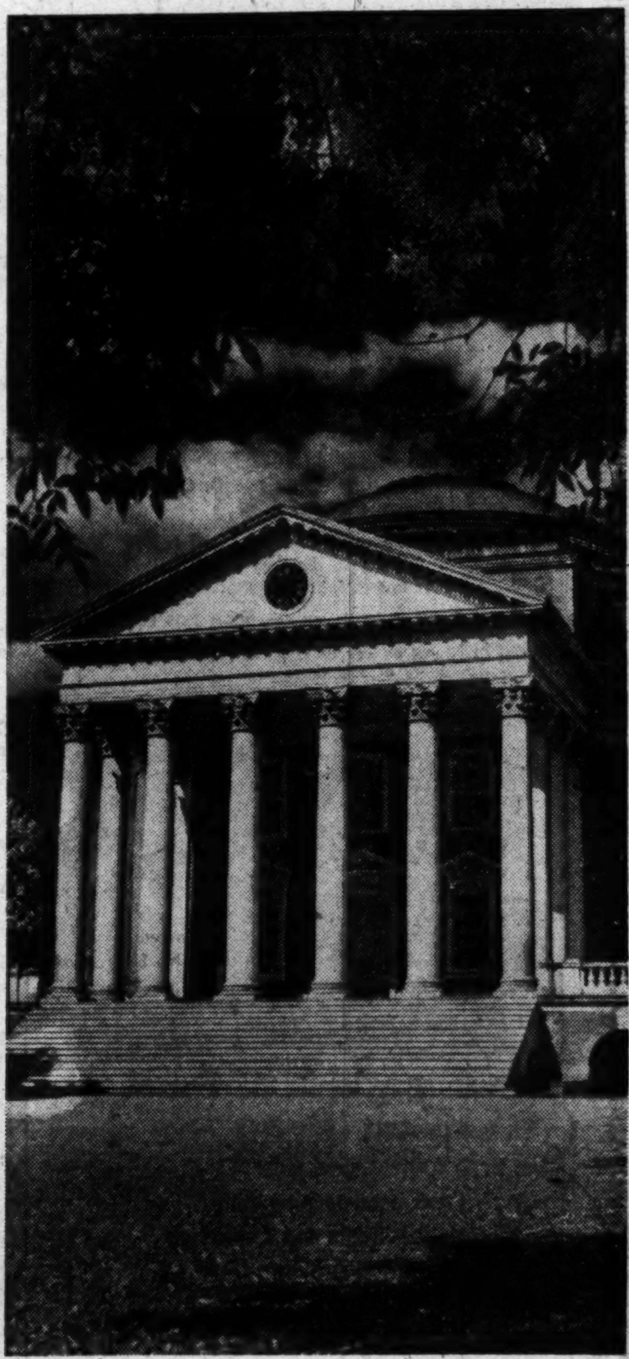
GARDENS AT BRANDON, 45 MILES EAST OF RICHMOND, WILL BE OPEN DURING VIRGINIA GARDEN WEEK



THE Rotunda at the University of Virginia, one of the public places included in the Historic Garden Week in Virginia tour, was designed by Thomas Jefferson. Adapted from the Pantheon in Rome, the building faces a quadrangle known as the Lawn, which is flanked by two parallel rows of students' rooms behind long colonnades. Students have lived there since the university opened in March, 1825. The room of one-time student Edgar Allen Poe is among the university points of interest to be open during Garden Week. Funds raised through this year's tour will be used to help restore the gardens at the university exactly as they were planned by Jefferson

By Sonia Stein

IT'S JUST a piece down the road to the seventeenth century. You can follow the azalea petals, the iris and the dogwood along the country roads of Virginia until you come to little islands of seventeenth and eighteenth century colonial beauty—preserved within earshot of the humming twentieth century highways.

The flowering glory of the Old Dominion is yours for the wandering. And during the last week of April almost 200 private estates and a number of historical shrines will be open to the public in connection with the annual Historic Garden Week in Virginia which raises funds for restoration of gardens throughout the State.

For tourists the trip back to colonial Virginia is easy, but there's been many a furrowed and toil-stained brow, many a blistered hand, in battle to preserve these Virginia estates from time and termites.

Take Toddsbury in Gloucester County, where houses will be open only on April 27 and 28 this year. Built sometime before 1658, it is a perfect example of pure William and Mary architecture with sturdy brick walls and gambrel roof. Standing in a park of oak and walnut trees in a little triangle created by the North River, Toddsbury had all its original paneling, wide fireplaces and shutters when it was purchased in 1946 by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bolitho.

Just a Bit Premature

ON ADVICE of architect, the Bolithos figured to restore the house in about three months time. The estimate was a bit off—about two years and three months off. In that period of tribulation the Bolithos discovered that their doorsills had been furnishing nourishment for generations of termites, that their windows—flung wide open to let in the Virginia breeze—would fall out on the lawn, and that during the high spring tide the hospitable old house opened wide its cellar to the rising river.

Then there was the day the steel brace was installed to support the sagging second story—and every inch of plaster split on every wall and ceiling in the house.

High point in the tribulations occurred the days the Bolithos' precious furniture arrived from Paris. After surviving seven years of war, packing, shipping and the rigors of customs' red tape the furniture finally came into view in a huge moving van. Then, while the Bolithos watched helplessly, the entire van began to sink out of sight—down, down, down into a hidden underground cistern.

Van, drivers and furniture were rescued and today Toddsbury contains some exquisite pieces of old world art. The dining room, often called the most unusual in Virginia, has blue woodwork with Chinese tea paper panels, a fifteenth century Ming table and old Canton China. The silver includes a George II tea service, eighteenth century English, Russian and French porringers and pitchers. In the library is a 1300 B. C. Pentelican torso, a bronze by Rosa Bonheur and a seventeenth century bracket clock.

Restored the Original Charm

THE BOLITHOS—he is an expert on historical research and she is a student of archaeology—have installed their foreign treasures harmoniously in the restored William and Mary house and have brought back the walled one-acre garden.

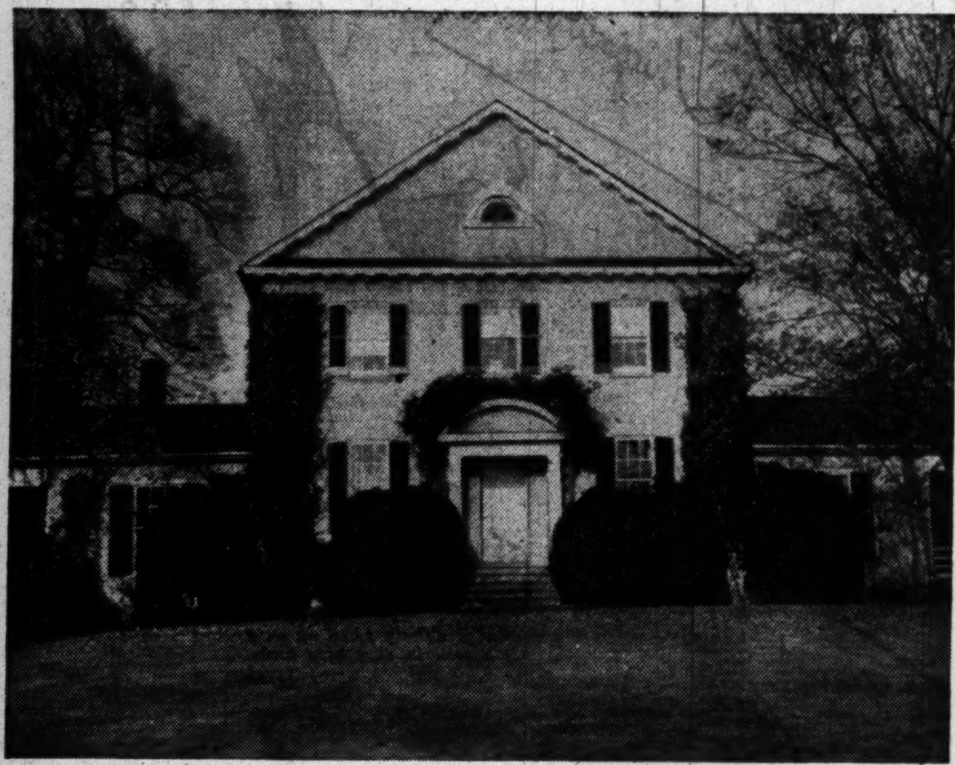
Most of the 200 homes and gardens included in the tour have had a similar history of painstaking restoration and furnishing. Springsbury in Clarke County, built on land surveyed before the Revolutionary War by George Washington, was constructed in 1792. When the present owners, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, wanted to enlarge the mansion in 1935, they called in the architects who had restored Williamsburg to draw the plans for enlarging the house.

Landscaping and interior decoration were also turned over to experts. The decorator traveled all over the world to get items she considered suitable for Springsbury, including a Waterford glass lighting fixture she found in a Shanghai warehouse, a pair of massive bronze eagles—now attached to the Springsburg gateposts—which had been used at the lodge gate of a huge British estate, and a complete set of original Du Four handblocked paper made in 1810 in France, which is now on the dining room walls.

Gunston Hall, Fairfax County home of George Mason, who authored the Bill of Rights, was beautifully restored by its late owner, Louis D. Hertle, who bequeathed it to the Commonwealth of Virginia. The gardens are to be restored through funds raised by the 1947 Garden Week Tour. There is much priceless boxwood contained in these gardens, some of it believed to be parent bush of boxwood growing on the estate of George Mason's friend, George Washington.

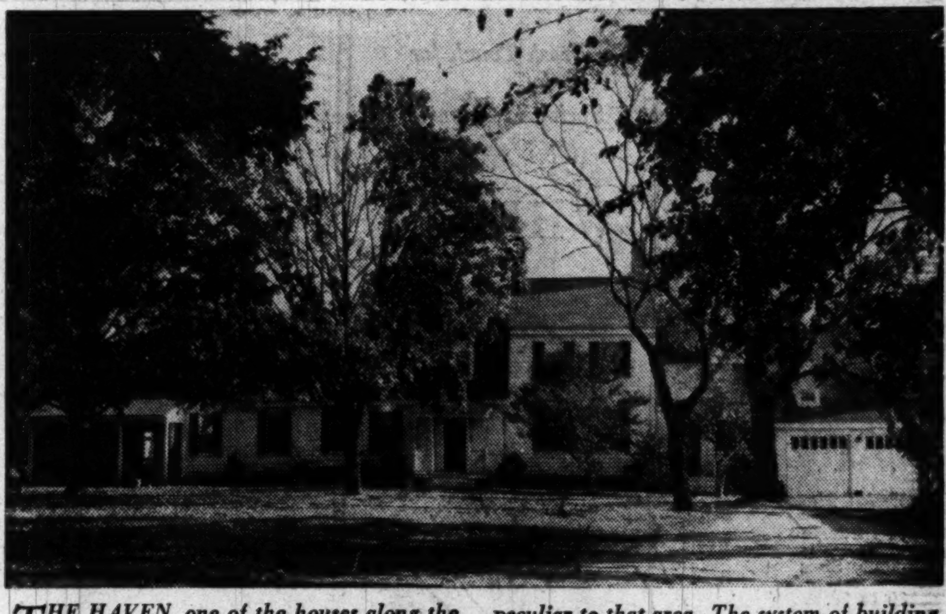
Kenmore, the home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington, is among the most popular places included in the tour. A desire to preserve and restore Kenmore inspired the first tour in 1929.

Since then a number of other gardens of historic interest have been restored through funds raised by the tours—including those at Monticello, the Woodrow Wilson garden in Staunton, and the grounds around Lee Chapel at Washington and Lee University. Proceeds of last year's and this year's tours will be used to restore the gardens at the University of Virginia. The early stages of the garden work, and restoration of the old serpentine walls at the university is already in progress—all of it conforming as exactly as possible to plans drawn by Thomas Jefferson and preserved by Peter Maverick, a New York engraver.



OAKWOOD stands in a magnificent grove of oaks, two centuries old. The house commands a broad view of the Blue Ridge Mountains and the Piedmont Valley. The original house was built by Col. Martin Pickett on a grant of land given him for service in the Revolution. Oakwood will be open Tuesday and Wednesday of Garden Week

A GUEST HOUSE at Kinloch, halfway between Charlottesville and Gordonsville. The original garden has been divided into 11 landscaped gardens, each treated as an outdoor living room. A hedge of box trees, 200 feet long and 25 feet high, runs along one end of the garden area, making a beautiful background for the roses, lilacs, iris, dogwood and herbs which have made the gardens of Kinloch famous. The main house on the estate was originally built as a home for the overseer on the vast Belvoir estate. Kinloch is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Linton Reynolds Massey



THE HAVEN, one of the houses along the Eastern Shore, typifies the "big house, little house, colonnade and kitchen" houses peculiar to that area. The system of building is attributed to a desire to cut down on the number of windows, which were taxable

MORVEN PARK in Albemarle County was originally known for the fine architecture of the house, built in 1825 by Gov. Thomas Swann of Maryland. But a newer development of equal interest is the fine boxwood garden planted by the late Gov. Westmoreland Davis and Mrs. Davis when the Governor and his wife retired

Tour Schedule

During Garden Week in Virginia—April 22 to 29—182 private estates and a number of churches and historic shrines will be open to the public. The tour is sponsored by the Garden Club of Virginia. Tickets, which may be purchased at the houses, cost from 25 cents to $1, plus tax, for each house, or in some cases $1 to $2.50, plus tax, for a group of houses. Further information is available through the Virginia State Travel Bureau, 1731 K st. nw., or the George Mason Hotel and the Chamber of Commerce in Alexandria, Va.

Our Babies Quickly Learn that It's a Noisy Old World

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

EVERY MOTHER is swayed by her own experiences and tends to make rules to coincide with them. But what works well with one child may not succeed with another.

If home circumstances are such that a noisy environment is inescapable, as is the case when a family must live close to noisy transportation systems or to noisy factories, then, it must be hoped that the children will sift out of their consciousness the noise which is disturbing and be able to live with it. But, if it isn't necessary, then there is little use to expose a child to extraordinary noise, for the nerves do pay the toll.

Mrs. P. G. is talking about ordinary household noises and children do have to get used to noise. "I read about the mother who is keeping her baby's room absolutely quiet and I say she is paving the way for chronic insomnia.

"Our first two children were reared in an apartment in a crowded court. It was impossible to keep noise away from the apartment and it never worried us, as our babies learned to sleep right through any noise the neighbors made, even when their children played right under the window. They were both good babies and rarely cried.

"By the time our little boy was born we had moved to a single house in a quiet neighborhood. He was a good baby, too, but the slightest noise would waken him. For a while I cautioned his sisters to be quiet, shushed the dog's barking, worried when we had company. But it gradually dawned on me what was the reason for his light sleeping.

"Thereafter, I made no effort to quiet the ordinary noises of the household, in fact, I deliberately kept on the radio all day, whether he was asleep or not, in order to get him accustomed to the noise.

"Our three children are happy, healthy and can sleep through anything. I do not believe in picking up a baby when he cries for attention. I always talk lovingly to my babies but why give them a reward for crying? I have carried that principle into their childhood and so my children do not whine and nag at me.

"Of course, I know that crying is the only way by which a child can demand attention for a wet diaper, an uncomfortable position, gas and what have you; however, with experience, a mother learns to distinguish between the spoiled cry and the one which says, 'Ma, I need help'."

It is still a poor policy to lay down a rule that a baby shall not be given attention when crying. Too few young mothers have the experience necessary to differentiate between a baby's needs and desires, so rather err by giving too much attention rather than too little.

'Grew Up Everywhere'

East and West Meet in Madame Koo

(This is the twenty-second in a series of stories on embassy homes, hosts, and hostesses).

By Elizabeth Maguire

WIFE of the Ambassador from China, Mme. Wellington Koo brings to the West the charms of the East. Centuries of background and a lifetime of travel have given her a poise that's unique, full of grace, and deep as still waters.

Daughter of a merchant prince, she says "I grew up everywhere—Burma, Malaya, China." Her perfect English was taught by an English governess, and she speaks at least five other languages.

Mme. Koo has been referred to as one of the wealthiest women in the world. Her palace in Peking was noted for its fabulous furnishings, its several hundred rooms, its jade, porcelains and priceless rugs.

Now Mme. Koo has no thought of returning home. At the mention of a trip, she shrugs her shoulders and says "Communists." Both of her sons have left China, one to live in New York, the other in the Philippines. Her own last visit to Shanghai was in June, 1948.

"I plan to go to the Orient," she says, "but not to the China mainland. I may go to Formosa. I might go to Siam." Meanwhile, she busies herself attending meetings on China and raising money for Chinese hospitals in Formosa.

Embassy Furnished With China's Art

ALTHOUGH not quite a palace, the embassy here is also furnished with beautiful Chinese objets d'art. Woven silk in delicate shades of yellow, chartreuse, robin egg blue, pink and lilac cover heavy pieces of black teakwood, and floors are covered with flowered rugs from China. General Chiang Kai-shek's picture occupies a place of honor in the embassy drawing room.

Outside are 22 acres of rolling lawn and a terrace flanked by giant twin oaks. Twin Oaks is the name of the estate—one of Washington's favorite spots for parties. In past summers, Mme. Koo has entertained hundreds here at outdoor receptions. Her buffets were unsurpassed. Because of the international situation, however, entertainments at the embassy have become smaller and more intimate.

Guests may dwindle, but Mme. Koo continues to fill the house with flowers

Likes Natural Flower Arrangements

"I'M THE despair of gardeners," she laughs. "I just snip whatever I see that's pretty. I love arranging flowers myself too—just loose—I don't like artificiality."

Her arrangements certify her taste for the natural. A huge mass of golden forsythia brightens the hallway, a tall branch of apple blossoms fills a library window and white dogwood seems etched across a dark wall panel.

Mme. Koo herself is one of the most arresting figures in Washington. Her taste in dress is quite artistic, sometimes dramatic. At the last diplomatic reception held at the White House, Mme. Koo made an entrance which drew audible gasps of admiration. Her dress on that occasion was black velvet, designed with sparkling silver roses, and her little feet were like streaks of light.

Her jewelry includes rare museum pieces. She prefers jade and emeralds. An emerald ring she often wears is almost an inch square, and it is considered a perfect stone. "My mother had it years ago from the Sultan of Soerakarta. That's in Indonesia," she explains. Antique gold, diamonds, rubies fill her jewel case.

Embassy Houses Three Pekinese

ALSO a jewel in Mme. Koo's eyes is her pet Pekinese whom she calls Moh-Yu or Black Jade. Two other Pekes who make their home at the embassy are Yu-Lan and Yin-Chou—in English they would be Magnolia and Ermine. When the three dogs bounce down the steps, the Ambassador's wife announces "My compatriots."

Although celebrated for her hospitality, Mme. Koo is personally a teetotaler, and never takes cocktails.

A favorite hobby of hers is cooking. "I have a stove of my own in a little room off the kitchen. The chef cuts and peels but I cook—everything from Hungarian goulash to chop suey."

In speaking of China, Mme. Koo says people don't realize how widely the American influence has spread.

Mme. Koo's world has changed, but her quiet manner and her wise looking eyes show no signs of disturbance.

Harris & Ewing

IN BLACK and white checked Chinese taffeta, Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, poses for her portrait. A band of antique gold circles her collar, and her ear rings are carved jade set with small diamonds. Her emerald ring is a perfect stone, once owned by the Sultan of Soerakarta.

Clean Your Rugs Frequently To Insure Beauty, Long Life

THE current popularity of delicate pastel colors in carpeting makes proper care of rugs and carpets an obvious necessity. The investment you made when you bought your rug should be respected. Wall-to-wall carpeting and long-skirted furniture tend to make people more careless. Because dust and dirt under carpet edges and heavy furniture don't show, they are likely to be left there. These dark and tranquil spots are ideal homes for hungry moths.

Herbert Beshar, head of the rug and carpet firm of A. Beshar, feels that professional repair and cleaning such as his firm does would be greatly aided if the carpet owners would take daily care of their carpeting and rugs.

Rugs Are Neglected

"IT IS amazing," said Mr. Beshar, "that fastidious home owners will take care of everything in their home except their rugs. For maximum wear, wools should remain soft and pliable.

"When dirt gets in, little by little it flattens down the pile and all the wear is at the base of the tuft, the weakest point. The dirt also forms a grinding agent which does endless damage."

The Carpet Institute recommends a light daily cleaning with a vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper. Once a week, vacuum thoroughly. A light cleaning consists of three strokes with the cleaner over each area of carpeting, and a thorough cleaning counts up to seven separate strokes.

There are many types of cleaners, both liquid and dry, for home treatment of rugs. Care must be taken that these are applied properly so as not to leave rings and it must be noted that all cleaners will not remove all types of soil. If you undertake the shampoo job yourself, make sure that the carpet is dried thoroughly and as quickly as possible. Shrinkage and mildew can result from slow drying.

Remove Spots Quickly

MOST spots on carpeting can be removed right in the home if proper methods are followed. Quick action is imperative. If you catch the spot before it has a chance to set in the body of the carpet, the chances of removing it are better.

A booklet called "Care of Your Carpets and Rugs" is available without charge from the Carpet Institute, 350 Fifth Avenue, New York City. The sections on home cleaning and spot removal are valuable for home reference.

Like Peter Piper, Reader Wants To Pick a Peck of Pickles—and Sell Them; Anne Offers Advice

MAKING PIN MONEY from pickles is an idea that has lured good cooks since long before grandma's day.

There's a lot more to such a project now, however, than just trotting back to the kitchen and working in tune with a treasured recipe. Realizing this, M. M. has written:

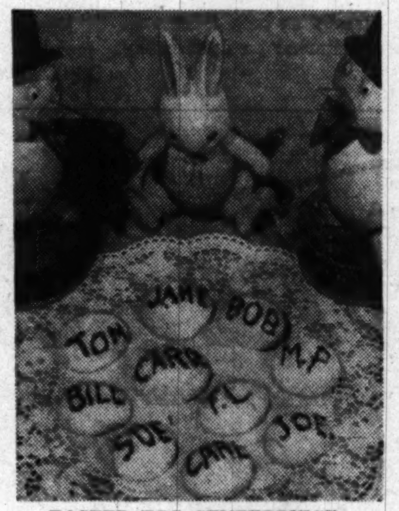
"Please advise me the legal steps, pure food laws, etc., that must be obeyed to market in jars a delicious homemade pickle relish."

First of all, M. M., since you live in the District of Columbia, you must be situated in a "commercial" zone to manufacture pickle for sale. If you're not sure about the zoning of your area, check with the District Building Inspector. You'll have to file for an "occupancy permit" at his office in the District Building, 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Once this is granted, your next step is to get a delicatessen license. For this apply to the Superintendent of Licenses, Municipal Center, 300 Indiana ave. nw. When you have both the occupancy permit and delicatessen license, you'll be ready to go into the pickle-packing business in the District.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a suggestion for decorating an Easter ham?
L.K.,
Washington

Cut tulips out of orange peel. (They're easy to do. Just make them bell-shaped with three points like petal-tips at the end.) Make the long slender leaves and stems with cucumber peel, and arranged all in a spraylike effect atop the ham after it's baked. Fasten on with toothpicks, unobtrusively placed.



EASTER EGG CENTERPIECE
. . . write names with melted chocolate

DEAR ANNE:
Will you please tell me a good fondant recipe for use in Easter eggs?
Mrs. J. Y. Bailey
Leesburg, Va.

MAGIC EASTER FONDANT
2/3 cup sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 cups sifted confectioners' sugar

Blend sweetened condensed milk and vanilla. Gradually add confectioners' sugar, mixing until smooth and creamy. Divide into several lots and tint each a different shade with vegetable coloring, if desired. Shape into eggs and roll very lightly in a little confectioners' sugar. Let dry thoroughly on a piece of waxed paper. Decorate with chocolate and use as centerpiece.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me again the name and address of the picture framer who will back with cardboard and shellac maps and posters for wall hangings?
Eleanor E. Timberg
3519 Porter st. nw.

I believe you must be thinking of Lewis L. Newkirk, whom we mentioned as doing such work with prints for the National Gallery of Art. He occasionally fills individual orders when time permits and is listed in the telephone book.

DEAR ANNE:
Regarding the recent discussions in your column on cleaning scum from plastic shower curtains, the best thing I have found for this purpose is the pink wax cleaner introduced a year or two ago. It is very easy to apply and leaves them sparkling.
Harriet W. Mayfield
Arlington, Va.

DEAR ANNE:
I will shortly be taking a sea trip and would appreciate it if you could advise me the best way to pack a silk velvet dinner dress in order to avoid its crushing.
J. C.,
Washington

Keynote to keeping clothes from crushing is plenty of tissue paper. Pack the gown in your largest suitcase and place paper liberally in all the folds so no sharp creases will be formed. Also, pack the gown at the top of the bag. Although it may stand on its side often during the sea trip, when it's flat the bag is likely to be set down right side up. The weight of other clothes will not press down the velvet if it's at the top.

FLUFFY BREAD STUFFING: Ingredients—6 slices day-old bread, ¼ cut butter or margarine or other fat, 2 tablespoons finely diced onion, ½ teaspoon salt, 1/16 teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 teaspoon celery salt.

Method: Cut crusts from bread sparingly; slice into tiny dice. (There should be 3 lightly packed cups of bread.) Melt fat in medium-sized skillet, add onion and cook over low heat until partly tender, stirring often. Onion should not be brown. Add diced bread and heat for a few minutes, stirring as it crisps slightly. Remove from heat and sprinkle with salt, pepper, poultry seasoning and celery salt; mix well. Where Did You Get That Hat?

'Don't Blame Me, Blame Mrs. Moody'

By Dorothy Roe

NEW YORK, April 1 (AP):—If your husband doesn't like your new spring hat, here's how to answer him:

"Don't blame me, blame Maud Moody."

For the last 20 years, the shape, angle and trimming of Mrs. America's hats have been determined largely by one woman, little known elsewhere but as powerful as Stalin in the millinery industry.

She is a plump, jolly soul with twinkling brown eyes who doesn't look like a dictator at all. But for almost a generation her smile or her frown has decided America's hat styles.

Mrs. Maud Moody has just retired as millinery editor of Women's Wear Daily, the trade paper known throughout merchandising circles as the "buyers' Bible." If Mrs. Moody did not like a hat, and said so, the buyers stayed away in droves. But if she picked a certain style as the season's hit, buyers from all over the country fought to place their orders.

Her 'Go' Sign Starts the Business

SINCE her retirement, after 28 years with Women's Wear (20 as millinery editor) Mrs. Moody has opened her own office as a millinery consultant. Hat manufacturers have developed such respect for her opinion that many of them refuse to show a collection until Mrs. Moody has seen it, edited it, and given the finished product her okay.

This czarina of the hat business drifted into the fashion field purely by chance. After a privileged childhood which included frequent European travel, education at proper schools, a final debutante polish in New York and a youthful marriage, she found herself faced with the necessity of earning a living.

She got a job as a salesgirl in a New York department store. There she investigated all departments, including millinery, and rolled up an enviable record.

During the first World War she left merchandising to work for the Red Cross, and after the Armistice was offered a job on Women's Wear.

Has a Sixth Sense About Hats

DURING the years, Mrs. Moody developed almost a sixth sense as to hat styles, so that after looking at hundreds of hats she suddenly would pick one and say "That's it."

Her column the next day would carry the news that a particular cloche, or sailor, or beanie was slated as the No. 1 hit on the season's hat parade.

In her remodeled colonial house in South Salem, N. Y., where she spends weekends fussing in the garden or composing food poems in the kitchen, Mrs. Moody discussed her unique career and the mysterious business of women's hats. Said she:

"There's no real reason why a certain hat style is popular at a certain time. It's just something that happens. A designer has the idea, an editor tells the world about it, store buyers order it and women buy it."

"Most women think of only one thing when they go to select a new dress or hat—they want one just like their next-door neighbor's. They want to look like everybody else. That's called fashion."

"Women will wear anything just so it's fashionable," says Mrs. Maud Moody, recently retired millinery editor of Women's Wear Daily who now has her own office as a millinery consultant. Here she looks over some spring styles in a New York wholesale millinery establishment. Mrs. Moody's approval of a hat style is said to cause buyers to place orders. If she frowns, no sale

Exercise Can Be Fun If You Go About It Right

By Ida Jean Kain

ARE YOU having any fun with your exercise workouts? It's the way you feel about them that counts. Make exercise a duty to be hurried through, begrudging the time, and it's all work and no play. Or if you're bored stiff and highly skeptical as to the benefits, exercise does little good.

Go at them gaily and they really can be fun and leave you all aglow. Exercise can lift the spirits, tone muscles and help you to feel more vitally alive. At the finish you should be literally an inch taller . . . and feel infinitely slimmer . . . you really should!

FIRST, swing into a stretching routine that wakes up that dead area all along the lateral muscles bounding the sides of the figure. Make it a real stretch . . . Lift right arm upward, pointing right to slightly sidewards, then pull all along the right side extending the stretch to the limit. Hold for a second, then release as the arm curves backward and swings down. Pull again, this time along the left side. Do this rhythmically six or a dozen times, not making work of it, but just feeling a release of tension and a carefree lift.

Now shift to an entirely different set of muscles—the big ones padding the back of hips. Stretch arms out in front, keep shoulders easy, and, chorus-girl style, swing right leg up and touch outstretched fingers of right hand—knees straight. See if you can hold arm at shoulder level. Swing up with left leg, touching left hand. This right-angle swing definitely slims the hips.

Work it Up Gradually

VARY the routine by swinging leg across and touching right toes to left hand . . . and then swing and touch left toes to right hand. Don't keep at it too long the first few days. Easy does it. Working up gradually makes for more flexibility.

Exercise can be fun and freeing . . . and done that way, it's wonderfully slimming.

Fate of Record Housing Boom, Home Purchases, Up to Congress

By Conrad P. Harness

THE FUTURE of the housing industry is in the hands of five Senators and seven Representatives.

They are members of a Senate-House Conference Committee to iron out differences in a House and Senate passed housing bills. Their first meeting will be held tomorrow. They are expected to come up with a bill for congressional approval by April 15.

When Congress recently killed the cooperative housing feature of recent housing bills, critics said the action was a blow to families making an annual wage of $2500 to $5000.

But a closer look at the final measure passed by both the House and Senate, but in different form, reveals that middle-income families can receive a strong helping hand from Uncle Sam in the purchase of a home.

The cooperative housing bill contained several important, but relatively unpublicized, provisions. They'll be of vast importance to the husband and wife out inspecting model homes for sale.

For example, the House bill contained a provision that qualified veterans can take up to 30 years to pay off their mortgage on a GI loan. The existing maximum is 25 years. The five years difference could mean the difference between buying or not buying for veterans in the lower wage groups.

This additional five years could make it much easier for a family to purchase a home because the monthly payments are reduced. But this extention of the mortgage loan period is not

$100 Baltimore Apartments Decontrolled

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods has approved an informal recommendation of the Baltimore Rent Advisory Board to remove rent control from certain housing accommodations in the Baltimore defense-rental area.

Decontrolled were unfurnished housing units of not more than five rooms whose monthly rental is more than $100. Another stipulation was that such housing must be located in buildings containing more than four rental units.

The board's recommendation was based on a survey by the OHE which indicated that the demand for the type of housing accommodations decontrolled has been reasonably met.

Prefer Light Living Room to 'Outside Kitchen'

Young married women workers queried on their preferences as to arrangement of apartment units in a large New York project, favored a centrally located kitchen and bath in order to give more light and air to bedrooms and living rooms. Placing of the kitchen deep inside the 16-story buildings of this particular project also made it possible to have a separate entrance for the kitchen, larger room sizes, and smaller corridor spaces.

Proposed Bill Would Lower Monthly Home Payments

yet law. The House-Senate conferees must agree on such an extension first.

But since the provision appears to have an excellent chance of adoption, here is how it would work. Say a veteran buys a $9000 home. He has a little cash saved up so he pays $900 or 10 percent down, leaving $8100 to be financed.

Monthly payments to cover the remaining $8100 at 4 percent over 25 years would be about $42, plus taxes and fire insurance. But when the payment period is spread five or more years to 30, the monthly payment slides back to about $38.50, plus taxes and fire insurance. The latter two items will average out nationally to about $10 to $15 monthly.

Need Combined Loans

THUS, providing the House-passed measure is okayed by the conference committee, and becomes law, the veteran with a take home pay of $50 weekly could afford a $9000 home.

The Senate had a different idea on helping the veteran buy a home. It passed a provision in the cooperative bill changing the VA home loan guarantee maximum from $400 to $7500.

The added $3500 Government guarantee was designed to lure more mortgage money into the 4 percent GI loan field, making it easier for the GI to finance his home.

The organized building industry feels that the most important provision the conference committee will study is a provision permitting GI-FHA combination loans to continue to the end of 1950. The Senate version would terminate them 180 days after enactment.

Frank W. Cortright, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, pointed out yesterday that the combination loan provided an excellent method of furnishing construction loans so the house could be erected, plus a most attractive financing plan for the ultimate buyer.

The combination loan was responsible in large measure for the record-breaking production last year of over one million new homes and apartments, he pointed out.

Financing Required

ORGANIZED veterans' groups, topped by the American Legion, have asked Congress to outlaw the combination loan. The Legion spokesmen say the FHA part of the loan, at 4½ percent interest, is unfair to veteran buyers.

Veterans should be able to purchase homes paying only 4 percent for the entire mortgage, it is claimed. The building industry's leaders have agreed, but point out that lending institutions favor the 4½ percent interest rate over the GI home loan at 4 percent.

"The building industry can build anything it can finance," Cortright commented. He indicated that if legislation is authorized continuing the combination loans that the building industry could break last year's production record.

The House also approved another amendment of vital interest to the prospective home buyer. It gave a Government agency called Federal National Mortgage Association the sum of 750 million dollars with which to buy VA and FHA loan mortgages from lending institutions.

This is a "pump priming" measure which gives the lenders more money to lend to other home buyers. Since FNMA buys only mortgages of $10,000 or under, it is a hint to the smart builder to build for that market. The man who builds $25,000 mansions is out in the cold as far as Government financing aids are concerned.

Aid for Nonveterans

CORTRIGHT declared that the Spring home building rate was expected to zoom to such heights that the 750-million-dollar authorization could conceivably be used up within three weeks after it was authorized.

Unless further purchases of mortgages were made by FNMA, he said, the fast moving building industry would be slowed considerably.

Nonveterans (and veterans) are promised additional aid in purchasing homes through the FHA plan of insured mortgages. The House approved amendment would allow the FHA to insure loans covering 95 percent of the appraised value of the home, with up to 30 years to pay, in "high cost" areas.

Washington has been famous for years as a high cost town, so it undoubtedly could qualify under this provision if the conferees approve the House version.

If approved, a buyer could purchase an $8000 home for only $400 down, the rest financed at small monthly payments over 30 years. It would also be an incentive for more builders to operate in the $7000 to $8000 price brackets.

The building industry has urged the House-Senate conferees to include this provision in the final bill which is sent to the President for his signature.

Carroll-Lipnick to Build 13 Homes in Arlington

Thirteen homes will be built in the 3100 and 3200 blocks of 13th rd. S. and 1330 S. Highland st., Arlington, by Carroll-Lipnick Development Co., Inc. The permit has been issued.

Builder Cuts Costs of Walls and Roof

A Connecticut builder has found a way to cut the cost of walls and roofs in low-cost housing. For the walls two layers of tongue and grooved fir planks with three-quarter-inch layer of insulation between are used. The exterior wood layer forms the exterior finish, and the interior layer the interior finish.

Tongue and grooved fir planks left exposed for the ceiling are laid over the roof rafters. The roof is built up felt, tar and gravel surface on insulating board, fastened to the fir planking.

One bedroom apartments will rent for $55, two bedrooms for $65. Most utilities are included. The project will be called Addison Chapel Apartments. Located at Addison Chapel rd., near 52d st., in nearby Prince Georges County, Md., it will be for Negro occupancy.

The project is only one of many under way or planned by Banks & Lee, Inc., one of the biggest contracting organizations on the East Coast. It is headed by William S. Banks, past president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

Built Many Rentals

OTHER developments, for white occupancy, include the 400-unit University City Apartments at University Lane and Riggs rd.; Ager Terrace, 192 units on Ager rd., both in Prince Georges County, Md. Rentals are in the $68 to $79 bracket, with utilities.

Banks also built the 210-unit Riggs Manor, in nearby Maryland, and the 300-unit Lloyds Apartments, adjacent to Parkfairfax, in Alexandria, Va.

Other apartments include Woodside Manor, Meurilee Arms and Cobur Terrace, in Maryland, and the vast 560-unit Fillmore Park in Arlington.

Banks & Lee, Inc., has built 400 semidetached, brick and frame two-story homes in Huntington, a post-war subdivision developed by the owners. Two hundred more are to be erected there to sell below $10,000. Eighty-eight apartment units have been completed and occupied, also.

$16,000 Ramblers

FUTURE operations include 135 row brick homes in the Rosemont section of Alexandria to sell for between $9000 and $10,000. A project of 130 brick ramblers off exclusive Wilson la., Bethesda, opposite the Langdon School, will start within two months. Prices are expected to be about $16,000, Banks said yesterday.

As one of the Nation's top producers of housing, Banks is considered an authority on realty and building trends. He said there is still a heavy demand for rental units and that both his newly completed City and Ager Terrace Apartments had been completely rented.

This was accomplished, Banks added, in spite of the fact that bus service, phone and shopping facilities are still limited.

Pointing out that home sales are still booming, he declared there is still plenty of demand for both homes and apartments. He forsees no overproduction of rental properties.

He predicted that far more homes and apartments would be started this year than during last year's record breaking 32,500 units started. His own firm's production will be three times higher than in 1949, he predicted.

But, he cautioned, the building industry and home buyers must be given adequate financing from lending institutions if the construction boom is to continue.

Housing Study Group Set Up by Government

A housing research advisory committee to serve as a "continuing board of review" of the research program of the 1949 Housing Act has been set up by the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Administrator Raymond M. Foley said he has named 26 housing experts to the committee. First meeting will be held April 17, he announced.

Besides acting as a review board, the committee will give advice and guidance on the entire research program Foley said.

Fire Losses Reduced 6.1% Last Year

New York, (AP).—Newspapers of the United States are given much of the credit for the decrease in fire losses in the past year. The National Board of Fire Underwriters reports that 1949 fire losses were 6.1 percent below the all-time high of $711,114,000 recorded in 1948.

Vienna Primps With Paint, Hammer

BEFORE—This sturdy old home needed a face-lifting. Residence of R. E. Stevens on Old Courthouse rd. presented an unattractive appearance to passersby

AFTER—Here is the Stevens' home with its new face. The tall chimmey catches the eye and the asbestos shingle siding lends beauty. Tree has been removed

By Robert P. Jordan

THERE'S nothing wrong with Vienna, Va., everybody from the mayor on down will tell you, that a little elbow grease won't cure.

And a sufficient application of same over the next few months may pay off with a tidy $2000 cash prize. The money, some citizens boast, is as good as in the bag. The town, it seems, is right on 100 percent civic minded.

Vienna, in short, is out to make itself beautiful.

The town lies 8 miles west of the District in Fairfax County. It sprawls 1.5 miles square over four rolling ridges. Its residents, some 2000 of them, are home-loving folk. Most of its wage earners are Federal employes.

Right now, Vienna is geared to an all-out community effort to get the job done. Block captains abound, a steering committee is steering, the mayor and Town Council have given their blessing. Even the Brownies are at work.

The job is to build, to plant, to paint, to landscape, to pave, to clean up.

In the town's 7-acre park, for instance, construction of a $10,000 shelter just got under way. The $10,000 figure is misleading: it would have cost that much on a contract basis, but volunteer workers and donations of materials wil cut the amount paid out to around $2000.

So says Air Force Maj. John Luft, of the Vienna Recreation Association. The association, composed of delegates from virtually every organization in the town, is the "holding company" for the Make Vienna Beautiful campaign.

Volunteer workers and donations—materials and cash—are means by which the VRA aims to conduct the campaign.

That projected 150-seat amphitheater in the park, reports Harold B. Whitmore, VRA president, will be built the same way. Grading, clearing and planting are in store to bring this project to reality.

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Policing the grounds and planting ivy is play for Vienna elementary school children

Once the park is up to snuff, there'll be no end of its use by townspeople. Mrs. N. Hugh McDiarmid, steering committee chairman, announces these events are being lined up there:

A spring festival, band concerts, vesper services, big doin's on the Fourth, complete with fireworks, baseball games on the improved diamond, and so on.

One of the efforts dearest to the hearts of long-time Vienna residents is the beautification of Maple ave., the town's main stem. The old maple trees that line the street are dying. Large-scale plantings of young maples are scheduled.

Maple ave. is the task of the Ayr Hill Garden Club. First off, it has the promise of the State Highway Department, since the avenue also is Route 123, to clean it up.

That's important, but perhaps more so is the planting of maples, dogwood, shrubs and flowers that the club is urging—not only on Maple ave. but all over town. And if you live in Vienna and are willing to plant something, the club will help you get it.

Everybody Trying

BUSINESSMEN of the town are looking into the possibility of off-street parking; the Vienna Fire Department is hard at work on an addition to the firehouse; the two elementary schools are beautifying their yards; the Presbyterian Church

John I. Robinson, president of the National Association of Housing officials, has petitioned Federal Housing officials, Senators and Representatives to keep Lustron in business by using Lustron homes for public housing.

National Association of Real Estate Boards reports that House and Senate rejection of direct Government mortgage lending to cooperative housing has brought "widespread misunderstanding" of private industry's attitude toward co-op housing.

In testimony before the House committee, reminds NAREB,, the volume of cooperative housing privately built and financed through FHA is "concrete evidence" that private enterprise is not opposed to cooperative housing.

N. C. Hines and Son, Inc., closed the first month's operation of their new brokerage operation with a $100,000 apartment house sale. The firm is at 1418 N. Uhle st., Arlington.

Charles J. Harris, supervisor of maintenance engineering for the National Capital Housing Authortiy, has been appointed to the maintenance committee of the National Association of Housing Officials. The committee is reported to be concentrating this year on a research program in technical developments.

Genial Sam Rosey, real estate broker, is spending many an evening at the Shoreham Hotel's Blue Room lately. That three member "interpretive ballet" featured in the floorshow has Sam's son, Jerry Ross, as one of its agile components.

All-Negro Community to Get Slum Funds

Robbins, Ill., an all-Negro community near Chicago, was among the first 57 communities to receive funds for a slum-clearance and urban redevelopment project from the Housing and Home Finance Agency, authorized under recent legislation. Robbins plans to clear 250 acres of slums and demolish about 500 dwellings. Reuse plans for the cleared site call for 150 to 200 dwellings to be built by a non-profit corporation and 300 low-rent public housing dwellings.

FHA Insures Cooperative's $367,000 Loan

The Federal Housing Administration yesterday revealed that Government aid to cooperative housing projects is underway. FHA has insured the mortgage for a $367,000 loan on a Denver cooperative housing project.

A group of faculty members of the University of Denver is the recipient. It plans to build 32 homes costing $425,000.

Another project of 126 homes with a $833,000 mortgage will be insured by FHA for the Ardmore Veterans Housing Corporation, Ardmore, Okla.

Extensive additional Federal aids to housing cooperatives was denied by Congress recently in voting down the cooperative housing bill. At that time critics pointed out that cooperatives could obtain aid through existing facilities of the FHA.

Builders Meet Most Demand, Survey Shows

EXCEPT in the lowest cost bracket, supply of single family dwellings has caught up with demand in two-thirds of this country's cities, a survey indicated yesterday.

The study also found that about half of all new construction within the last year has been designed to sell under $8000—where the current shortage exists.

This was reported by the National Association of Real Estate Boards in its 50th real estate market survey. Some 470 cities are covered in the survey.

Production of new houses priced at $8000 or more has caught up with demand in 65 percent of the reporting cities, the survey showed. Ten per cent of the cities have an over-supply, it was reported.

The supply of used single family homes on sale has met the demand in 64 percent of the cities. Five percent of the cities, in addition, reported an over-supply, the survey indicated.

In the below $8000 bracket, however, current demand is being met in only 25 percent of the cities, according to the study. An over-supply of this housing was found by three percent of the cities.

The rental housing supply "has improved greatly in 44 percent of the reporting cities," the survey said. It noted improvement over a year ago in 71 percent of the largest cities and in 64 percent of municipalities with more than 100,000 population.

The survey showed that rentals made slowest progress in the lower cost homes. Overall, supply of rental housing has caught up with demand in 22 percent of the reporting cities. Over-supply was found for rental units in higher brackets in 19 percent of all reporting cities.

Fritz Burns, Super Salesman, To Address Local Builders

FRITZ BURNS, of Los Angeles, nationally famous for his sales methods, will be guest speaker April 12 at a dinner meeting of the Home Builders' Association of Metropolitan Washington. It will be held in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Burns built the original "Post-War" house in Los Angeles, already viewed by over a million persons. His talk will cover sales promotion methods used to sell thousands of homes built by Kaiser Community Homes of Los Angeles, which Burns heads.

His talk will include a series of colorful slides graphically illustrating innovations in outdoor advertising; newspaper advertising which, according to Burns, established a "new high" in home selling ads; furnished model homes replete with beautiful hostesses "selected for their feet as well as their looks because we want them on the job standing up, not sitting down."

Other devices used in promoting Burns' homes included models showing houses in various stages of construction so that the interiors could be examined.

FRITZ B. BURNS
. . . super salesman of homes

Burns is chairman of the National Association of Home Builders educational program. A public relations program is under way to show prospective buyers the record production of the building industry—at prices the average person can afford.

Housing High Seen in 1950

New York, April 1—Residential construction is heading for a new record in 1950, according to a survey by Business Week.

"If builders carry through the plans they have now, this year will top even 1949's record-smashing 1,023,000 starts," says the publication.

"According to the builders," the magazine adds, "the demand is there; the money is there; the labor is there. Not even a general business decline in the last half of 1950 would force many of them to change their plans.

The article notes that a key factor in this rosy construction picture is the way the housing market has been stepping along all through the winter. Buyers who had been holding off in 1949 waiting for a price drop have given up hope of lower prices and are buying homes as fast as builders can nail them together.

This year's market is expected to be a good deal like 1949's. Houses in the $7,000 to $12,000 bracket will be the backbone of the boom.

"There isn't any doubt in my mind," says Major Jack J. Nichols, "that it's going over in a big way. Everybody is interested."

Mayor Nichols and Mrs. McDiarmid were two of several speakers the other evening—a rain-drenched evening—at the Vienna Elementary School. Purpose of the meeting was to discuss the campaign. Some 200 citizens turned out for it.

Both called on the audience to participate not only in the civic aspects of the cleanup drive, but to undertake individual projects at home. Prizes are being considered for the most improved homes, stores and other buildings, it was reported.

What about that $2000 prize that is "in the bag," to quote Mayor Nichols?

Vienna has entered the More Beautiful America competition sponsored by Better Homes and Gardens magazine. The $2000 is the most that can be won by a single community. And townspeople are taking "before and after" pictures in great number.

Since Vienna is going to win, how will the money be spent?

"The money is to be divided equally," smiles Mrs. McDiarmid, "among the VRA, the Negro Elementary School, and to the fire department, toward purchase of a rescue wagon."

Under construction by volunteer firemen, this addition to the firehouse will bring the department's truck under cover

'Streetcar' Is Williams' Latest, For Aught This Outpost Knows

By Richard L. Coe

TOMORROW NIGHT some of the draught of this theatrical outpost will be relieved by the arrival of Tennessee Williams' latest play, "A Sweetcar Named Desire."

Latest? Well, it opened on the road in November, 1947, since then has won the three top awards of the dramatists' world: the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award, the Pulitzer Prize and the Donaldson Award. This, in case it doesn't seem possible, is 1950.

WILLIAMS

For all the international publicity Williams and his contemporary peer, Arthur Miller, have received, the Capital of the United States has seen only an inferior production (aside from a single command performance) of one in a quartet of plays that has made this pair internationally respected. That was a touring version of "The Glass Menagerie," in which Pauline Lord saw fit to wear nylons as the Amanda so artfully created by the late Laurette Taylor. Miller's two triumphs, "All My Sons" and "Death of a Salesman" have never been acted professionally in this city. It is unlikely Washington ever will see Margaret Phillips in the later "Summer and Smoke."

So tomorrow night's start for a three-week run has the aura of an Event, however belated. To her credit, Producer Irene Selznick has assured herself a fine star, Judith Evelyn, a company that has gained respect since it opened a year ago on the coast and a Jo Mielziner setting which, a few weeks ago in Baltimore, showed no sign of travel strain.

The Critical Stage

THE POSITION of Williams among our contemporary dramatists is an important one and at this particular juncture is at the critical stage. Miller's "Salesman" has had a popularity both here and abroad rivalling "Streetcar" and Williams has not yet given an inkling of what is to follow "Streetcar."

What does will be vital to his career. The question may well be asked: Will Williams be able to create characters other than Blanche Du Bois, Amanda Wingfield and the heroines of his short plays, all of whom have a strain in common?

His understanding of these tender, buffetted women, the loneliness in their lives and the stifled love in their hearts has given his plays an unparalleled appeal. What he touches next—and he is taking his time—will begin the next phase of his playwrighting career.

A 50-50 Chance

HE HAS at least a 50-50 chance of writing equally good theater in the future, for his present status could hardly have been predicted a few years back.

A quiet, sensitive and hard-to-get-at fellow, he was then an usher at New York's Strand Theater. It was one of many odd jobs that had included table-waiting, elevator-tending and teletype operating. From that $17 a week movie house job, he'd go home to a lonely room where he beat out short plays.

"All the while," he has since recalled, "I kept on writing, not with any hope of making a living at it, but because I found no other means of expressing things that seemed to demand expression. There was never a moment when I did not find life to be immeasurably exciting to experience and to witness, however difficult it was to sustain."

His first real recognition came in 1940 when a Rockefeller fellowship gave him the chance to write "Battle of Angels," which starred Miriam Hopkins, a Theater Guild out-of-town flop, but it gave him a crack at an MGM writing job, from which he saved the money he lived on while writing "The Glass Menagerie." From then on, life has been comparatively simple.

Drab Respectability

IT HAD begun without serious livelihood complications. Williams, whose real name is Thomas Lanier Williams, was brought up in the rectory of his grandfather, an Episcopal rector of Columbus, Miss. At 12, his father, a traveling salesman, was transferred to St. Louis, where, in a setting far more constricted and less pleasant than the rectory, the family lived in much the same drab respectability we saw in "The Glass Menagerie."

"It was in those days," he says, "that we suddenly discovered there were two kinds of people, the rich and the poor, and that we belonged more to the latter. If we walked far enough West, we came into a region of fine residences set in beautiful lawns. But where we lived, to which we must always return, were ugly rows of apartment buildings the color of dried blood and mustard.

"I'm glad I received this bitter education, for I don't think any writer has much purpose back of him unless he feels bitterly the inequities of the society he lives in. I had no acquaintance with political and social dialectics, but if you ask me what my politics are, I am a Humanitarian."

B. A. at Iowa in '38

HE WORKED his way through college, at several intervals and after a breakdown while working in a St. Louis shoe factory, returned to his grandparents who, by now, had retired to Memphis. He finally got his B.A. at Iowa in '38.

The lean years evidently prepared him well for the fat ones he now enjoys. Royalties from his two hit plays have poured in from a dozen countries and whatever he chooses to write in nondramatic form, he is assured publication.

This freedom from anxiety has given him the income and opportunity to travel and travel he does. The past year Europe has seen much of him, not the expensive hotels of the continent, but the modest, bohemian worlds to which money is not the passkey.

Internationally respected and the opposite of a young man in a hurry, at 36, Williams of the adopted "Tennessee" first name, may well have the best years before him.

Tight Little Island

Skye People Have Little Use for Maps

By William C. Makins

I SUPPOSE Americans are as bad as the people on the mainland. I watched them in the Little theater at a showing of Alexander Mackendrjck's first film as a director, "Tight Little Island."

They laughed.

When the postmaster said the nonexistence of whisky was "worse than Hitler's bombs," they laughed again.

Yes, they understand as little as the people of the mainland. I have lived on the island to the west of Scotland, so I know. So does Sandy—Alexander Mackendrick, to you. The mainland is over yonder, to the east, as foreign as Arabia. Or so the islanders think.

And to the west, there's nothing but the Atlantic Ocean—and America. You'll hear the highland voice saying just that at the beginning of the film.

Off for a Climb

IN the early thirties, Sandy, Alastair, and I once went for a holiday to Skye, to climb the famous Coolin range. Skye is the largest island of the Inner Hebrides. We got off the boat at the

Some Television Experts Say

Color's Pretty, But Not Yet Ripe

By Sonia Stein

COLOR television is gorgeous—but it's not good enough for us.

That's not the way I feel, mind you. It's good enough for me, but some of the very engineers who have developed color TV keep pulling on their beards and saying it's not ready. It's a luscious looking apple, but it's not quite ripe, they warn.

I'm beginning to think that children as yet unborn will have beards to pull before we get color television, even though I've seen it demonstrated in three different versions, any one of which I'd be glad to give house room to.

Wednesday, when the Radio Corp. of America unveiled its multicolor single tube receiver, the results were so impressive I could scarcely credit my big brown eyes. And I certainly couldn't credit my little pink ears when I heard the RCA engineers say that this pretty thing couldn't be on the market for maybe "one, two or three years" after the Federal Communications Commission says it's OK to start telecasting in color.

Handmade Job

IT'S A QUESTION of tooling up and getting mass production under way, the present tube being a handmade affair. Furthermore, these RCA perfectionists aren't satisfied they're got a product good enough for us. The new tube has 351,000 color dots on its surface—117,000 of each of the three primary light colors—which are activated in proper order by electron guns. The engineers are anxious to increase the number of dots to step up the fine detail, although the pictures, seen from 10 or 12 feet away, look clear and sharp enough for all practical purposes.

And then too, RCA hasn't decided which of the two kinds of single tube receivers shown Wednesday it would make. One was a single electron gun which shoots beams at the color dots from different angles as it rotates, and the other has three stationary guns, each of which takes care of a separate color. Both shoot through masks containing 117,000 holes, and there is no danger of any gun activating the wrong color.

Both kinds can be made in any size, the bigger the easier. And both kinds can be watched at an angle.

Not Whole Answer

BUT THE NEW TUBE, impressive as it is, doesn't simplify substantially the decision about which color TV system to use.

All three systems under consideration by the Federal Communications Commission theoretically can use the new tube when it's ready. It solves equipment problems for all three. For RCA it means a smaller, cheaper set which can be viewed directly instead of on a projection screen, and which precludes the possibility of one color accidentally washing over the others as happened in their older experimental sets. It does approximately the same thing for Color Television, Inc.

For CBS, it can mean the end of the color wheel which limited the size of the screen.

But each system still claims it has virtues entirely unrelated to the equipment used.

Best System

DR. PETER GOLDMARK of CBS, who started this whole color whirl by developing a color TV system as long ago as 1940, claims that whether you use the color wheel or the single tube set, the CBS field sequential system of transmitting the pictures, would produce better color than RCA's dot sequential or CTI's line sequential systems. And color, he points out, is what's most important in a color TV system. CBS has consistently shown warmer colors and fresher skin tones than RCA. In the RCA pictures, colors tend to be attractive but cold, and skin tones are darker.

Which is the more natural of the two is a subjective matter—I find CBS far more natural, although in some demonstrations CBS has telecast

Ever Try Dancing on The Square?

By Orval Hopkins

I'D like to take this opportunity to denounce square dancing.

My wife and two other scoundrels bullied me into going off to the fire house for a square dance the other night and I've still got a nagging cough and two sore feet from it. It was a nasty night anyhow, one on which anybody even partially civilized would have stayed home with a good book and his feet up.

But off we trot to the fire house, a cement floor, and a lot of silly hopping, skipping and sliding.

The truth is that not in a long time have I had such a hilarious time as I did early in the evening. This was before we got organized. None of the four of us knew much about square-dancing—I knew nothing at all—and in attempting to ape our betters, who already had begun and were soberly tripping through the various figures, we got hopelessly balled up and were reduced several times to helpless mirth. We looked like the Notre Dame backfield rehearsing without a ball. It was the funniest thing that has happened to me in a long time. I'll have to say in further truth, however, that the people who were

Cardinal's Poem Yielded a Great Oratorio

By Paul Hume

FROM a wedding present came a great oratorio. In 1889 Sir Edward Elgar, then plain Mr. Elgar, was married to Caroline Alice Roberts. One of the wedding presents was a copy of the poem,

HESS • ALBERTS STEFFE

"The Dream of Gerontius," by John Henry Cardinal Newman.

Written in 1866, the theme of the poem is the dream of the dying Gerontius of his soul's journey to the unseen world, its reception by the angels, and the mysteries of that world.

For nearly a decade Elgar read and reread the fervent lines. As a devout Catholic, he was moved by the writing of England's scholar-cardinal. In 1900 he completed his setting of the text. Its first performance, in Birmingham, though under the direction of Hans Richter, was a disappointment to the composer.

The chorus did not understand the music, and had not been adequately prepared. But a year later (some say two years afterward), the work was given at the Lower Rhine Festival in Duesseldorf. It was a reading to Elgar's taste, and won him a tremendous personal triumph. Richard Strauss led the praise, heralding Elgar as "Meister Elgar."

Next Wednesday

NEXT Wednesday evening at 8:30 Elgar's "Gerontius" will be sung in Washington Cathedral. The Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies will be augmented by the Cathedral choir of men and boys. Sixty-two members of the National Symphony Orchestra will play the massive symphonic accompaniment. Soloists are William Hess as Gerontius, Eunice Alberts as the Guardian Angel, and Edwin Steffe singing both the Priest and the Angel of the Agony.

Paul Callaway will conduct, with Richard Dirksen as organist. The music is open to the public without charge, with a limited number of seats reserved for supporters of the choral societies. In addition, the entire work will be broadcast over Station WQQW-FM.

Oft Slighted

SIR EDWARD ELGAR often suffers the slighting slings of an increasingly sophisticated musical public. He is frequently accused of excessive romanticism, of imitating Wagner, Brahms, and/or Richard Strauss, or of being simply banal.

Elgar's orchestra is the same as that of Wagner, Brahms, and Strauss. That is far from making him an imitator of them. His melodic lines differ from the arpeggiated series characteristic of Wagner. Yet they omit the great soaring heights and leaps of Strauss. They tend to be scale-wise, with particular attention to expressive qualities corresponding to particular lines.

The English, deeply devoted to Elgar, were not solidly in favor of the "Dream" at the time of its premiere. This was due in part to some antagonism to the Catholic doctrine of the text. Any work by Cardinal Newman would be an exposition of the teachings of the church. But audiences resented this until they were won by the obvious sympathy of the composer's marriage of words and music.

Oratorio in Two Parts

THE oratorio is divided into two parts. The first portrays the last moments of a just soul on earth. He prays for mercy and strength for his dying hour and, encouraged by the prayers of friends, launches into a firm declaration of his faith.

His last words on earth, "Lord, into Thy hands . . ." lead into the prayers of the priest and friends praying for the departing soul.

Part Two depicts the soul of Gerontius after death. Newman and Elgar describe his meeting with his Guardian Angel who tells him of his eventual salvation. The soul is filled with questions about life after death—questions the Angel tells him cannot be answered at once.

The soul is carried past the howling voices of demons waiting to carry souls to hell, on into the Judgment Court. There, overcome by the awesomeness of the Divine Presence, he cries, "Take me away, and in the lowest depth there let me be."

Broad Terms

ELGAR writes in broadest terms throughout Gerontius. William Hess, the tenor singing the title role, must encompass the widest dramatic and emotional range, using his voice with subtlest coloring. Miss Alberts, the contralto, as the Guardian Angel, has a part of extreme sympathy.

Steffe, doubling as Priest and Angel of the Agony, is called upon for dramatic singing, frequently above chorus and semichorus. In addition to dividing his large choral societies into many parts, Callaway is placing the entire Cathedral Choir of men and boys in the gallery of the north transept to sing the lines of the semichorus of angelicals.

The score is essentially one of mood—profound, religious—mystical. The orchestra expands from a single, thin line at the opening to the broadest symphonic canvas. At times Elgar verges on the sentimental—and just at those times he is saved by some of his happiest inspiration. Gerontius is a unique choral masterpiece highly appropriate for our Holy Week attention.

already organized didn't think it funny at all.

Very Gentle

THEY finally got us, too. They formed us up, they harnessed us. Like the carefree natives of the south seas, we were fenced in and told how good it was.

True, some of the girls were pretty girls and they were very gentle while teaching me the doozi-doo, or whatever it is. Yes, and they all had husbands, too. All the husbands were not only on the premises but only a matter of feet away from me, being gentle with my wife while teaching her the doozi-doo.

This is the bunk. If I'm going to go dancing with the girls, there are two people I don't want hanging around. One is the girl's husband. The other is my wife. If I go to give the lady a load of the old charm, the first thing I got is her husband sticking his face in my face and shoving out his jaw. The second thing I got is my wife. She knows by heart the inane little tricks I employ when trying to get cute with the ladies. When I spring them on the girls, she is not amused. Furthermore, when I see her smiling radiantly up at some large grinning party in a hickory shirt, I am likewise.

Patient People

I confess, however, that they were very patient with us. An earnest, graceful young man played some lively records and kept calling something incomprehensible over an amplifying system. "If these new people don't get it, just push 'em through it," he counseled. From that moment on, I was target for a thorough pushing, pulling, and twirling around, all administered with the best of intentions, of course. One of the dances, called "The Bullfrog on the Cow" as I got it, called for footwork as intricate as that of a brown-skinned girl doing a saber dance. Naturally, I mastered it with ease.

All in all, it was a far from tranquil evening. It cost me four bits, for one thing. It was no match at all for a quiet night in the sack, with or without a book, for another. For a third, it imperiled a whole parcel of marriages. I don't see how they can let this thing go on. They better not let Senator McCarthy find out about it.

Here Come the Dance Bands Again—III

THE LABEL of many a fine record bears the imprint, "Gordon Jenkins and His Orchestra," including the currently popular "My Foolish Heart." But actually Gordon Jenkins has no orchestra. Nor has Art Mooney, Russ Morgan or many another bandleader. These men find it worthwhile only to hire musicians as they are needed for an occasional record or personal appearance. The days of the Golden Era of the thirties when such name bands as Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw and Glenn Miller were constantly touring the country are no more. Why?

Some people believe that the vocalists have stolen the thunder from the dance orchestras. The public may no longer go wild over Benny Goodman as the King of Swing, they will tell you, but they are swooning over the Sinatras, Comos and Damones instead.

This may have been true at one time, but I would say it hardly gives a true picture of the habits of record fans in 1950. Today there is no artist, be he a Tommy Dorsey or a Dick Haymes, who can coast along on his general popularity. We tend, instead, to judge each record on its own merits, whether it be by a famous personality or a newcomer. Who have the most popular records right now? New names like Teresa Brewer, the Ames Brothers and Eileen Barton. Their current records show originality and imagination, and have thus caught the fancy of the public.

Some of those who are attempting to revive the popularity of dance orchestras, which is a laudable effort, are so convinced that the singers have ruined the public's taste for dance music that they favor limiting the band vocalist to one brief chorus on a record.

This is not only a silly and arbitrary restriction on the work of an orchestra, but it actually seems downright ungrateful, in view of the fact that singing bandleaders like Vaughn Monroe and Eddy Howard have helped keep dance orchestras alive during their recent decline.

Guy Lombardo, who has retained the support of the public while many another orchestra has come and gone, seems to have the right answer in this respect. Lombardo adapts his arrangements to the requirements of a song, and stays on top.

In any event, RCA Victor deserves the highest praise for its new series of albums, "Here Come the Dance Bands Again." The attempt to stimulate a renewed interest in dance music, with or without vocals, can lead only to one result: more good records for enjoyment on the Sundial and Moondial, and in our homes.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9:00 a. m.; Moondial, 11:20 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Music Box

Sale of Seats For Toscanini Opens Apr. 29

TWO outstanding events come this week: Elena Nikolaidi's local debut tomorrow night, and the first Washington performance of Elgar's Dream of Gerontius.

Nikolaidi comes with the advance heralding of a Tourel or Flagstad. Her voice, her use of it, and her musicianship are all subjects of greatest praise. She appears in a benefit for Athens College.

The Elgar oratorio, discussed in another column today, is an important work, and at the age of 50, comes to Washington none too soon.

NOW ABOUT TOSCANINI: the story two weeks ago on this page was an AP release from New York and was not entirely correct. The Hayes office (Patrick Hayes) says:

"Public sale of tickets for the concert by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony will open on Saturday morning, April 29, at 10 a. m. at the Hayes Bureau. There will be no mail orders or telephone reservations in connection with this public sale. Patrons will be accommodated on a first-come, first-served basis, with a limit of two tickets per person."

A broader announcement concerning the concert will be made in all Washington newspapers on Sunday, April 16.

THE American University Chamber Music Society of April 4 has been postponed until April 18 in order to avoid conflicts in schedule. The concert, last of the current series, will be composed of contemporary American and European works for strings, clarinet, and piano.

Change of Date: The two final Philadelphia Orchestra concerts will be played Tuesday and Wednesday, April 11 and 12, instead of Monday-Tuesday, the 10-11 as incorrectly announced in their last program. Tickets are still available for the concert of the 12th, at which Artur Rubinstein will play the B Flat concerto of Brahms.

There will be no public program by the Budapest Quartet this week. They will play Thursday and Friday for two special audiences of the D. C. Library Association, and the Special Libraries Association.

But the program will be broadcast as usual on Friday night over Station WQQW-FM. It is: Haydn, Opus 20, No. 4, Beethoven Opus 59, No. 2, and the Ravel.

NO PHILLIPS GALLERY concerts until Easter Sunday afternoon at 5, when the La Salle Quartet from Colorado Springs comes to play.

The Columbia Opera Company will rest over the summer but their director, Ethyl Manning, will return to Washington in the fall when a full season is planned.

Florence Booker's Madrigal Singers from Washington-Lee High School will sing at the Easter Sunrise Service in National Memorial Park, near Falls Church. The service is to begin at 5:41 a. m.—the hour of daybreak that day.

Riccis Play Here Today

RUGGIERO GEORGE

THIS afternoon's National Symphony program is the season's final.

Soloists under Howard Mitchell will be the Ricci brothers, Ruggiero, the violinist, and George, the cellist.

The program includes Robert Ward's Jubilation Overture, in its second Washington hearing in four days. The Riccis will play the Brahms double concerto. Mitchell lists Ibert's "Escales" or Ports of Call after the intermission.

Bernice Cross Show

A one-man show of paintings by Bernice Cross will open at the Whyte Gallery on April 10, succeeding Aline Fruhauf's exhibit of caricatures, which has been extended to April 7.

The Record Player

Miss Nikolaidi Proves She's a Real Contralto

VERDI: Don Carlos: O Don Fatale; also: Macbeth: Sleep Walking Scene. Elena Nikolaidi, contralto, with orchestra under Fausto Cleva. Columbia 72884. $1.25.

Rossini: Bel raggio lusinghier. Elena Nikolaidi, contralto, with orchestra under Fausto Cleva. Columbia 72885. $1.25.

Tomorrow night Nikolaidi sings in Constitution Hall for the first time. Her recital is a benefit for Athens College in her native country. Here are her first domestic records. Two of these arias, the Rossini and the Sleep Walking Scene, are on tomorrow's program.

The voice is huge, but can be controlled to the lightest pianissimo. It is a real contralto, the first to come to prominence in this country since Marian Anderson's return from Europe 15 years ago.

Nikolaidi possesses authority in every style, from reliable notices we have seen. Certainly she knows her way around these excerpts. We have the feeling that the voice is not entirely caught on these records. It is a large voice, and like Flagstad's, may avoid the engineers for a time.

It sounds best played at full volume. For a vocal phenomenon, hear her final phrase in the Macbeth scene. She, a heavy contralto, mounts in softest tones, to a high D Flat. It is fantastic. But she will repeat it in Constitution Hall. HUME.

Tight Little Island of Skye Rejoices in a B-a-a-d Step

wrong pier, and instead of waiting for three hours for a bus, we looked at a map. The islanders were laughing already, because they knew that 30 years earlier, the engineers had come—from the mainland, of course—to make this map.

The map looked good. It looked as though we could find two or three small farms on the way.

None of the farms was there, though some parts of the walls stood.

Hard to Find

MOREOVER, these mainland engineers had marked a path impossible to find. When we asked a wandering shepherd where it was, he said, "If you go up the hill there a little, there's a kind of path."

"And how is the going the rest of the way?"

"Oh, you will have no difficulty until you come to the Bad Step," he said.

"What's that?"

"You'll know it when you see it," said the shepherd, and wandered away.

I think we met two shepherds in two and a half days' weary, hungry march. (It was September and the brambles were ripe; but none of us will ever recommend this fruit as a steady diet.) The first night under the tent was one of the most miserable any of us had ever spent. A small traveling rug was the only cover we had (since blankets are provided at Youth Hostels, we had omitted to bring any). The other shepherd offered us vague directions to a nonexistent path, and he spoke of the Ba-a-ad Step.

A 'Traverse'

ABOUT midday on the second day we came to it. A great slab of gabbro rock rose about 600 feet steeply out of the sea loch. About half way to the top the slab had cracked, and the top half had slipped 6 to 9 inches into the hillside, forming a very narrow shelf. Climbers call this a traverse. I should confess here that our claim to call ourselves climbers was based on practically no experience.

Very gingerly we proceeded to make the traverse. Sandy led the way. "Oh, it's not so bad," he kept saying. Half way across there was a tinkling sound. We looked back at Alastair, who had begun to curse.

"It's the bloody tent pegs!" he said, and we watched the little metal skewers splash into the loch. "I thought I had them tied securely."

That night we cut heather and laid the tent over it, making a comfortable bed in which we all slept well, so the spirit of the island that stole our pegs away was a kindly one.

Some of the music of "Tight Little Island," by the way, is part of the joke. Just before the chase starts, when the sick old man looks out of his window and sees the revenue cutter coming, the background music strikes up an old Scots song, "The Deil's awa' wi' the exciseman!" (The Devil's got the revenooer, and welcome to him!) A drawingroom version of this was written by Robert Burns.

To the islanders, the people of the mainland are still Scots. But there is one point about the character of Captain Paul Waggett in "Tight Little Island" which most American critics appear to have missed. Poor Waggett is worse than a mainlander—he is an Englishman, a sassenach. To the average islander, the Englishman is a summer visitor, or an absentee landlord, who speaks with a lah-de-dah accent, and generally has more money than sense. In short, he is a sitting duck.

Art Notes

Shows Crowd April Calendar

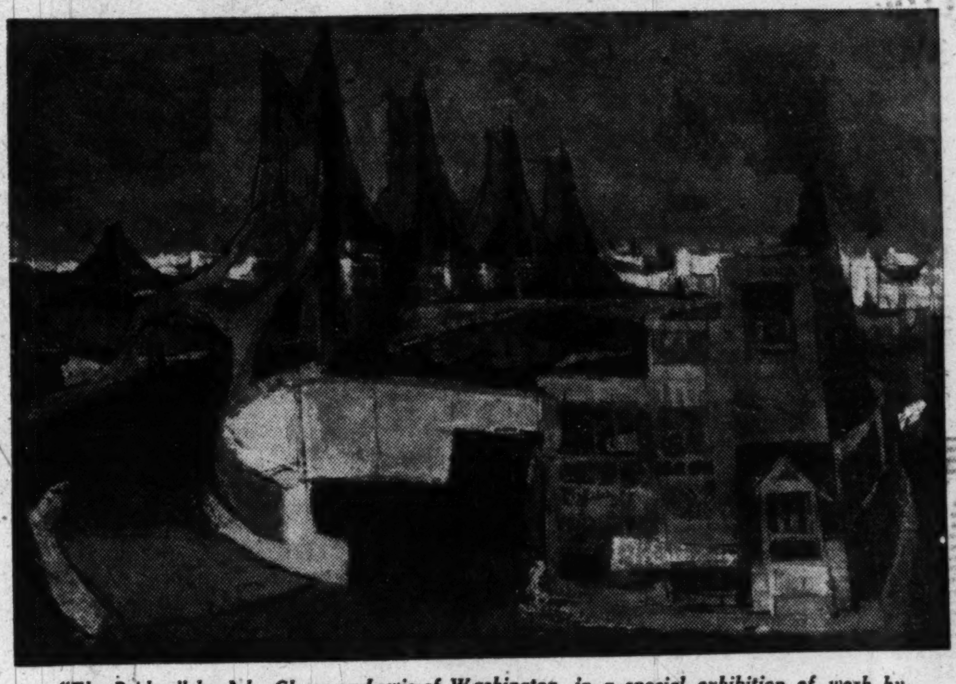
WITH art activities on the increase in Washington, the April calendar is crowded. This year it includes the Annual Pennell Fund print show at the Library of Congress, the opening date of which has been advanced to April 24 to coincide with celebration of the institution's sesquicentennial.

Staffs at the National Gallery and the Corcoran are working like beavers on the historical exhibits scheduled to open this summer in conjunction with the Capital's sesquicentennial. New print acquisitions from the Rosenwald collection will be shown at the National in an exhibit opening April 9.

Opening tomorrow at the Pan American Union is a one-man show by Pablo Burchard, jr., of Chile. The artist is grandson of an architect and the son of one of Chile's best known painters. He studied painting after earning a degree in architecture. He first visited the United States in 1941 and is at present studying with Abraham Rattner at the New School for Social Research in New York. While this is his first show in Washington, he has been exhibiting publicly since 1942.

The Smithsonian is holding the biennial exhibition of the National League of American Pen Women, opening today and continuing through April 27. Also on view there are miniature paintings commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the American Society of Miniature Painters.

Two D. C. Artists Crash 'Met'



"The Bridge," by John Chapman Lewis of Washington, in a special exhibition of work by artists under 36 at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

By Jane Watson Crane

TWO Washington artists are included in the current exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum in New York honoring 52 American painters under the age of 36. The show is presented as a kind of futurity, aimed to reveal work considered their best by a group of the country's most promising young painters. John Chapman Lewis, now on the faculty of the Corcoran Art School, is represented by a canvas entitled "The Bridge." Included by Mitchell Jamieson is a new painting, "The Dream."

The Metropolitan show, based on the Life Magazine assemblage of 131 paintings gathered from various parts of the country, was chosen by Robert Beverly Hale, in charge of the museum's American department. Particular interest is attached to it, because it marks an opening salute to the American artist by the venerable institution which has often been accused of neglecting him.

How were the original 131 paintings obtained? Heads of schools, museums and college art departments were asked to suggest names. They submitted a total of 450, and the artists so designated were then asked to send in photographs of their work. On this basis the 131 were chosen and they in turn were requested to ship paintings. The Hale final choice is thus the result of first-hand contact with the paintings themselves, although limited to the group assembled in the first place from the far less satisfactory evidence of photographs.

According to the sponsors, only a small portion of the paintings in the Metropolitan exhibition are abstract "in an extreme sense." Many are reported to record familiar scenes, landscapes and people "in a fresh and modern style." Neither the Lewis nor the Jamieson, which have not been exhibited locally, are abstractions. Nor are they literal transcriptions, but rather imaginative developments of recognizable themes.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY is showing paintings by Eugene Weisz in the Lisner Library until April 14. A former lecturer on art history at the university, the artist is one of the best known in Washington. He has taught at the Corcoran School since 1924. Landscapes, still lifes and a few portraits are included in the group. Particularly admired at the opening was a handsome study of oak leaves ("Winter Bouquet") in which the interplay of light and shadow is subtly conveyed. Chief note of color is a blue cloth which sets off the predominating shades of tan. In the landscapes, flashes of red make striking contrast with the dark greens and blues. The show invites contemplation, for there is far more than meets the eye on first acquaintance. One never tires of the work of a painter like Eugen Weisz, it stems from deep knowledge and feeling.

THE Arts Club is presenting oils and pastels by Bruno Beran, an artist who recently came to this country after years of experience in Europe. He has done a number of portrait studies of notables since coming to Washington, executed for the most part in the delicate medium of pastel. Outstanding among the oils are portraits of Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Justice Douglas, and the more informal and revealing studies of the artist and his wife. Included are a few earlier oils, such as "The Shoemaker and His Wife," executed in Spain in 1936, and "The Poor Mother" done in New York in 1947, painted in competent Academic manner.

SPONSORED by the Friends of the Modern Arts in Washington is a show of paintings and drawings by Dante Radice, with small bronzes by Maxim Elias at the Ethel Butler Studio, 2130 Florida ave. nw. (Open to the public Saturdays and Sundays from 3 to 6). It is the painter's first one-man show in some time, and while his idiom is similar, the work reveals greater conviction and command. Featured are studies in black and white, some of which come off with dramatic effect. The Elias bronzes, which are issued in limited editions, would make delightful adjuncts to a modern home. All entries are geared to purses and homes of modest proportions.

'Capitol Cloakroom' Has a Birthday

such violently colored objects, I was tempted to doubt them until I saw the originals. (All three systems do badly by the color red; I won't take sides on that.)

The Big However

HOWEVER, and this is a very big however, both RCA and CTI send color pictures which the 5 million set owners (expected to be 10 in another year's time) can receive in black and white on their present sets. To receive CBS color pictures in black and white, you must treat your set to a $15-$25 professional face-lift.

Compatibility, as they call this thing that the CBS system lacks, just had to be sacrificed for good color in the CBS system, Goldmark explains.

In hearings before the FCC, one of the commissioners said he had great confidence in Goldmark and was sure he could make the CBS system compatible. Goldmark, bedded down at the time because his own personal system was incompatible with a shot of penicillin, had nothing to say.

But confronted with the idea last Thursday—his first day out of bed—he says it cannot be done without sacrificing good color, and "poor colors are too high a price to pay for compatibility."

So, we all get another free ride on the FCC color hearing merry-go-round next week.

Sevareid Shollenberger Bancroft Shadel

BIRTHDAY anniversaries leave me a little wary, what with today being my own and me unable to find any point in it. But radio programs always celebrate them like mad—scarcely able to believe they survived another year, perhaps.

CBS's "Capitol Cloakroom" chalked up a second year this week, and looked back upon a past "distinguished by a lack of untoward incidents," according to one CBS man close to the matter.

Most programs which involve guests have numerous tales to tell about the night that Senator Whosis didn't show, or Representative Whatsis said something censorable on the air.

This show (WTOP and WOIC, Fridays, 10:30 p. m.) is also distinguished for its interesting content, fast presentation and pleasant spirit. (And since the show has been on TV—about six months—it's been distinguished for its attractive newsmen.)

Matters of Moment

THREE top CBS newsmen interview a Congressman or other Government official about anything that comes to mind, much the way they'd do it in the Senate and House cloakrooms. Naturally guests are asked questions on matters of moment with which they are vitally concerned, but they are also asked about other less momentous matters.

Producer Lewis Shollenberger explains it's all part of a benign plot to let people know that the Congressmen and officials are human beings and not necessarily the "snarling, charging, conniving politicians" they may seem to be in the headlines or on debate programs when they are apt to be at each other's throats.

This show gives the audience a chance to see a fairly rounded amiable personality, although the newsmen never hold back any questions they feel should be asked.

"We let them dodge them any way they can, and since a good part of a Congressman's trade is knowing how to deflect questions 'they are pretty successful," according to Griffing Bancroft, anchor man on the team of newsmen who handle the show.

"We don't knife them and then see how far we can twist the blade," says Shollenberger.

"We're inquisitive, not unfriendly," Bancroft seconded the point. Bancroft and Bill Shadel are on the show every week, with such other illustrious members of the CBS news staff as Eric Sevareid, Ed Murrow, Claude Mahoney, Allan Jackson and Shollenberger taking over the third seat, depending on the tack the particular guest is most likely to take, although no specific topic is ever adhered to.

There is little advance planning. "We play the show by ear," says Bancroft. "If we interrupt each other, the loudest man wins."

Near Thing

THE CLOSEST the show ever came to crisis, was the night a Senator showed up without his pipe. An inveterate pipe smoker, he knew he'd be lost and besides—how would it look on television if he had no pipe? Larry Beckerman of WTOP, who directs the radio portion of the show, made the sacrifice and gave him his. (This is the second time a part of Beckerman appeared on TV. Last time he lent his back for a color TV show in which a menacing shadow was required.)

Other Congressmen are more provident. One of them brought along his comb to curry his long, white hair just before air time.

The guests almost always receive a long distance call from some constituent—mad or glad—who wants to say his piece to the Congressman before he leaves the studio. And sometimes long distance calls come to the producer—just say it was a good show.

Perry Como will join Arthur Godfrey and Bing Crosby on a special sponsor-inspired show (they share Chesterfields, as a sponsor) Wednesday at 9:30 p. m., WTOP-CBS. It's Bing's regular show, with Como and Godfrey—the other two boys on that fancy three-faced cigarette carton—as guests

TOMORROW is Ruth Crane's sixth anniversary at WMAL. She'll celebrate it then on her "Modern Woman" program (11:30 a. m. daily) by announcing something of great interest to all "modern women."

Ruth has been an active broadcaster for 22 years, and can look back on a past peppered with untoward incidents like the time her script blew out the window and the time a dog bit her on the ankle during her television show.

Ruth's guest have turned up missing more than once. One of them—forgetting her appointment—slept through the show. Seized with remorse, she sent a bouquet as apology. "I'm not the kind to throw nice flowers away, so I kept them," Ruth says, although she was not feeling very kindly toward them at the time.

On a more tragic day, Ruth told her listeners that her guest, who was flying in from New York, was delayed but would probably reach the studio before the show was over as she'd been told the plane has just been sighted at the airport. One listener, who lived near the airport, looked out of the window and saw the plane plunge into the worst crash the airport had ever had—one which carried Ruth's expected guest, Cartoonist Helen Hokinson, to her death.

The granddaddy of all the forum shows just celebrated its twenty-second birthday last week, and can look back on so many untoward incidents that even the comprehensive article on the show in the April 1 Collier's couldn't squeeze them all in.

But my favorite anecdote, as Moderator Ted Granik tells it, is about the octogenarian who rushed in to take over for a participant who was delayed. He had a carbon copy of the prepared speech—the program wasn't always quite as ad lib as it is now—and tried to read it. "It seemed to be the twentieth carbon," Granik remembers, and the poor old man stumbled along reading a few words and then saying, "No, that's not it," and then trying it over again.

On and Up With the Barbours

By John Crosby

AS RADIO serials go, "One Man's Family" is as quiet as a country churchyard. That is to say the Barbour family, whose lives have been chronicled in "One Man's Family" for 18 long years, is less than ordinarily afflicted by murder, disease, bankruptcy, embezzlement, illegitimate children, infidelity, illicit passion, and insanity—all of which are the normal lot of most soap-opera families.

But soap-opera standards are rather different from any other standards. The fact that the Barbours are less lurid than other radio serial families doesn't mean that nothing ever happens to them.

Let's see now: Clifford Barbour has lost two wives—one in childbirth, another in an automobile accident. Claudia and Hazel Barbour have had a couple of husbands apiece. I'm rather confused about Hazel—it's not easy to keep her matrimonial affairs straight here—but I think Hazel is now on her way to a third husband or a Fate Worse Than Death. (Matters were still up in the air when I left Hazel last week.)

Amnesia Victim

CLAUDIA'S first husband, who was Joan's father, died of pneumonia. Hazel's first husband was an amnesia victim of the First World War and died years ago. During the Second World War, Claudia and her second husband, Nicholas, and their two youngest children were torpedoed at sea, picked up by a German submarine and landed in a concentration camp, where their youngest child died.

So, you see, life isn't precisely torpid around the Barbour household. Last fall, "One Man's Family"—Father and Mother Barbour, who had five of the Barbours, Paul, Hazel, Claudia, Clifford and Jack—started existence reasonably afresh on television. (WNBW—NBC-TV, 8:30 p. m. Thursdays.)

I'll bring you up to date on Claudia and Hazel, but you'll have to do your own research on the rest of the mob. I haven't space. Claudia now has a brand-new husband named Johnny, who finds the Barbour clan overpowering. (And I don't blame him.) Johnny is carrying on with a babe named Judith Richardson, who is up to no good. Johnny's mother, a hypochondriac who has never succeeded in cutting the apron strings, is trying to break up the marriage. And Claudia, poor child, is expecting a baby she doesn't want because she fears it will drive her husband right into Judith's waiting arms. (Johnny wants to be free. Free, I tell you!)

All at Sea

AND HAZEL? Well, Hazel is on a ship on her way to Honolulu and, last time I saw her, she was being powerfully attracted to a tall, dark and handsome character. I don't trust him. He wreathes white flowers into her hair and murmurs into her ear that no man can get anywhere with a woman until he understands her emotional problems. Also, he's an artist. And you know those people. Watch your step, Hazel. (Don't ask me what happened to the second husbands of Hazel and Claudia. I don't know and I don't care.)

Frankly, I find the Barbour family extremely tiresome. The program's merits on radio were never more than relative. On television the threadbare people, the threadbare situations, are glaring examples of how not to write television drama. The action and the direction are conducted on a note of sustained hysteria that passed fairly unnoticed in radio, but seems totally out of place in television.

The most exasperating of all the Barbours, conceivably the most irritating character ever created, is Paul Barbour, the family philosopher. It has been Paul's duty these 18 years to comfort the Barbours when they lose a husband or a child, to observe that a girl must be brave in periods of stress, that honesty is a good thing and that stealing is wrong.

You can hardly quarrel with anything Paul says. But these homely platitudes are frequently contradicted and nullified by the plots. Right now Claudia, who is respectably married and having a child, is utterly miserable while Hazel, who is helling around the Pacific Ocean with a tall, dark stranger, is having the time of her life. A fine sort of moral to preach to the young.

10 Countries Are Observing Postage Stamp Centennials

By William M. Stuart

THE FIRST POSTAGE STAMP of each of the following ten countries was issued in 1850: Austria, British Guiana, Hanover, New South Wales, Prussia, Saxony, Schleswig-Holstein, Spain, Switzerland, Victoria.

STUART

New South Wales issued its famous commemoratives Jan. 1, 1850, and Victoria brought out its first issue Jan. 5, 1850. On Jan. 1, 1901, New South Wales and Victoria, former British Colonies, united with other British Colonies to form the Commonwealth of Australia and the postage stamps of Australia are now used. At Melbourne this year an exhibition will be held to celebrate the event.

Hanover, Prussia, Saxony and Schleswig-Holstein issued their first stamps in 1850, but now are included in Germany. Austria's first stamp appeared June 1, 1850, and already an exhibit observing the event has been held in Philadelphia. The famous "circulars" of British Guiana appeared July 1, 1850. Spain brought out its first issue Jan. 1, 1850.

The first "Federated" issue of Switzerland appeared April 15, 1850. Prior to that date several Swiss cantons issued stamps for their postal systems. Canada, Baden, Denmark, Hawaii, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Sardinia, Trinidad, Tuscany and Wurttemberg issued their first stamps in 1851. Thus 1950 will be a centennial year for many adhesive postage stamps.

IT IS VERY DOUBTFUL that a stamp will be issued this year in honor of Patrick Henry of Virginia, famous for his speech of "Give me liberty or give me death." The 175th anniversary of that oration takes place this year and the Postmaster General declares that the program for the year has been completed.

THE Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, A. G. Galloway presiding. The feature of the meeting was an exhibition by John S. Costello of all stamps issued by member nations for the 75th anniversary of the Universal Postal Union. Another meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

The Post Card Club will meet tomorrow evening in the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw. This meeting takes the place of the scheduled session of April 12, since the school will be closed on that date.

Hunter M. Thomas, Jr., 2000 R st. nw., has been appointed chairman of the memorial committee of the American Philatelic Society by Wilbur F. Cannon, president of the society.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow evening in the Woodridge Public Library, 2206 Rhode Island ave. ne.

School Board Highly Prizes Once-Scorned Strayer Report

By Elsie Carper

A YEAR AGO when the Strayer report on District schools was published, scarcely anyone had a kind word to say for the study.

It was forced on an unwilling District by Congress and drained away $100,000 in school funds at a time when money was sorely needed for the school building program.

A Republican Congress authorized the survey. While it was in preparation the face of Congress changed and the Democratic dominated Congress that received the report pigon-holed it.

When Dr. George D. Strayer, professor emeritus of Columbia University, presented his findings to Board of Education members, they frankly admitted they thought the survey had been a waste of funds.

TODAY THE Strayer report is the hottest commodity in District education. The school board has approved a half dozen of its major recommendations and other phases of the report are receiving sympathetic study.

A sick leave program already is in effect and the school board is on record as favoring a central cafeteria program and clerical help for elementary school principals. The board is seeking funds for the rehabilitation of old school buildings, improved school lighting and a more efficient method of bookkeeping. All are recommendations of the Strayer survey in which the board concurs.

The survey report has formed the basis on a sweeping reorganization of school administration now underway.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning has recommended and the board approved the creation of a new position of associate superintendent in charge of personnel. The school board now is seeking congressional approval to fill the job.

The new superintendent is to be placed in charge of personnel for both the white and Negro schools ending the present duplication in this field.

DR. STRAYER said a full-time personnel officer was needed to take charge of teacher recruitment and the inservice training program that keeps teachers already hired acquainted with modern methods of instruction.

In requesting the board to approve the new position Dr. Corning indicated that the schools will launch a teacher recruitment drive.

Dr. Strayer was highly critical of the local schools for an "unhealthy inbreeding" fostered here by a system which gives appointment preference to graduates of the local teacher colleges.

He recommended that the personnel director visit teacher colleges throughout the country and recruit graduates to teach in District schools.

Dr. Corning now is preparing a study on the general subject of teacher appointment. One phase of this report will cover the possibility of giving examinations for qualified candidates in centers other than Washington.

Another section of the report will deal with the content of the examinations. Dr. Strayer found that the tests placed a high priority on the ability to reproduce factual material and provided no adequae screening for teachers who had developed a broad educational philosophy.

Dr. Corning recently told the school board that he is studying "discrimnatory" phases of the teacher selection program with an eye to making the examinations less factual and more functional.

THE BOARD currently is considering a reorganization of elementary school administration recommended by Dr. Strayer and the survey staff.

It would end the present geographical administration of elementary schools and place school officers now in charge of these areas over city-wide functions of administration, supervision, curriculum planning and special services.

Dr. Strayer urged the change to better equalize the educational program throughout the city. He found this program "spotty," with some schools doing a "bang-up" job and others falling down in teaching the fundamentals.

Other school administrative changes are in prospect, with consideration given to the Strayer recommendation that the two first assistant superintendents now heading up white and Negro schools be redesignated as deputy superintendents and their authority strengthened.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS also have plans for a public supported college program recommended by Dr. Strayer.

Dr. Corning recently told a group of citizens that he and his staff are working diligently on a proposal that will be presented to the school board in the near future. One section of the study is expansion of the teacher colleges.

The survey called for a 10-million-dollar outlay to replace the present inadequate buildings at Miner and Wilson Teachers Colleges. Dr. Corning said that if the college programs are expanded new plants definitely will be needed.

One recommendation of the Strayer survey has had enthusiastic support from the school board but has made little headway with the District Commissioners or Congress.

The survey urged a Federal loan for financing a 38-million-dollar school building construction program. The Commissioners and Congress instead have chosen to pay for school construction from current revenues.

Howard Dean Makes National Music Board

WARNER LAWSON, dean of the School of Music at Howard University, has been elected vice president of the Eastern Zone of the National Association of Schools of Music. The association is the only accrediting agency in the field of music.

The position of vice president of the Eastern Zone automatically places Dean Lawson, along with the vice presidents of the North-Central, Southwestern and Western zones, on the executive committee, the policy-making unit of the association. Some member schools in the Eastern zone are Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, Yale University, Julliard School of Music, New England Conservatory and Eastman School of Music.

The School of Music at Howard was accepted as a member of the National Association in 1944. In his recommendation to the association, the president, Dr. Donald H. Swarthout, dean of the School of Fine Arts at the University of Kansas, said, "The school is in a flourishing condition, a high level of instruction is being offered, and a fine seriousness of purpose is in evidence throughout the music school."

A graduate of Williston Academy and Fisk University, with graduate work at Yale and Harvard, Dean Lawson came to Howard in 1942 as Dean of the School of Music, bringing a background of teaching at Fisk, A. & T. College in Greensboro, N. C., and extensive concert work throughout the South and East. Under his administration the school has shown an increase in enrollment, addition of a new department, increase in faculty and expansion of physical facilities. He directs the university choir.

WEAM to Repeat 'Document A-777' At 8 This Evening

Norman Corwin's "Document A/777" will be rebroadcast by WEAM tonight at 8 since the station was able to give it only the very late hour of 11:30 p. m. last Sunday.

"Document A/777" is an hour-long show in which historical incidents of injustice point up the reason for the U. N. document A/777, more popularly called the Human Rights Declaration. It is the first in a six-part series about the U. N., which the Mutual network is airing once a month on Sunday nights at 9.

WEAM is unable to take the network show at 9, which is how it happened to give it such poor air time last week. Hereafter WEAM will transcribe the shows and play them the following Sunday at 8 p. m. That makes the local dates for the "Pursuit of Peace" series April 23, March 14, June 25, July 23 and September 17.

Van Heflin is narrator on tonight's show, heading a cast of "bit" players which includes Laurence Olivier, Joan Crawford, Edward G. Robinson, Robert Young, Maurice Evans, Lena Horne, Marsha Hunt and Jose Ferrer.

Penn Gets a Winner in Goldmark

THE University of Pennsylvania formally recognized the importance of electronics in the field of medical research when it recently created a chair of medical electronics, and formally recognized one of the outstanding figures in electronic research when it appointed 43-year-old Dr. Peter C. Goldmark to fill it.

In Goldmark the Medical School seems to have captured itself something of a prize item. Winner of the Morris Liebmann Memorial Prize for electronic research in 1946, Goldmark is known in less rarified circles for his development of Columbia's long playing micro-groove recording which threw the recording business into such a turmoil two years ago, and the development of color television for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

He is director of engineering research and development for CBS and will continue there, traveling to Philadelphia for necessary consultations and lectures at the university.

First in 1940

The Goldmark system of color television, the first practical one, was demonstrated in the CBS laboratories in 1940. War work—radar counter measures at the Harvard radio research laboratory during the war — slowed things down, but color TV blossomed soon after, and it was the use of color television to show surgical techniques that brought Dr. Goldmark and the University of Pennsylvania's Medical School together.

Last May, tests of the practicality of such telecasts were made at the university, followed several weeks later at Atlantic City, N. J., by the first of many telecasts of surgery for doctors attending conventions.

The demonstrations have been a thundering success.

More Research

GOLDMARK'S work at the university will include further research into teaching surgery through color television, as well as work in radiology, cancer research and other electronic matters related to medicine.

Goldmark has risen to present eminence in less than 15 years. Born in Budapest, Hungary, in December, 1906, he went to work for Pye Radio, Ltd., in England after getting his bachelor and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Vienna. In 1933 he came to the United States and in 1936 began to work for CBS.

In addition to the work he has done at CBS in color television and on the long playing records, he has developed the instantaneous audience measurement service which works on a radar principle and permits radio or television stations to know minute-by-minute how many sets are tuned to them.

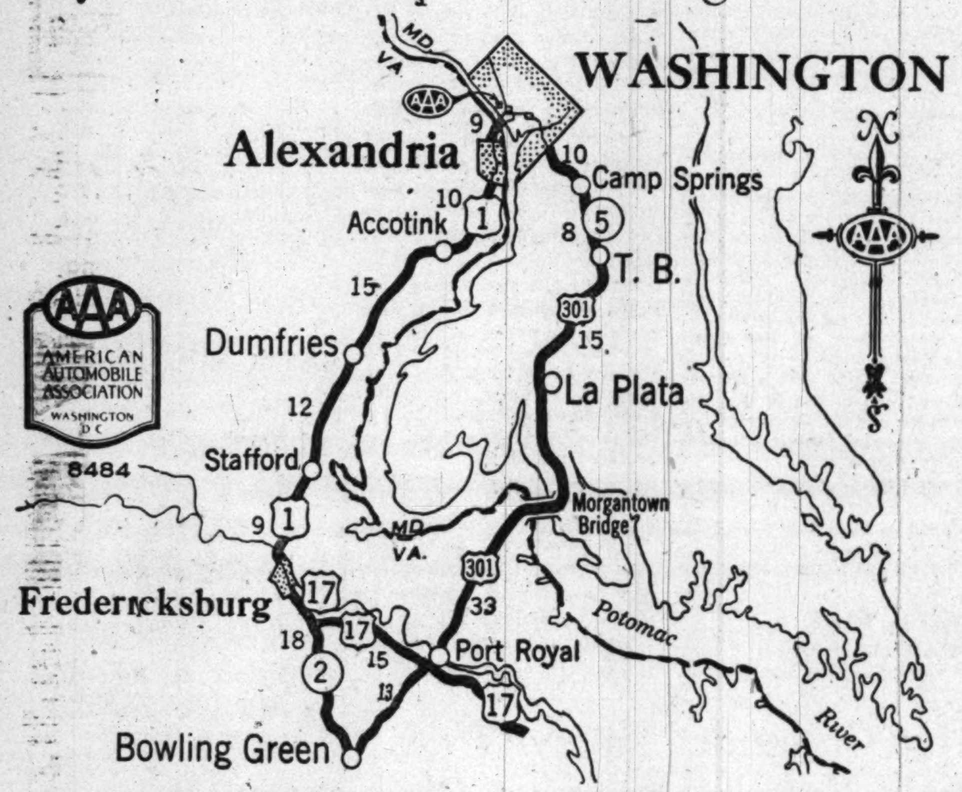
Try a Motor Trip to Bowling Green



By Walter W. Hubbard
American Automobile Association

DURING George Washington's second administration the little town of Bowling Green, Va., was established, 1794, less than a score of miles south of George's boyhood farm home on the Rappahannock River, across from Fredericksburg. It is to that locale our 152-mile round trip takes us in this suggestion from the triple-A.

Our start is over U. S. 1 with the 9-mile drive to Alexandria where may be seen one of the most unusual monuments to our first President. It is the National Masonic Memorial, 333 feet high, and modeled after the ancient lighthouse at Alexandria, Egypt. Because it is located on Shooters Hill, the top of the monument is actually above the tip of Washington Monument in the District of Columbia. It is open free, to the public, from 9 to 6 o'clock.

Seven and one-half miles south of Alexandria is Woodlawn, on U. S. 1, one of the most historic houses in the vicinity. It was built by Lawrence Lewis in 1805 from plans made by George Washington for Lewis' bride, Nellie Custis. We drive on for 2½ miles more to Accotink and, continuing on U. S. 1 for another couple of miles we reach Pohick Church, the Parish Church of Mount Vernon, Gunston Hall and Belvoir (now known as Fort Belvoir). The site of this church was selected by George Washington in 1767 and the building was completed in 1773 at a cost of 877 pounds, current money of Virginia. Three Georges—Washington, Mason and Fairfax—owned pews in this church. During the War Betwen the States the Federal troops used Pohick Church as a stable and the baptismal fount as a watering trough.

'Rival' to New York

FIFTEEN miles southwest of Accotink lies Dumfries, locale of one of the American Automobile Association's School Safety Patrol Officers' Training Camps. Formerly a great tobacco shipping port, Dumfries was founded in 1707 by a Scotch businessman who entertained grandiose ideas of making the river "metropolis" a rival of New York City.

P. S. Last census report shows New York ahead of Dumfries, Va.

Immediately south of Dumfries lies Triangle, where, if we wish to visit the U. S. Marines training base at Quantico, on the Potomac River, we make a left-hand turn. Otherwise, keep going through Rectory and Stafford, and on into Fredericksburg, one of the most historic small cities in North America.

Fredericksburg, on the Rappahannock, is as crowded with authentic Colonial buildings and homes as Williamsburg is of reconstructed ones. It was once a great shipping port for such commodities as tobacco, grain, flax and some furs, brought in by huge Conestoga wagons. During the Civil War four bloody battles were fought for the possession of the city, which changed hands seven times.

On the northwest corner of William and Charles sts. is the old slave block, while on Charles between William and George sts. is to be found the James Monroe law office containing antiques, relics and family possessions of President Monroe and his immediate family. Even the desk on which the President wrote what was later to become known as the Monroe Doctrine is there, in perfect condition.

Died at Princeton

AFTER visiting the Monroe office, drive to the southwest corner of Carolina and Amelia sts. to see Hugh Mercer's Apothecary Shop. General Mercer was killed at the Battle of Princeton, dying a Revolutionary War hero. Kenmore, built by Fielding Lewis, who married Betty Washington, George's sister, is one of the most tastefully and magnificently furnished Colonial mansions in all America. Lewis made guns for Washington's army, and judging by the house, apparently at a profit.

The grounds of Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, as well as the buildings which comprise that part of the University of Virginia, founded by Thomas Jefferson, will be a "must" to most women motorists before they leave for the 18-mile run to Bowling Green.

Principal items of interest in Bowling Green, at the juncture of U. S. 301 and Virginia hwy. 2, are the Old Church, the old jail, and the old clerk's office, as well as a monument erected to commemorate the persecution of the Baptists in 1771. We leave here over U. S. 301 and drive northeast through the A. P. Hill Military Reservation, named after Ambrose Powell Hill, a Confederate corps commander under Robert E. Lee who served at Gettysburg and who was killed at Petersburg. Thirteen miles from Bowling Green, on the Rappahannock River, lies Port Royal.

Two miles south of Port Royal, at Garrett Place, John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, was found by Union cavalry, in a barn, and killed while resisting arrest, 1865. Nearby is Gay Mont, a beautiful old home and estate, the house being built, it is claimed, before 1725. It is open from April 15 to December 1; admission 50 cents.

Ahead of us, driving northeast, is a drive of 33 miles through Port Conway, Edge Hill, over the Morgantown Bridge, through Newburg, Faulkner and Bel Alton, into La Plata, Md., seat of Charles County. The city was established after the railroad, constructed in 1868, reached this point. Fifteen additional miles northeast, over U. S. 301, lies T. B., an oddly named village, and 18 more miles north, through Camp Springs, brings us back to the District of Columbia.

This trip of 152 miles can be made comfortably in one day of driving if an early start is made, and the A. A. A. doesn't mean "early in the afternoon." If any overnight stop is planned, it is recommended that it be at either the Princess Anne or Stratford Hotel, in Fredericksburg, or at Brown's Motor Court, nearby, to benefit by more time for historic sites-seeing.

Fishing Guide Is Put Out By Tennessee

NASHVILLE, TENN.—"Fishing Guide to the Great Lakes of Tennessee" and "A Guide to the Great Lakes of the Tennessee" are two new publications just released by the State.

The guide includes data on TVA, United States Engineers, and State lakes. Each lake is listed individually, with the names of the dock operators, pertinent data about the lake and the type of fish to be caught in it.

The fishing guide also includes a map showing the location of lakes and fishing docks. Tennessee's fishing regulations are summarized.

The guide gives complete information for boating enthusiasts, with details of practically every mile of navigation from Paducah to Knoxville on the Tennessee River, covering a distance of some 652 river miles. It also contains an interesting detailed map.

The river guide points out that the Tennessee is a river old in history and tradition but new in development and transportation, for the huge dams of TVA have completely changed the surface of the river, eliminating the shoals and obstructions to traffic, and in their place a 9-foot channel marked from mouth to head.

Both the guides are obtainable free of charge from the Division of State Information, State Office Building, Nashville 3, Tenn.

Cool Days Set Spring Back In Carolina

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—The recent cold weather turned the western North Carolina spring blooming calendar back to normal, and instead of a burst of spring flowers in early April as indicated during the "June in January" weather, the mountain floral procession is now expected to begin the last of April and extend into June, when rhododendron is in full flower.

Asheville will hold its annual Garden Tour May 1-2, which follows the Tryon show on April 20-21, and those dates are the cue for early mountain blooming.

The cold wave in early March retarded plum and pear tree development, but apple blossoms were not far enough along to be affected seriously.

Small flowers in the Great Smokies, out far ahead of schedule, were affected by the freeze, but naturalists believe they will recover and bloom again in normal season. Mountain shrubs are hearty and withstand cold weather well. For this reason it is not believed that rhododendron bushes were affected and that this beautiful mountain flower will be out in full array between mid-May and mid-June at Craggy Gardens and other famous spots which attract thousands of visitors.

Economy to Be Top Attraction, Predicts New Jersey Council

TRENTON, N. J.—Economy will be a major attraction of spring vacations in New Jersey, according to the New Jersey Council, State tourist promotion agency.

An average rate of about $4 per day, per person was found at most of the beach front hotels along the 120-mile New Jersey shore.

The rate range is from about $3.50 to $12 per day for two people during the spring season.

Resort officials in the more than 50 communities along the shore, estimate that present rates will remain in effect until about June 1, when the usual seasonal increases will occur. Summer rates are approximately 10 percent higher than those for the early season months.

A mild winter has kept most resorts in the shore sectors active, and there is little repair work to be completed before the spring crowds arrive.

Sports facilities also reflect the buying mood of the traveling public. Typical charges now in effect at most of the leading shore communities are $1.50 per hour for horseback riding; $2 a day for rowboats, and party boat fishing trips at $3.50 per person, including tackle and bait.

The major golf courses have been playable almost every day this winter and current greens fees at the big courses are about $3 for 18 holes.

Modern tennis courts charge $1 per hour and bicycles may be rented at 50 cents an hour.

Traffic on the scenic Ocean Drive, running along the sand dunes from Atlantic City to Cape May, is already heavy.

Racing will play a major part in New Jersey's sports program for 1950 with spring and summer series of sailboat and speedboat races at many of the resort centers. Ocean City will launch its speedboat program for the year with the John E. Fite Memorial Speedboat Regatta to be held on Memorial Day.

Complete information on vacations in New Jersey is provided by the 1950 edition of the full color brochure "Visit New Jersey," distributed free of charge by the New Jersey Council, 520 E. State st., Trenton, N. J.

All of Rome Is Ready for Tourist Flood

By Mark Strage

ROME (ONA).—More than the church alone is interested in the Holy Year. Every pilgrim, however spiritual his motives for coming to Rome, is also a tourist and so fair game for shopkeepers, hotel managers, restaurant owners and souvenir pedlers, most of whom are fully ready today for the peak months of April and May.

Most of the pilgrims will have little pocket money. Most are working people who would otherwise never think of leaving their homelands, much less travel to Rome. The wealthier are subject to the innumerable international currency restrictions existing these days. German pilgrims, for example, will be allowed, above and beyond transportation, room and board, 100 lire (15 cents) a day for spending money.

BUT the sheer weight of numbers more than makes up for this. Three million pilgrims (a conservative estimate) who will spend an average five days in Rome (another conservative estimate) adds up to 15 million pilgrim-days, or considerably more income for Rome than even last year's bumper crop of well-heeled Americans. And besides the pilgrims, there will be the usual number of pleasureseeking visitors, which is causing a major headache to the Holy Year planners.

Because so many of the pilgrims are poor, the Italian Government has provided special reductions on nearly everything from transportation to restaurants. But how to tell them apart from unscrupulous and undeserving bargain-seekers?.

The answer lies in the "Pilgrim's Packet," which may be purchased all over the world and at every frontier crossing into Italy. The packet consists of a prayer book, a small guide to Rome and the four churches to be visited, a book of directions, some holy pictures and a badge Vatican. The badge, incidentally, bearing the coat of arms of the was designed and copyrighted by a Dane who receives 25 percent of the profits and has already sold the concession for manufacturing the badge in 15 countries.

Neverthetheles, a somewhat impious political note has crept into the proceedings. Anyone desiring to sell or peddle anything to the pilgrims, and that includes half the population of Rome, must have a license, which is obtainable only through the appropriate municipal office—staffed exclusively by appointees of the Christian Democratic party.

Whistle Stopping

What, No Whisky? But Oh, That Music

By Orval Hopkins

TWO airlines have recently come out with notices which distress me. In one, Colonial Airlines boasts that it serves no alcoholic beverages on its flights to Bermuda. In the other, National Airlines says it is featuring "music by Muzak" on some of its flights.

Now I don't drink, myself. (Except for a couple of fingers before and after breakfast, before and after lunch, before, during and after dinner, and just prior to retiring.)

Some people, of course, do, particularly when flying in airplanes. If they fly Colonial, they can't get a drink. Isn't this an abridgment of privileges?

Colonial, however, has made a survey which it says shows that 77.95 percent of its passengers bound for Bermuda are against airborne drinking. "Personally," one is quoted as saying, "I think alcohol would be very detrimental to flying. I have enjoyed my many air trips remarkably well without same being served." "A drink or two might often help a person should they feel nervous," said another. "But this rule is too often enlarged upon."

No replies were quoted from people who thought drinking while flying was a fine thing.

In connection with National's installation of Muzak the obvious question (let's be obvious at all costs, shall we, National?) is, "What if some passenger doesn't like Muzak?" He can't turn it off. Isn't this an abridgment of privileges?

There seems to be only one solution. This is for National to cut off everybody's drinks, and for Colonial to install Muzak. Thus everything would be completely miserable on both lines.

NEW YORK, which believes in doing something about the weather and thus has brutally slain a fine old joke, is arranging to have flowers in bloom for the spring season from New York City to Buffalo. Botanical gardens in Buffalo, for example, are starting exhibits of lilies, tulips, daffodils and gardenias today. The New York Botanical Garden will begin its display next Friday, as will the Queens Botanical Garden. More about all this in "New York State Vacationlands," available from the Division of State Publicity, 112 State st., Albany, 7.

SOMETHING CALLED "The Tennes-Seer" (These names. I was once connected in a remote way with a publicity enterprise whose satraps couldn't understand why I objected to calling the weekly sheet "The Pub-Informer.")—well, the ah—the Tennes-Seer says Tennessee's great advantage as a tourist State is its location. "Within 500 miles of our borders reside more than 51 percent of the entire United States population," it says. That gives Tennessee a majority. "A bad night's rest," it goes on, "a poorly prepared meal, an untidy bath, a discourteous maid or attendant can ruin many a pleasant memory." I'll have to say in truth that I never heard anything but good said of Tennessee. I've visited the State only once, and I've always wanted to go back.

A SPECIAL short cruise is being booked for the Holland-America liner Veendam for August 12 to 23. She'll sail from New York for Havana, Nassau and return. Minimum rate, $195.

CANADA, Canada says, "isn't resting in 1950 on last year's tourist laurels, spectacular as they were. It was the busiest travel year Canadians ever experienced, with more visiting motorists from the United States than ever before . . . An added attraction awaits the tourist, a 10 percent premium on every United States dollar spent in Canada. It's easy to come to Canada. No passport is required." Okay?

EASTER things are planned at Buck Hill Falls, Pa., according to a note I have here from Edward C. Jenkins. The Inn will be operating, Jenkins reports, under the sharp, affable eye of General Manager Clifford R. Gillam, and a group of people known as "cottage colonists" are opening their summer houses for part of the week.

THE OFFICIAL 1950 guidebook for "Historic Garden Week" in Virginia is being distributed by the Garden Club of Virginia, sponsor of the April 22-29 event. The club, hand and gloving it with the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, has put out a picture of a pretty girl holding the guidebook and it's real high class publicity. You can get the book by writing the club at the Hotel Jefferson, Richmond, or the State chamber at 111 N. 5th st., Richmond.

A NEW ROAD map of South America has been made up by the General Drafting Co., Inc., mapmakers for Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), but please don't write and ask them for it. They're a little close about the map. I was able to obtain one and can say it's a beauty. It is printed in full color, shows all major highways in South America and presents a graphic pictorial guide to the attractions, or some of them, down there.

Resorts Push Plans for Easter Day

MOST Eastern resorts are rapidly completing plans for Easter programs. In Atlantic City, seven Philadelphia string bands will stage a pageant next Saturday evening in Convention hall. In addition, three former Miss Americas are scheduled to be on hand to select the 10 most attractive hats worn by lady strollers on Easter Sunday. The dozen best-dressed men also will be selected.

An Easter sunrise service in the Steel Pier's ocean stadium will start the day.

J. E. Reed of the Senator Hotel, Atlantic City, reports that a full program of entertainment is on schedule for Easter week. This will include concert music, motion pictures, and card parties—plus dancing in the rooftop night club. Riding academies and golf courses are available nearby, Reed points out.

At Natural Bridge, Va., a choir of 120 voices will sing an Easter oratorio for the annual sunrise service. Sixty girls from Southern Seminary at Buena Vista and a like number of cadets make up the chorus. They will sing in a rock-walled amphitheater to an audience expected to approximate 10,000.

A preview of the annual Easter orchid promenade is being held today at Asbury Park, N. J. A board of judges will pick the 100 best-dressed women on Easter day, each of whom gets a free orchid corsage. The top 12 will receive gifts of merchandise.

A similar project will be carried out today at Atlantic City, where 50 gardenia corsages will be handed the 50 best-dressed ladies. Florence H. Raikes of the Hotel Traymore says guests of the Traymore will be afforded a fine view of the goings-on from the sun-decks of the hotel. Next Saturday night in the main lobby, the Traymore Choristers, 50 trained voices, will present a concert in conjunction with William Madden and his orchestra. Another concert will be presented on Easter night.

Fifty orchids will be presented the 50 best-dressed women in the annual Easter promenade at Ocean City, N. J., while the "most fetching" children will be awarded Easter bunnies. An Easter egg hunt will be held on the beach Saturday afternoon and a sunrise service on the pier Sunday morning.

Easter scenes like this, taken last season at Mirror Lake, Yosemite National Park, Calif., will be common next Sunday throughout the land. A number of resorts and vacation spots are planning Easter programs

Canadians Conduct Operation Antelope

Several hundred hungry antelope in southwestern Saskatchewan were dropped enough baled alfalfa hay to see them through the lean period as the result of a new kind of Royal Canadian Air Force mercy flight this winter. The operation was carried out in two flights from Regina, using a Winnipeg-based RCAF twin-engined Dakota aircraft.

Bons Vivants See New Film on Africa

A new sound motion picture on East Africa was shown at a meeting of the Washington Bons Vivants (travel association) at the Burlington Hotel this week. The film was sponsored by Michael Durford, director of the East African Tourist board, which covers the provinces of Tanganyika, Kenya, Uganda and the Island of Zanzibar.

The African premier of the film was held one day later, owing to the time differential, at Nairobi, the smart modern Tanganyika city, located 300 miles inland from the Indian Ocean coast.

Parks Season Begins Today With Bird Walk

The first events of the National Capital Parks outdoor program will include bird observation walks to be held today in the C & O Canal Parkway near Glen Echo, Md., and in the Soldiers Home Grounds, and a walk to observe woodland wildflowers in Rock Creek Park this afternoon.

The Canal bird walk will begin at Stop 39 on the Cabin John carline at MacArthur blvd. and Cornell st., Glen Echo, at 7 a. m. Park Naturalist Kenny Dale will be in charge.

The Soldiers Home bird walk will be organized by leaders from the Audubon Society of the District of Columbia at Park Place and Park rd. nw., at 7 a. m.

The wildflower walk will start at 16th and Whittier sts. nw., adjoining Rock Creek Park, at 3 p. m. today. Ranger-Naturalist Howard White will act as leader.

Copies of the Outdor Program 1950, listing future events to be sponsored by the parks office, can be obtained in Room 1223 or 2023, Interior Building, or by telephoning REpublic 1820, Extension 2557 or 2095. The schedule includes illustrated talks at the Sylvan Theater, canal barge rips, garden tours, nature outings, bird walks, geology tours, historical tours, astronomy observations, Wednesday evening outings, and trips to other park areas in Maryland and Virginia.

Nova Scotia Acquires Historic Building

The Nova Scotia government recently acquired The Mount, a 137-year-old colonial-type mansion with 2500 surrounding acres. The mansion, which was finished in 1815, overlooks Lake Martha at Mount Uniacke, about 25 miles from Halifax.

The estate had been held in the Uniacke family since its purchase by Richard John Uniacke, an Irishman who served as Nova Scotia's atorney general from 1797 to 1830.

Racing in Quebec Starts May 20

Quebec is to have a horse-racing season that will last from May 20 to July 17.

Three meets recently sanctioned by the Quebec Racing Association will be held at the Blue Bonnets Track, Montreal, on the following dates:

May 20-June 5, by the Valleyfield Exhibition Co.; June 10-June 26, by the King Edward Pack and Amusement Co.; July 1-July 17, by the Montreal Jockey Club.

These races are flat and steeplechase events. Harness racing, for trotters and pacers, is also very popular throughout the Province, with a dozen meetings being held weekly during the summer season.

One to a Customer

Sun Valley, Idaho, is justly proud of its service, made possible by the fact that there is approximately an employe per guest during winter season.

Five Anglers Hook 308 Fish in Hour

Miami, Fla.—Five fresh water anglers were fined in Miami's Court of Crimes recently for exceeding the fishing limit by hooking a total of 308 fish in 1 hour. The State limit is 25 fish a day for each person.

The anglers admitted their catches respectively as 91, 65, 56, 51 and 45. The fish were taken in the Tamiami Trail Canal, a portion of which is within the city limits.

Wait Till the Sun Shines

Gardener's Calendar for April

By James H. Beattie

HOW wonderful if one could predict the weather even for a month! With this ability it would be possible to make an exact garden calendar. Right now the gardener proposes to start his garden campaign, but Jupiter Pluvius disposes otherwise. This generous moisture supply is needed and we can well afford to wait for the sun to dry the garden soil so that it can be properly prepared.

There is nothing to be gained and a lot to be lost through working soil too wet. While April is certainly the month for plowing the garden and planting those first-early crops it may be best to wait a little until the weather and other conditions have improved.

Much can be accomplished during these cool, rainy days to advance the gardening work. The ordering and receipt of seeds, fertilizer, pesticides, new tools and other garden supplies should receive immediate attention. Seedsmen are not busy during these rainy, windy, low-temperature days but when warm, sunshiny ones come it will be impossible to obtain garden supplies without inconvenience or disappointment. Mail orders may not come in time simply because the dealers are overwhelmed. Everyone will benefit by promptness in buying the supplies for the gardening season.

The first harvest which an amateur gardener can reap from spring sowing is a mess of green onions. Set the largest sets deeply. Three weeks later the harvest can begin

Condition the Tools

THOSE who follow the green thumb year after year make it a practice during early spring to look over their garden equipment, cleaning, repairing, sharpening, replacing worn items. But the newcomer has something of a problem in deciding what to buy. The market is filled with gardening gadgets, some good, but it is hard to surpass the time-tried spade, spading fork, garden rake, hoe and planting trowel. These, plus a dust gun or a sprayer and a garden line, make it possible to do a lot of successful gardening. Those having large gardens find such items as the tractor, power sprayer, and irrigation equipment excellent investments, particularly where the operations are continued year after year. However, a garden enterprise should not be sunk financially by a too heavy investment in equipment.

The garden clean-up is one of the important early spring activities. Plant remains should be removed and either composted or destroyed. Stakes and other plant supports used last season for annual plants should be removed in preparation for plowing or spading.

Some improve the early spring period by spreading compost, chicken litter, peat moss, ground limestone, superphosphate and other materials to be worked into the soil during the plowing or spading.

Many of the extra-early vegetables, peas, spinach and others must be planted during April, and the selection of the best date, not too early and not too late, is the most important part of the April garden calendar. Without knowing the weather in advance, dates given for a specific crop can be only approximate. If planting occurs while the soil is still cold and wet, the seeds are liable to decay. A moderately late planting followed by a growing season of mild temperature and well-distributed rainfall may produce the finest results, even with the supersensitive crops. Although the calendar date may be a little late (we mean the wall calendar), it is best to plant as usual and there may be an excellent chance for a good return.

Vegetables that are planted during early spring may be roughly divided into two groups, the extra hardy ones including asparagus, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, kale, lettuce, onions, peas, potatoes and spinach. These are adapted to planting during the latter part of March or the first half of April. The other group, those that are a little less hardy, includes beets, carrots, chard, mustard and parsnip. These are adapted to planting during the last half of April.

The gardening moral for this backward 1950 spring season would seem to be to plant the early vegetables just as soon as weather and soil conditions permit. The supersensitive ones, peas, head lettuce and spinach, have very poor chances if planted after the middle of April.

Plow That Plot Right Now

BLACKSBURG, VA., (AP).—Here are some timely tips from a Virginia Agricultural Extension service specialist on getting the vegetable garden under way:

Plow the garden plot as soon as the ground will permit. Get it plowed early in April.

Buy disease-resistant vegetable varieties. Make it a point to have a balance between leafy and root vegetables.

Stock up now on disease and insect control materials. You'll need a rotenone-copper mixture for general insect and disease control; a copper-DDT mixture for potato insects; sabadilla dust for harlequin bugs, squash bugs and green stink bugs, and nicotine sulphate for aphids.

Apply fertilizer before planting or at planting time. Use a 5-10-5 or 4-12-4 fertilizer mixture at the rate of 25 to 30 pounds per 1,000 square feet of garden. Mix the fertilizer thoroughly with the soil before seeding.

These suggestions all come from L. C. Beamer, vegetable gardening specialist on the extension service staff here.

Detailed information can be obtained by writing the Extension Service, care of Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, for circular 475, "Vegetable Garden Suggestions for Virginia Farmers."

Almost Planting Time

Lets Plan the 'Mum' Section Now

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

IT WLL soon be time to consider chrysanthemum planting, so let's check over the catalogues and make a selection. Wise gardeners make their choice in the fall from flowers in bloom, for with the many varieties and shades, it is difficult to make a catalogue selection.

In deciding on plants the key things to consider are the time of blooming, the type of flower and the coloring. It is now possible to have chrysanthemums from August until heavy frosts; many will survive the early light frosts.

The location is also important. Where there is space, a bed filled with chrysanthemums is a beautiful sight. But where there must be all-season plantings or mixed plantings it is wise to put early varieties where annuals predominate and use the later varieties where they will have a background of shrubs or late perennials.

Popular Yellows

YELLOW chrysanthemums are perhaps the most popular, with bronzes coming next. One of the most satisfactory early yellows is the Butterball, which blooms from the end of August until severe frost. The small compact bloom lasts well in the house and its low growing, spreading habit makes it an excellent foil for the flowers of autumn.

Eugene Wander, another early yellow, grows about 18 inches in height. It is a very free bloomer, golden in tone with loose petals. Golden Carpet, as its name implies, forms broad mounds, is excellent for edging and is very hardy.

Blends are always good, both as cut flowers and in the garden, where they combine with many colors and are not so apt to make an unhappy color contrast. White chrysanthemums are always a wise choice and some should be included in every order. Avalanche, one of the best, grows 2 feet in height and has 4-inch double blossoms.

Care With Lavenders

ONE has to be careful with the lavender shades and orchid tones. These will often lose much of their beauty if placed close to vivid, tawny flowers. The delicate coloring of the Lavender Lady, one of the most popular of all chrysanthemums, should be allowed to set the color note where it is planted and more or less predominate, with companions of pale pinks, soft yellows, or shaded tones paired off with the dainty little pompon, Orchid Jewel or Chippewa, a large bright aster, or the purple and darker tones of Dubonnet.

When running into the reds one is apt to get into trouble if not familiar with varieties. Many reds are dull and uninteresting, and their shades are difficult to describe. Some are purplish in tone and clash with the oranges and scarlets.

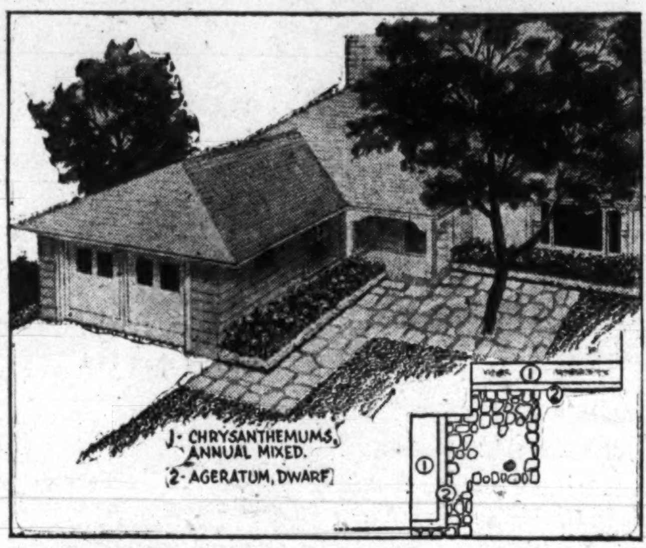
Last fall we made a survey of many of the nearby chrysanthemum gardens and made some selections which seemed to be outstanding. For a good warm red we chose Red Velvet. It is a deep red, velvety in texture, which becomes darker as it ages instead of fading as do many of the reds. It lasts exceptionally well as a cut flower. It is among our spring selections for new plants.

Pink Choice

BETTY was our choice in pinks. It is a lovely coppery pink which lasted well as a cut flower. Others on the list are Champion, a golden yellow with ¾-inch blossoms. Sunshine, a larger and more compact yellow. Mayford pink, rosy with a gold overglow on its 2-to 4-inch bloom. Glorious is a lovely creamy pink. Magnolia, to which we gave a plus mark, was a creamy pink with gold overglow and of deep heavy texture to its petals much like its namesake. Luria was another pale pink to which we gave a plus mark.

The new spoon chrysanthemums are very lovely, particularly in arrangements. They come in many colors and in single and semidouble. The petals are tubular, flattening out near the tip. English chrysanthemums have been much discussed and some of them are lovely, but nurserymen say they have not found them as hardy as some of the new American hybrids.

Plant Colors to Harmonize With House and Its Trim



SMALL HOUSES, like small gardens, possess charm, a quality which seems to evade larger and more pretentious creations. And nothing will enhance the charm of a small modern home so much as a dooryard garden, gay with flowers.

While all flowers are beautiful, and any combination of nature's colors will be harmonious, really stunning effects can be developed by planting colors which harmonize with the house and its trim. For a house of buff or cream color, for example, blue and white flowers will provide a delightful foreground.

In the illustration white and blue flowers are grown as borders to the path and along the foundation line of the house. No shrubs are used except small evergreens flanking the door, and these should be kept small by annual shearing. Of the flowers suggested, petunias should be started in a seed box, in the house, or in a hot-bed or cold frame, since ninety to one hundred days are required to produce flowering plants.

Cynoglossum, the Chinese forget-me-not, and single asters will also bloom earlier, if given a start under protection before it is safe to move them to the garden. They can be sown outdoors, however, and will flower in sixty days. Sweet alyssum is easily grown from seed sown direct in the garden. A compact, dwarf variety should be used, and the plants will do better if thinned out to stand at least six inches apart. When plants begin to grow "leggy" and flowers to be fewer, they can be sheared like a hedge.

Dust the Snowball To Keep Out Bugs

THE LEAVES of the common snowball usually become so covered with plant lice that the leaves curl up and the plant becomes quite unattractive.

If you want to keep your snowball bush, then be sure to dust it thoroughly with a good three way garden dust just as soon as the leaf buds begin to show green.

Wallpapers Take On Deeper Hues

This panoramic mural of a hunting scene well befits a man's room.

By Dorothea Cruger

IF THE first chirp of the robin has made you yearn for a change in your interior furnishings, why not try a whole new scheme of wallpaper? April, the month when Mrs. Housewife thinks of giving her house a face-lifting, has been designated wallpaper style month, and the wallpaper industry has come to her rescue with thousands of new designs and colors.

Color is the keynote in the new 1950 wallpaper lines, with deep hues and warm pastels supplanting the monotones and neutrals of other seasons. Another innovation is the texture, with many wallpapers simulating fabrics. There are weavelike designs which feel like straw or linen, and others printed to look like chintz, lace, calico, gingham or plaid.

To make your rooms look larger or smaller, to brighten up a dark room or lend interest to a recreation room, there are special prints and combinations of paper to achieve the desired effect. For instance, large scenic wallpapers will give an illusion of space, especially if used on one wall. There are clever panoramic scenes and bold prints illustrating sports or hobbies which are ideal for recreation or rumpus rooms.

If a room lacks a focal point, one can be created with the use of bold patterned paper in one alcove or along one wall. The contrast with the more subdued papers on the other three walls will provide new interest.

If the room is small, papers with light colored background are best, for they seem to recede and add space to otherwise cramped quarters. If, on the other hand, the problem is extremely high ceilings, try a striped pattern hung horizontally. This will tend to draw the ceiling down. Dark colored papers will also bring the walls in toward the center of the room.

Once the wallpaper is chosen, the woodwork, upholstery, draperies and accessories can be blended in the general color scheme to create an entirely new and fresh effect for spring, 1950.

A BRIGHT AND youthful treatment of colorful vines and flowers make NO. 1323 one of our most popular patterns. When you see it you'll know why it's a paper that "sells itself."

Asparagus Yields Year After Year

By Alfred Putz

ASPARAGUS is the most important perennial vegetable and a great favorite with home gardeners. A bed that is started right and properly cared for will last a lifetime and give heavy yields year after year. Home-grown asparagus served within an hour after cutting just melts in the mouth and has a delicate sweet flavor never found in the market produce.

Taking care of the bed is neither hard work nor time-consuming. The first spring job is to remove the winter cover of straw, salt hay or whatever was used to prevent frost from entering deeply into the soil.

When the topsoil is moderately dry, add from three to five pounds of dolomitic limestone and ten pounds of a complete commercial fertilizer analyzing 5-10-5 or 4-12-4 for each 50 plants. Cultivate this into the soil, lightly over the rows and five to six inches deep between them.

Any stumps remaining from last year's growth are of no use to the plants. Pull them up if they are not already severed by cultivation or the action of frost.

Seed sprouts need help in fighting their way to the sun. In heavy soil, cover seeds with a special porous mixture which will not crust. That is to say, mix your best, loose, sandy loam with equal amounts of sand and peat moss

Let It Grow Two Years

TO INSURE high yields during the full life of the bed, no spears should be cut until the plants have completed two growing seasons. This applies whether one-year-old or two-year-old roots were set out. The topgrowth, usually called brush, made during these two years lays the foundation for a vigorous and productive root system.

Incidentally, all experts agree that spring is the time to plant asparagus in our section and they recommend strong one-year-old roots exclusively.

The first cutting season must not exceed two weeks because prolonged harvesting at that age severely weakens the roots and seriously affects future crops. The spears are cut just below the surface when from six to eight inches long. Restrict cutting to shoots not less than half an inch in diameter.

The following year the cutting season may be extended until the middle of June. Thereafter it may be continued until July 4. Thin spears are never cut no matter how old the planting.

Soon after the last cutting, give the bed another thorough cultivation and fertilizer application, using for each 50 plants 10 pounds of the same kind of fertilizer as applied in the spring. At this time the fertilizer must be kept away from the plants at least a foot on either side

Do Not Hill Rows

HILLING the rows, once practiced for the production of white shoots, has now fallen into discard mainly because green shoots have more flavor and food value. It also causes the roots to work to the surface where they are endangered by severe winter weather

Encourage the summer brush to make a vigorous growth because it controls the size and quality of subsequent crops. Watch closely for insect pests and go after them promptly. They can do considerable damage, even in a single day. Use a rotenone dust if they attack the spears during the cutting season. Afterwards any good insecticide for leaf-eating pests may be used. Repeat the treatment several times during the season to insure complete protection. Just as soon as red berries form on the female plants, strip them off to strengthen the plants.

Where the planting is small it may take several days' cutting to give enough for a meal. Rather than let the spears grow too tall, which affects their quality, cut them at the proper stage and place promptly into the chiller of the electric refrigerator.

Indoor-Outdoor Living Room

By Henry B. Aul

MORE and more small homes are being designed with the living room across the back or garden side of the house where the windows or a window wall and a door can open directly into the area to be developed as a garden.

In addition, a terrace that will be useful for more than six months of the year can be located just outside the living room and becomes in effect a natural extension or enlargement of the room. A portion of the paved area may be roofed with canvas or other material and screened against insects.

It does not require a large amount of space to create an ornamental setting for the indoor-outdoor living room. Where space is limited, plan the terrace, lawn, color and foliage plantings in one sweeping design that takes in the entire area. Avoid an arrangement that divides the small space into a series of smaller ones.

The large, paved terrace just outside the living room window-wall and door sets the keynote of roominess for the garden. Since it is 20 feet at its greatest width and 38 feet in length, there is plenty of room for arranging lounging furniture in the shade of the honey locust on the lawn nearby and for picnic table and benches close to the grill.

An old-fashioned iron kettle is converted into a charcoal-burning grill, which is placed on a circular, brick platform, 8 inches high, so that it will have a convenient working height. This end of the terrace is secluded by means of a 6-foot screen of corrugated aluminum roofing in a saw-tooth pattern on a framework consisting of 2 by 6 inch uprights and 2 by 3 inch top, middle and bottom horizontal members.

It forms a strong screen that is attractive from both sides, and it is repeated along a portion of the back line of the garden. Poles, 2 inches in diameter, are fastened diagonally against each section as supports for large-flowered clematis or other of the gardener's favorite vines. The aluminum may be painted or allowed to weather naturally. The diagonal poles are painted a contrasting color, in keeping with that of the house.

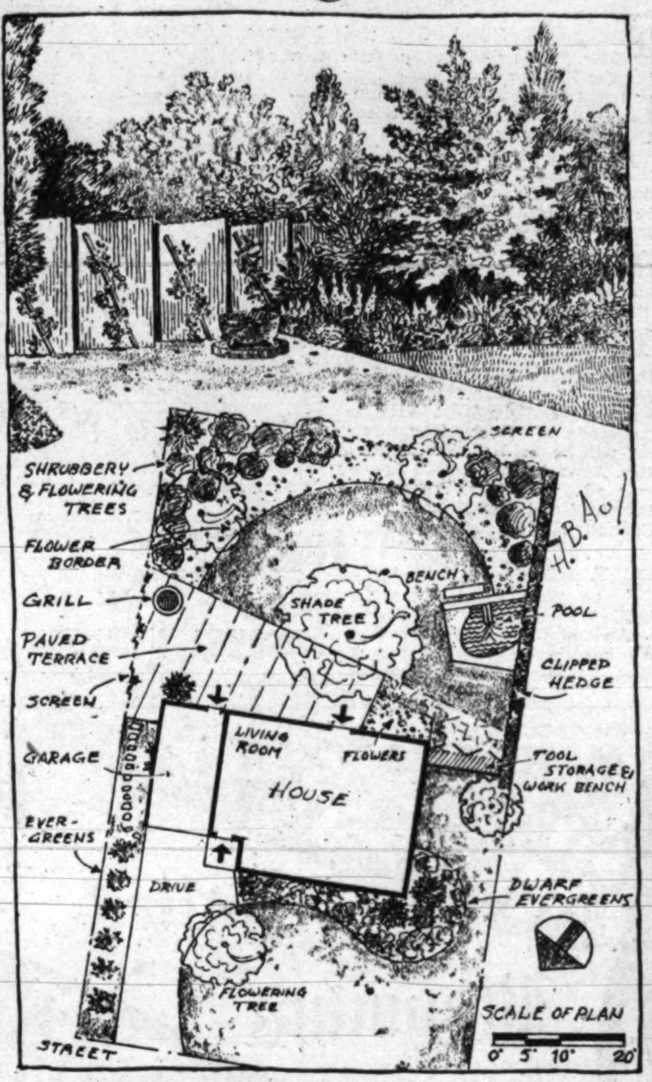
Flowering shrubs and trees are combined with an occasional accenting evergreen tree to create part of the border background. The aluminum screen and a clipped evergreen or deciduous hedge complete the background and garden inclosure.

As observed from the terrace or living room, the massed attractiveness of flowering herbaceous materials and shrubbery on the left is balanced on the right by a fountain-fed pool. The 3-foot-high wall along the back of the pool not only provides a place for the wall spout but it forms an attractive feature against which to stop the flowering border and is the backrest for a comfortable bench that is convenient for close inspection of the flowers at that end of the border.

Potted plants can be displayed along the top of the wall and on the broad coping around two sides of the pool. The water spouting from the wall is seen in profile from the terrace,

Roses are planted in the bed between the house and the path to the work center, while the joints between the flagstones in the paving are filled with close-growing fragrant herbs and other dwarf paving plants. The storage unit, house and garage combine to form inclosure on the fourth side of the garden.

Dwarf spreading yew and small-leaved hollies, kurume azaleas and low-growing evergreen barberries are combined with mountain laurel and Japanese andromeda in the street-side planting of the house. Periwinkle or Baltic ivy is used to fill out the shape of the planting bed and to make clear its continuity with the line of the drive and path to the door. A dogwood spreads a roof of branches above the house entrance, and globe-shaped arborvitae are spaced along the left side of the drive to give the doorway partial inclosure.



The homeground here is only 60 by 100 feet but the feeling is one of spaciousness

Here's How to Control Depth of Sowing Seed

MODERN practice in sowing seeds favors shallow planting. Just how deep to place them is not too important, provided they are not too deep. And the maximum depth in the vegetable garden may be considered to be one to two inches.

Don't bother to measure the depth you plant exactly, as some beginners have been known to do. A good way is to have three depths of "drill," that being the gardeners' word for the shallow trench into which the seed is dropped. The shallowest drill is made by pressing the edge of a narrow board into the soil. This takes the smallest seeds, which are barely covered with soil. The middle depth drill is made with the hoe handle and is about half an inch deep. The deepest drill is made with the corner of the hoe blade, and runs one to two inches.

The old rule that seeds should be sown at a depth equal to four times their diameter is a fairly good one, though impractical to apply with accuracy, of course. It does convey the idea that the larger the seed, the deeper it should be. To some extent the depth of the larger seeds will depend upon the nature of the soil.

In sandy loam they may go a little deeper than in heavy clay; and in hot weather they should be at least twice as deep as in the moist spring weather.

Above all, in making a drill, keep it straight. Some gardeners use a narrow plank as a ruler. A garden line is easier to handle, heavy cords on reels are handy, but any stout cord stretched between two stakes will serve.

But use the line as a guide, and never press the hoe against it, for it will bend, and your garden row may turn out to be serpentine. It this happens, fill up the drill and try it over again. You will soon acquire the knack. You quickly learn to mark the drill in the well prepared soil with very little pressure, almost as though you were drawing a line on paper.

Idea From the Coast

Washable Covers Used On Upholstered Chairs

"WE change our shirts once a day, so why can't we have fabric covers on our upholstered chairs that are just as easily taken off for laundering?"

That's the idea of Karl Lightfoot of Lightfoot Studio, Pasadena, Calif., and he has come up with a new departure in chair construction, utilization and application. He has developed an upholstered chair with a metal frame consisting of three simple units:

1. A one-piece seat and back;
2. A one-piece, four-legged base; and
3. The fabric cover.

Both the base and the seat are designed for such compact nesting that a dozen of both occupy only four cubic feet—an extremely important factor in keeping the price down as the result of high transportation costs from manufacturer to dealer. The base and the seat are fitted together in a foolproof one-step operation involving a single screw.

The terry cloth cover slips off the chair easily, for washing. The metal frame has foam rubber cushioning.

The chair has a metal mesh seat and back that are cushioned in one-inch foam rubber. Over this cushioning is slipped a form-fitting washable terry cloth of chenille cover. The back and seat are fully covered by a fabric, which is held tightly around the base of the chair with elastic.

The chair is adaptable to every room in the house and also excellent for outdoor use. It comes in two basic models—a side chair and a lounge model.

The cost of the dining chair is in the neighborhood of $19 retail while the lounge chair figures to retail for approximately $35.

Insulation Gives a House 'Livability'

INCLUDED in its "livability" is the comfort the house provides in summer and winter. According to the Federal Housing Administration, which insures a large percentage of all home mortgages now being written, this "livability" is influenced by the presence or absence of thermal insulation.

Scientific tests prove that a house properly insulated with mineral wool is cooler in summer than an uninsulated one, the difference in temperature being as much as 15 degrees.

In addition to the summer comfort provided by insulation, extensive tests conducted by the University of Illinois show that between 30 and 60 percent of the winter's fuel bill can be saved in a house fully winterized and insulated with mineral wool.

In figuring the resale value of his house, the owner takes into account all major structural improvements he has made, such as new roof, exterior paint or siding; basement finishing as recreation room; addition to house, such as closets, extra bath; attic finished as living quarters; partition removed between living and dining-room to achieve modern open layout; substitution of small windows by picture window; adding garage.

Minor structural improvements include rearrangement of kitchen for greater efficiency; built-ins such as cabinets, shelves; installation of screen and storm-sash; new automatic heating unit or other equipment.

Exterior improvements: terrace; breezeway; fence or wall; walks or driveway; shrubbery, trees, lawn.

Cart Eases Farm Jobs

THERE'S an old saying that the easiest way to do a thing also is usually the best and most efficient way. That certainly holds true of many a laborious and time-consuming farm chore. Despite our modern mechanization, there still are various little jobs around a farm that can be made easier by taking a leaf out of the book of that worthy ancient who first struck upon the idea of the wheel.

A home-made cart like that pictured below, for example, can save you much time and effort in moving sows from one location to another; or for carrying milk cans, small machines, tools, bags of feed and so on.

The cart is simply and inexpensively constructed. It consists of a plain wooden crate equipped with a handle or trace and mounted on two rubber-tired wheels from an old automobile. The crate, made of 2x4s, may have a gate at one end.

Getting a sow into such a vehicle should not be difficult. If she balks at entering, put some grain in the front of the car and entice her in. If she persists in her refusal, put a basket over her head and back her in.

Better Cover Exposed Pipes

PIPES should be well covered with insulating material where they are exposed in the basement. Mineral wool installed between ceiling beams and between studs in the walls will aid substantially in keeping the house warmer. Fuel savings in a completely weatherproofed home can amount to 51 percent, according to the National Bureau of Standards, which found that full-thick mineral wool insulation saves 35 percent and that storm-sash and weather-strip add another 16½ percent saving.

Tops of radiators should not be obstructed by heavy draperies, wet garments or cloths. Radiator enclosures should have an opening near the floor for cold air intake, as well as an outlet grill near the top. Pans built into the tops of better-grade radiator enclosures should be filled with water to replace the humidity lost through heating rooms.

Caulking all cracks where the house rests on the foundation will add to floor warmth, since a tight basement prevents the escape of furnace heat to the outside and the entrance of cold air to chill the floor. Basement temperature of more than 70 degrees indicates that heat is being waster.

Window Box Affords Chance For Everyone as Gardener

EVERYONE can garden the window box way, whether he lives in a suburb or a tall apartment dwelling. And now is the time to be thinking of it.

The illustration shows the dimensions for a single window. If made of cypress, it will last well, and cost little to build. Where large or multiple windows demand great length, the other dimensions may be larger in proportion, or boxes for each window made.

Remember that window boxes are a decoration for the house. They should harmonize with it, and improve its appearance. The boxes should usually be painted to match the dominant color of the house, or of its trim.

Perhaps the finest of all window box flowers are petunias, because they blossom constantly throughout the summer, and provide so interesting a variety of color, form and habit. The balcony type petunias, which produce trailing vine-like stems, make graceful festoons which drape from the boxes.

Tall nasturtiums, particularly the new doubles, including Golden Gleam, and its hybrids, give the same effect as the balcony-type petunias; and they are excellent window box subjects. Fragrant flowers, such as mignonette, ten-weeks' stocks, and dwarf snapdragons, are doubly attractive.

Arrows Point Way To Daffodil Show

MORE than 300 varieties are being shown at the State Daffodil Show at the Alexandria Recreation Center, 1605 Cameron st., daily from 1 to 6 p. m. Green arrows mark the itinerary through Alexandria to the center from the main approaches to the city. Booths of garden tools and accessories are on display. Members of the Hunting Creek Club are sponsoring a snack bar for those who will.

Use Thinner to Clean Paintbrush

Any bristle brush can be readily cleaned, while still soft, with the proper thinner for the product in which it has been used. Use turpentine, followed by naphtha or mineral spirits for oil base finishes (paint, enamel or varnish). You will need alcohol for brushes used in shellac or alcohol stain. Preferable for lacquers is a thinner made by the manufacturer who produced the lacquer in use.

When you see a Luxuriant, Weed-free Lawn think of the long lasting Lawn Food containing 2,4-D Weed Killer

IN THE GREEN AND YELLOW STRIPED BAG

When you see a fine lawn where you saw a poorly groomed, weedy yard a year or two earlier, chances are you'll find that the transformation was brought about by LAWN BILDER — the sensational multiple-action lawn food.

IMPROVES LAWNS 3 WAYS IN ONE OPERATION

1. Lawn Bilder is a complete lawn food that supplies all the nutrients essential to luxuriant growth of generally used lawn grasses. Its "double-action" nitrogen supply is especially conducive to healthy growth. There's a supply for the quick start —and a secondary supply from the soybean meal base that is released gradually, providing continued nourishment over a longer period.

2. In addition to all the essential plant nutrients, Lawn Bilder contains just the right amount of 2,4-D Weed Killer to free your lawn from common broad-leaf weeds without injuring grass plants. (Lawn Bilder is not recommended on creeping bent nor on newly seeded areas, as 2,4-D may prove harmful to those grasses.)

3. The soybean meal base of Lawn Bilder improves the soil by adding moisture-retaining humus.

You'll like the way your lawn responds quickly, with more color, new shoots and vigorous growth after applying Lawn Bilder. No obnoxious fertilizer odor—does not burn when applied as directed. For a thorough treatment apply Lawn Bilder three times a year—spring, summer and fall. Twenty-five pounds will treat 2500 square feet of lawn.

Kieran, Griscom Write Knowingly of Birds

By Sterling North

AS FAITH fails in major miracles, we would be wise to cherish minor ones.

Such certainty is the Ruby-Throated Hummingbird, poised on invisible wings before a morning glory, his glittering gorget flashing in the sunshine.

Such are the well-mannered Cedar Waxwings which John Kieran has observed "sitting on a branch of a cherry tree passing a cherry from bill to bill up and down the line, each bird apparently too polite to swallow the cherry and put an end to the performance."

Such, in fact, are all the birds from the bold eagles, hawks and owls down to the little kinglets and many-hued warblers.

For readers civilized enough to enjoy nature without the aid of a gun, here are two handsome books.

Both are slanted to be of use to amateurs while retaining the respect of professional ornithologists. Both are outstanding jobs of color printing and almost unbelievable book bargains.

A Popular Audubon

THE new, popular edition of Audubon's "Birds of America" contains 288 of the original 435 paintings. Those who know the plates almost by heart may mildly resent some of the exclusions and the renumbering of the plates. Actually, however, the new arrangement by families is sensible and scientifically justifiable.

And although the 5-by-8-inch page size slightly reduces the colors are truer and the printing better in this popular edition than in the expensive royal octave also published by Macmillan back in 1937.

If you've fed them this winter, they'll soon repay you with song

Griscom, while suitably vitriolic about "sportsmen," market-hunters and other barbarians destroying our wild life, reports that some varieties of birds are actually increasing in number. Among these are the wood duck and the American Egret, once nearly hunted to extinction by plume pirates. And the dramatic 18-inch Pileated Woodpecker, unlike the almost extinct and even larger ivory-billed woodpecker, seems to be holding his own.

Kieran's School

FOR beginners as well as fairly well-informed amateurs, I can suggest no book better than John Kieran's highly readable "Introduction to Birds." His interest in birds began when he was teaching school to six pupils in a little one-room school house in the woods of Dutchess County. From colored cards with which he was supplied, he was supposed to instruct the youngsters in how to identify four new birds each year. And in so doing he taught himself.

There is gentle humor, quiet wisdom and restrained excitment running through the entire text of this book, which is excellently illustrated in full color by Don Eckelberry, who has done 100 paintings for the volume.

Many birds answer Kieran's calls both by day and by night. He tells how the Bob-Whites sleep, "tight in a circle on the ground, all tails together in the center and their heads making the outer rim of the circle . . . like spokes of a wheel. If they are attacked in the darkness by a fox, a raccoon, skunk or prowling house cat, they immediately fly off the way they are headed, which means in all directions."

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO. have signed a contract with Margaret O. Goldsmith for a second book in their series of picture primers. "The Picture Primer of Dooryard Gardening" will be designed for people who want to grow a limited number of flowers and vegetables in a small garden attractive to the eye and calculated to serve kitchen needs as well. Miss Goldsmith's "Picture Primer of Indoor Gardening" ($2.00), is now in its third year, covers such subjects as plant care and needs, garden projects by seasons, pest control, table gardens and terrariums.

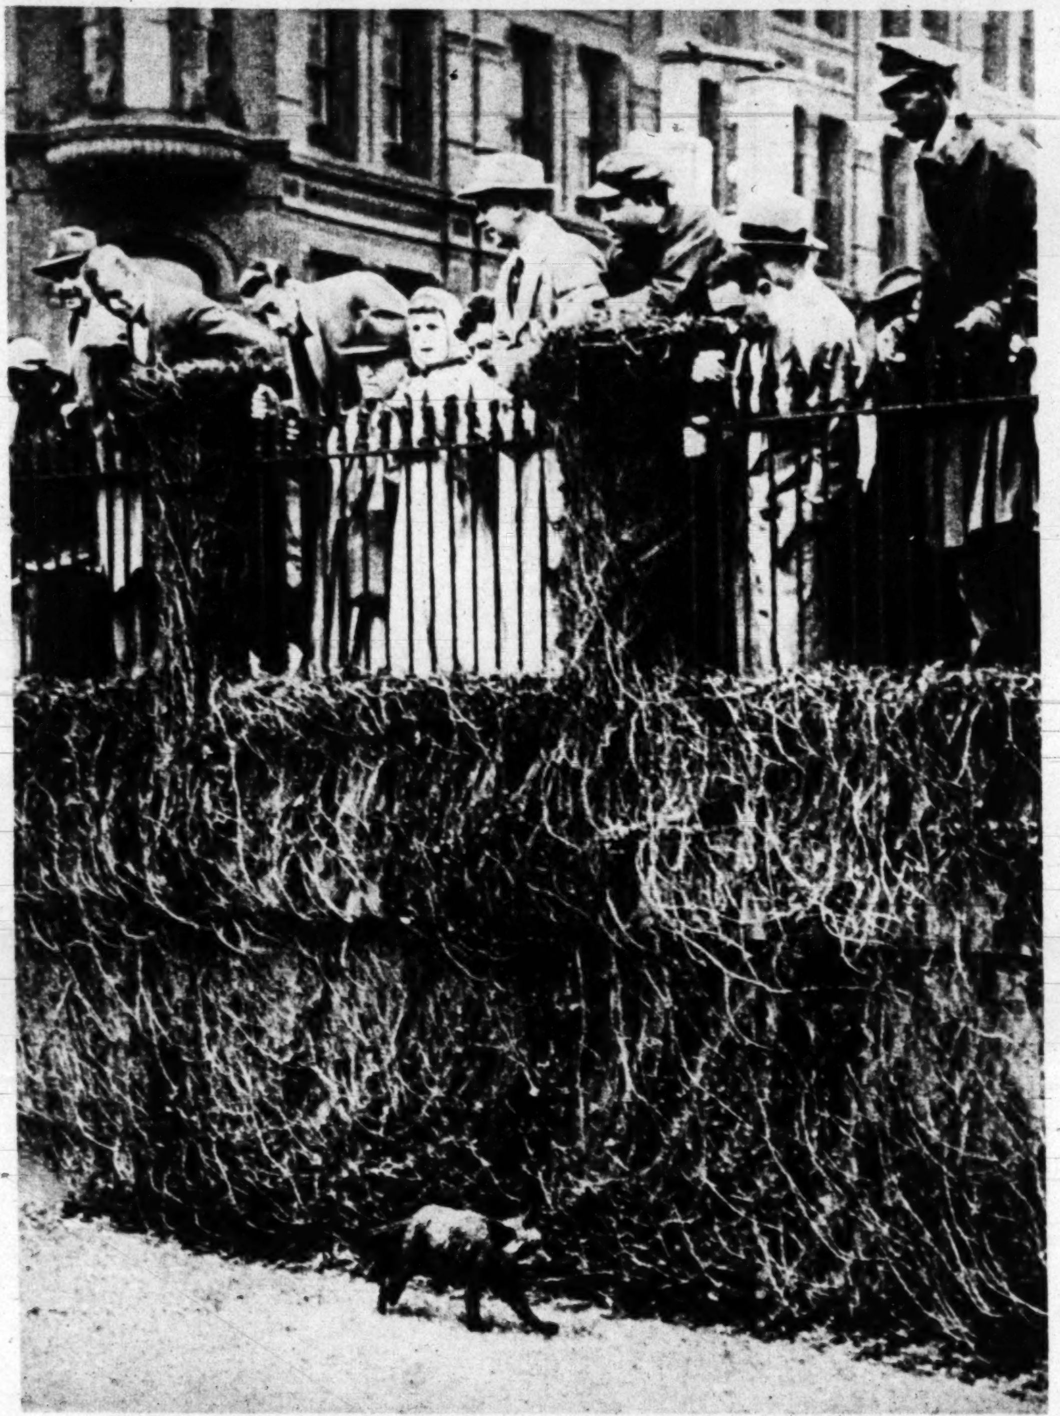
NEW HOPE FOR PREMATURE BABIES

Betty Hutton: Her Films Make News

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.



Foxy fox: Makings for fur-piece invaded U.S. Treasury in downtown Washington.

OUTFOXED: Fox tried to bite dog, was throttled by 12-year-old Teddy Lovenberg of New Jersey.

How Smart Is a Fox?

He still outwits men and dogs—but at times he slips!

For reasons known only to foxes, something has happened to man's oldest symbol of wily wisdom.

Starting last autumn, when "Yoicks!" rang out on a New York construction job, foxes have acted like so many publicity-hounds, often with fatal results. People who have been brought up on Aesop's fables are arguing about "How foxy is a fox?" Once proud fox-hunters have taken to bowing in shame. Some foxes have made their sport too easy!

But in defense of Aesop (and foxes), there is plenty of evidence that the four-legged bush-tails have retained a fair share of their ancient wisdom.

Item: In New Jersey, the dogs of the Essex Fox Hound Hunt Club picked up a fox scent, were treacherously led across two state highways busy with traffic. At dusk, the fox was still laughing and safe. The last of the weary horses had to be carted home in moving vans. The last of the dogs, led 22 miles from home, didn't show up for two days.

"After You, My Dear Foxhound"

Item: In England, the fox-hunters' heaven, a fox headed for a cliff, ducked in time, and watched seven hounds plummet to their deaths.

Item: Last October, another English fox grabbed a dog by the tail and tripped him over a 200-foot cliff.

Item: In Suffolk, after a 100-man posse banged away at foxes which had been killing poultry, the chairman of the Agricultural Committee reported, "Foxes suffered no casualties. Two men hit."

Item: In America, a Virginia fox has been reported going right up to a dog kennel and sneering.

But one English fox set a record for dumbness: He gobbled a fisherman's line and was reeled in!

UNFOXY FOX: Forgetting Aesop's fables, this Reynard left New York suburbs for Big City, was caught by construction workers on housing project after hunt with hammers, crowbars.

"... One year from now, you will have just finished your Aviation Cadet training . . . and will be ready for an exciting, worth-while career in military aviation. Where else can you get that kind of aviation-executive education – with unlimited opportunities for a great future!"

"... Then you may be assigned to a jet fighter or bomber group! Your days will be busy ones . . . flying, training and, at the end of the day, plenty of sports to keep you in shape . . . plenty of fun with your fellow officers! You'll make friends that you'll value for life. There's just nothing like it."

"... Before too long, you're an element leader . . . logging plenty of flying time. One of the group who call themselves 'Jet Jockeys'! Cross-country training trips take only a matter of minutes. You're really moving fast! And you'll like the life of an Air Force officer . . . it's hard, fast action!"

"... As years fly by, you develop leadership qualities as a teacher of younger, less experienced pilots—much like you were several years before. Your experience will help them over the rough spots. You'll be helping to make the greatest team in the world even stronger and more efficient!"

"... Before long, you'll find yourself moving up the ladder to even more responsibility . . . with better pay! You'll like your job as squadron operations officer . . . discussing engineering, maintenance, personnel and other management problems with your staff, working out the answers!"

"... And when you get your own squadron, that is the day! There's nothing like the thrill of directing a well-coordinated team of aviation experts—officers and enlisted men. You'll take pride in the pilots, planes, ground personnel—all operating in one unit like a 24-jewel watch."

"Then, as a base or group commander, with years of administrative and technical know-how behind you, you'll be responsible for many men, many planes. The teamwork that you've practiced during your years of flying will pay off in a well-managed, efficient organization!"

"... While you are still a young man, you're an expert in Air Force management problems or tactical or strategic operations . . . And you'll get a tremendous feeling of satisfaction when you welcome a new second lieutenant . . . because not too many years ago you were one yourself!"

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT: he threw down a pencil . . .

The Turning Point...

MOST ORIGINAL architect of our century in the U. S.–and perhaps the world–is scholarly Frank Lloyd Wright.

He remembers now, at the age of 80, how he stumbled into new forms of building in a moment of passion rather than after years of reflection.

In his earliest years, Wright was as conservative an architect as anyone who ever placed a classic frieze over the doorway of a public library. But burning within him was the knowledge that some day his mind would outdistance those of his fellows.

He was first employed as a draftsman in 1887 with a successful but pedestrian Chicago architectural firm. Later he became a designer for Louis Sullivan, a pioneer in modern architecture whose flaming talents kept Wright's own budding genius in the background.

What Caused the Blowup

Working for Sullivan, Wright wrote afterward, "I didn't try anything radical because I could not follow it up."

The Wright-Sullivan association came to an abrupt end one day when Sullivan discovered that Wright was designing houses for his own clients in his spare time. Sullivan blew up.

"It was the first time he had said harsh words to me," Wright recalls, "and it was too much. I threw my pencil down and walked out of the office, never to return."

For Wright it was the turning point that made a notable career possible. From his apprenticeship in Sullivan's office he went on to design such monuments to architectural progress as the earthquake-proof Imperial Hotel in Tokyo, the famed glass-enveloped factories of Racine, Wis.; "Fallingwater," the house he built over a waterfall in Bear Run, Pa., and the proposed Museum of Non-Objective Painting in New York.

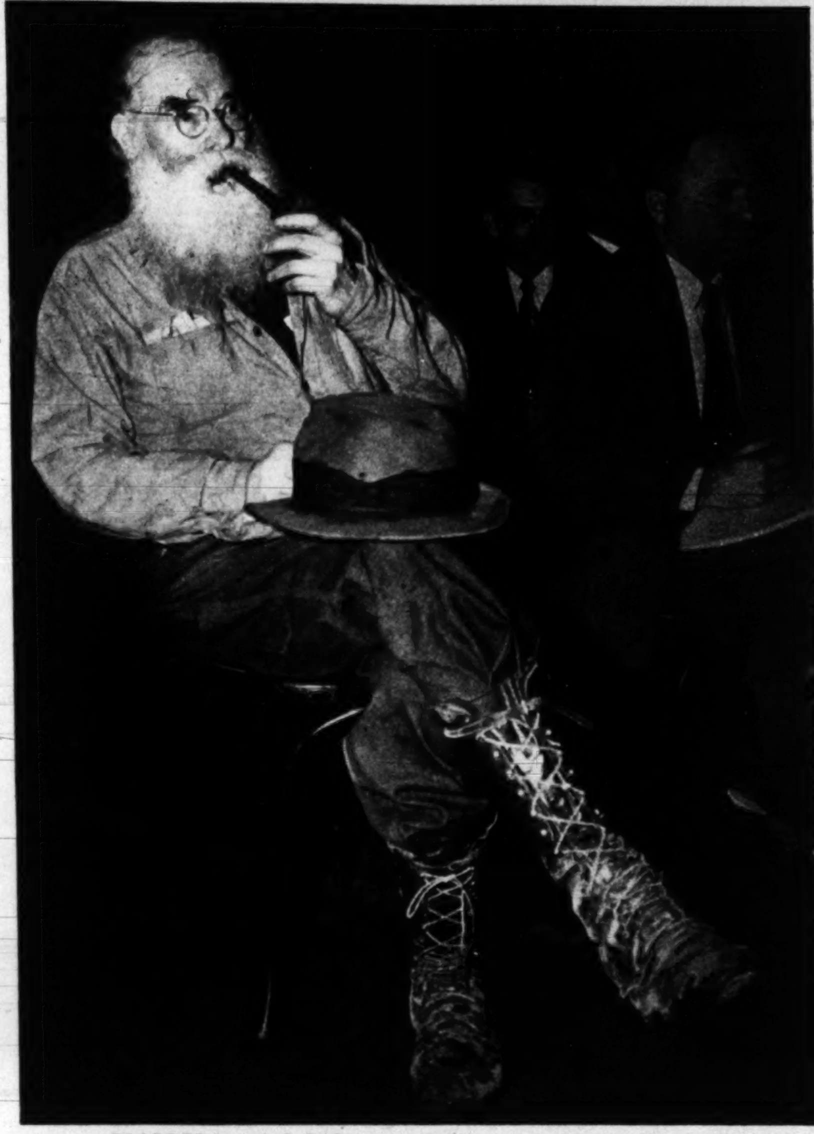
on parade: Borrowing a library book is a big deal

Let's see: what else has this author written? . . . I do like a happy ending . . . and, of course, the pictures must be interesting . . . I'll just sign up and take it home and decide.



BEARDED hermit F. E. Gimlett, of ghost town of Arbor Villa, Col., repeats his yearly offer to Congress to shave when it brings back gold coinage.

One-Man Lobby

"Emperor of the Rockies" has been dickering with Congress for years to cut that beard

ONCE A YEAR for the past ten years, 84-year-old hermit F. E. Gimlett, of the ghost town of Arbor Villa, Col.. has laced up his 32-year-old boots, stuffed some 29-year-old tobacco in his 14-year-old pipe, and hit out for Washington, D. C., to bargain with Congress.

America, he tells Congressmen, is going to have one of the few beardless hermits in history the day the Treasury snaps out of its dangfangled nonsense and issues good old-fashioned gold coins instead of paper money.

But until then, his beard, now as wide and white as a shovelful of snow, will grow.

Gimlett, who calls himself "Emperor of the Rockies," ascribes most of the world's woes to a weakness for funny money. "In the old days," he says, when men were men, you went into a store and slapped down a poke of gold nuggets. You had something.

"I worried about Mr. Roosevelt's withdrawal of gold coins, so I started coming to Washington," he says. "I've got a job to do."

Between trips, he lives in his dirt-floor shanty and pans for gold in the nearby creek, writes his memoirs, and collects his old-age pension, not a cent of it in nuggets.

His ghost town died of gold starvation. Danged if he will!

It's bath time for incredibly tiny but lively-looking patient at Chicago's premature infant "station."

Born too Soon!

Do you know that seven out of every hundred American babies begin life prematurely?

By EDWARD J. NICKEL

THE AMBULANCE spotlight stabbed at the weatherbeaten frame house on the south side of Chicago, and the driver read the number. Then the ambulance doors swung open and into the rainy night stepped the driver and a nurse, carrying what looked like a wash boiler. The spotlight fingered a path to the basement apartment where a young mother had just given birth to her fourth child.

Larry was the newborn's name, and his mother and he had come safely through the delivery.

But there was a good reason for the ambulance.

Larry, you see, was—medically speaking—a premature. He weighed a little over four pounds. And in Chicago, the Board of Health insists that birth of every premature baby be reported within an hour after delivery—because prematurity is the greatest single cause of infant death in the U. S. today. The term premature applies to any baby who weighs less than 5½ pounds (2,500 grams) at birth. (It applies regardless of the length of time the baby has been carried by the mother.)

INFANT'S Aid Society members prepare layettes for prematures.

Though few Americans know it, a premature like Larry is born somewhere in the U. S. every three minutes. And every 13 minutes one of these babies dies.

Roughly seven in every 100 live births are premature, and it is this same group of prematures that accounts for more than one third of all U. S. infant deaths during the first year of life.

And so the ambulance had come that Larry might live.

In the house, nurse Verda Empie prepared Larry for a quick trip to the Premature Infant Station in a children's institution with a long name: Michael Reese Hospital's Sarah Morris Hospital.

Nurse Empie put him into the big box, actually a "portable incubator ambulance" with its own oxygen and heating systems. Ten minutes later, ambulance driver Jack Smietana delivered the box to the third floor of the hospital. There the "premature station" has set the pattern for an ever-growing number of "premature baby centers" in the U. S. and abroad.

What Causes Premature Births?

Carefully a young nurse lifted Larry out of the portable incubator, put him into one of 30 "Hess beds," incubators developed more than 30 years ago by the "daddy" of modern premature care, Dr. Julius H. Hess of Chicago.

Here, with other tiny fellows weighing from two to five pounds, Larry was to spend the first several weeks of life, under oxygen much of the time. Watchful eyes, specialized treatment, were to make up for his lack of pounds. Doctors and nurses knew he had a better than 80 percent chance of growing up to be a normal healthy youngster, a much better chance than he would have had before the "station" opened its doors in 1922.

Larry is lucky; he will receive the best care modern medicine can offer. Both his doctors and his parents, however, would have been much happier if he had not been born prematurely in the first place.

Could it have been prevented? Possibly.

Doctors have good reason to believe that inadequate diet for the expectant mother is an important cause of such births. Acute infectious diseases—pneumonia, influenza, malaria—are often responsible. So are syphilis, tuberculosis, heart trouble, diabetes, overwork, emotional disturbances or injury from a fall.

Cutting down the frequency of too-early births, doctors know, would be the greatest single blow we could deal the whole problem of infant mortality. Unfortunately, there are many such births for which no significant cause can be found.

But if there is still much to be desired, progress in the care of infants like Larry, once they are born, has been dramatic.

Smaller Prematures Sometimes Have Better Chance

Larry's chances for life and the story of the "station" where he is a patient are inseparable. When Dr. Julius Hess, now 74, graduated from Northwestern University Medical School in 1899, premature babies died more often than they lived, and even at Michael Reese all that could be done was to place them in improvised incubators and hope for the best.

Dr. Hess tackled the problem with vigor. He designed the "Hess heated bed," which automatically kept infants at normal body temperature. He devised oxygen-feeding technique, and, in 1922, developed the portable incubator ambulance.

Then Chicago's Infant's Aid Society, now a group of 1,100 members, set in motion events which produced the nation's first premature center. Over the years, the Society has contributed not only $200,000, but countless voluntary workers.

"We learned by trial and error," says Evelyn Lundeen, the nurse who joined Dr. Hess at Sarah Morris a few years after it opened. "At first, a lot of people didn't think it was possible to do anything."

The station's premature mortality rate dropped from 60 percent in 1925 to 45 percent the next year. By 1928, it was down to 24.1 percent. Today, it's 23 percent. Thus more than three-fourths of the babies admitted leave Sarah Morris alive and kicking—healthy and normal. Of the 8,038 prematures admitted between May, 1922, and the beginning of this year, 5,803 were discharged – "graduated," Dr. Hess calls it—in good health.

Although, by definition, a premature is a baby weighing less than 5½ pounds at birth, weight is not the sole factor. The period of gestation has much to do with the baby's chances. A two-pound baby born at seven months has a better chance for survival than a heavier infant born half a month or a full month earlier. Danger from infection is always acute and it is perhaps significant that techniques in premature care developed at Sarah Morris have also been introduced for full-term babies with a consequent decrease in mortality.

The average premature spends six weeks at Sarah Morris. The minimum is about three weeks, although some babies are kept for three or four months. There is one case of a tiny patient who spent five months at the Station. Little Diana Pomonis weighed only one pound, four ounces, when she was born, then went down to one pound, one ounce. (Like other babies, prematures lose weight before they gain.) Today, Diana is a healthy, 15-months-old little girl.

Some Prematures Become Great

"It was a terrific struggle to keep her alive," nurse Lundeen recalls, "She practically died on us several times a day. We fought all the way." Only when Diana reached five pounds was she sent home.

The groundwork laid at Sarah Morris, with its dramatic proof that more prematures could be saved, was not lost on the rest of the nation. "Stations" have sprung up in scores of communities and are duplicating Chicago's successes. The Premature Center at the University of Colorado has won national acclaim. In Illinois, the state health department has plans for spotting centers so no community is more than 100 miles away. In New York City, as in Chicago, babies like Larry are rushed automatically by special ambulance to care centers.

PORTABLE incubator is used to deliver premature baby to hospital.

"HESS BED" becomes a sealed, oxygen chamber when lid is down.

HOME CARE of premature is explained to mother by visiting nurse.

Today, 37 states and many cities are providing special facilities.

But the need is still great; facilities are still inadequate. Prematurity is still the only pediatric cause of death (i.e., cause peculiar to children) among the ten leading causes for all ages in the U. S. In many areas, the fight to save prematures is still only beginning.

And the doctor who started the fight because he thought premature babies could be saved, Dr. Hess? He is more sure than ever that even more can be saved.

Dr. Hess is quick to defend his prematures, too. "Some of history's greatest figures began life prematurely," he points out. "Isaac Newton, Voltaire, Rousseau, Napoleon, Victor Hugo, Charles Darwin . . . they were all prematures."

"Premature infants who, like Larry, have no congenital deformities and do not suffer birth injuries, develop somewhat slowly," he says. "But in most instances, by the third to seventh year, their physical and mental development is the same as that of other youngsters. They are not inferior in any way!"

America's prematures owe a lot to Dr. Hess and nurse Lundeen!

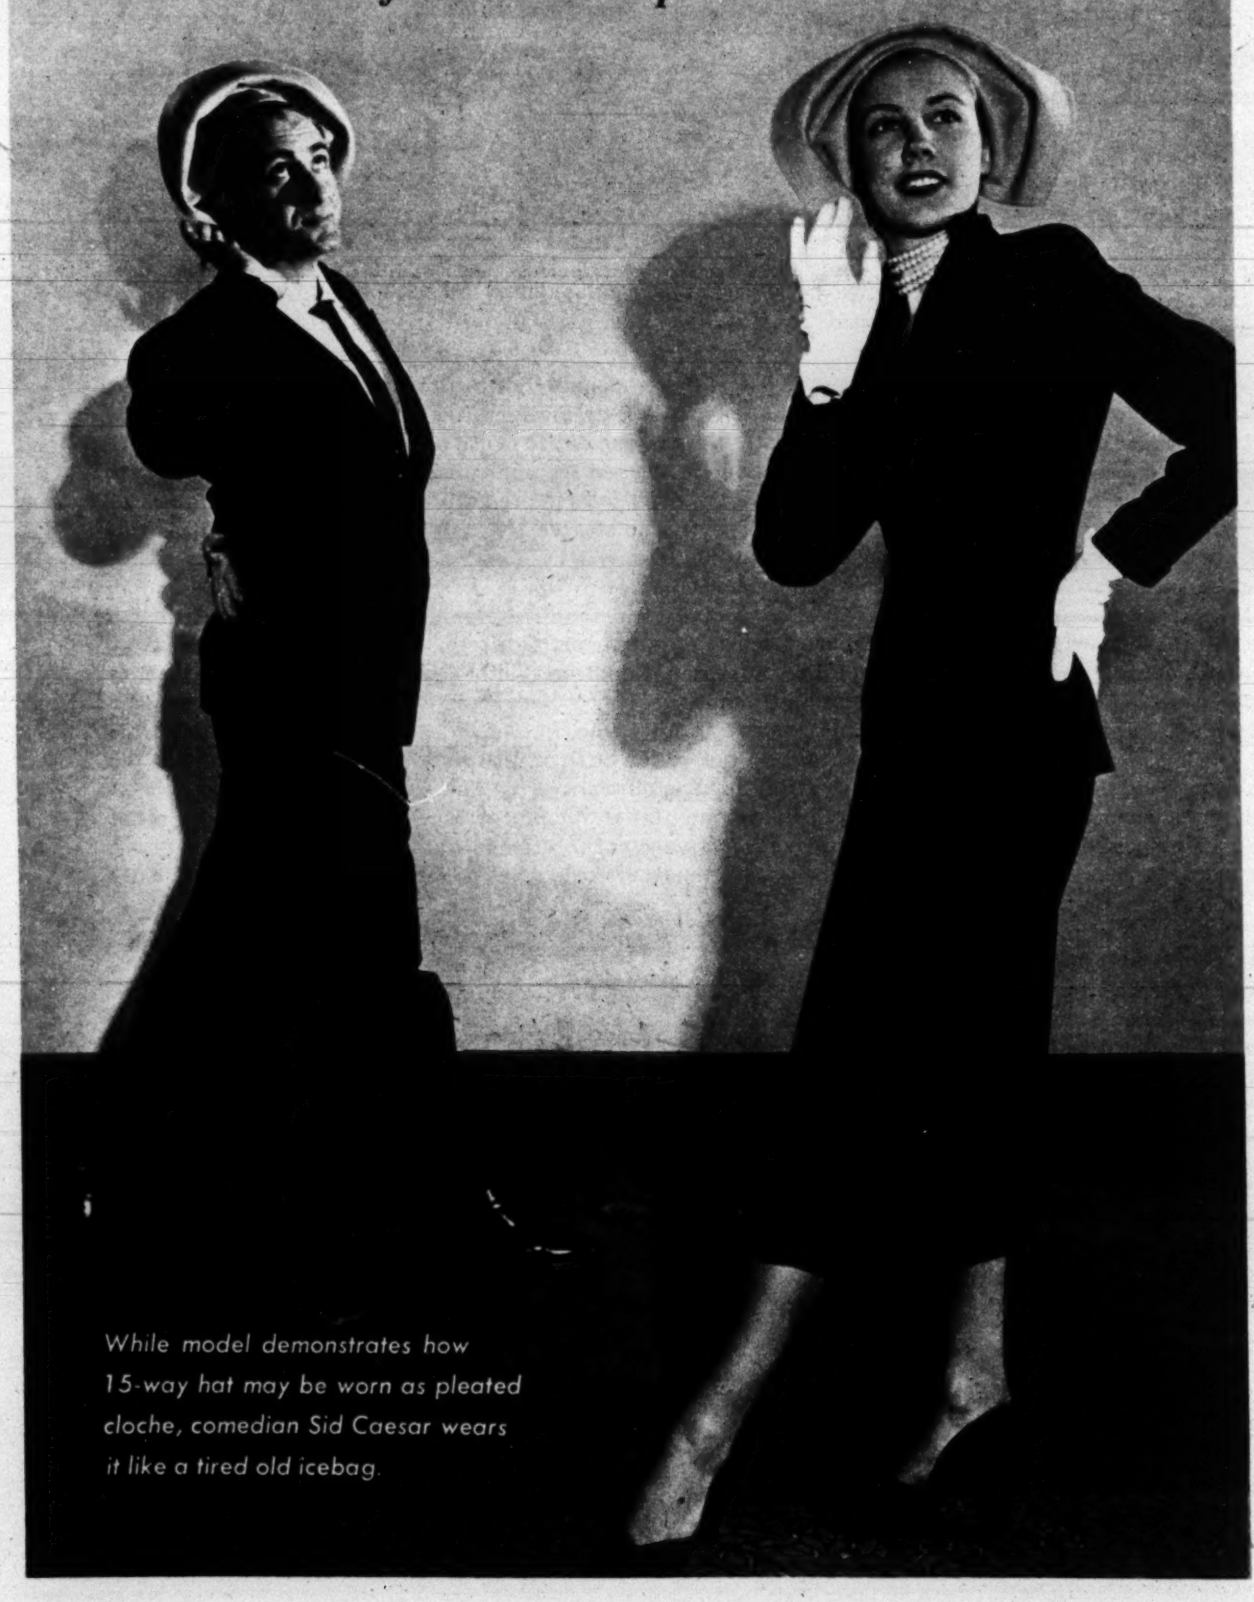
Caesar's Bonnet

A funnyman "shadows" a pretty model as she tries on a 15-way hat for the Easter parade



While model demonstrates how 15-way hat may be worn as pleated cloche, comedian Sid Caesar wears it like a tired old icebag.

YOU CAN NEVER TELL how people will react.

Take the latest in Easter hats, for example. It's just a half-moon of Celanese rayon, about 20 inches long and 8 inches wide, with a ribbon tie in the rear. To model Dee Gentner, it's a hat—maybe one of the smartest of the year. But to funnyman Sid Caesar, star of NBC-TV's "Show of Shows," it's a fugitive from a bandage factory. Here's what they say:

Two-headed Opinion

Dee: "It's really smart, girls. A simple, curved brim that shapes easily into any style: bonnet, cloche, turban or an off-the-face hat. Costs about $5, wears indefinitely, and is always chic because it's you."

Sid: "Sure, it's chic but is it a hat? It folds around like a life-jacket; then flops like a piece of spinach. The only thing it's got on the stovepipe is that you can't knock it off with a snowball."

For a practical demonstration of what they're talking about consider the pictures on these pages.

SID is definitely startled by effect of the "casual drape," which Dee nimbly arranged in a few seconds.*

For model Caesar, hat

"SHE may think it's just right for streetwear but to me it looks like a trampled eye-shade," says Caesar.*

HAT has all the charm of old-fashioned sunbonnet as worn by Dee Gentner, but to Caesar, it's ideal replacement for umbrella in case of sudden showers.

FOR sophisticates, flaring, off-the-face style is a favorite. On Caesar's brow, it's a sturdy windbreaker.

SAID comedian to model: "You call it the 'little girl look'; I say it's perfect ear-stopper for boring talk."

expresses shock, haughtiness, boredom.

WHILE model fashions hat into a flattering horseshoe brim, Sid claims: "On me it looks better."

CUSTOM millinery look is achieved by model but to Caesar, hat recalls a general named Napoleon.

Hutton Hits the Top!

By KAY SULLIVAN

"KEEP YOUR EYE ON Betty Hutton," says Hollywood. "She's going places!" The difficulty is that it's hard for the human eye to follow the meteoric activities of Miss Hutton, 29.

Recently, she made "Let's Dance" with Fred Astaire on her home lot, Paramount. For eight weeks, she practiced ballet routines every morning, had strenuous rehearsals with Astaire every afternoon. She suffered a broken toe, broken finger, severe bruises and contusions, wound up 15 pounds under her normal 130.

What happened? Anyone else would have headed for Palm Springs or Acapulco. But not Betty. A week later, she bounded over to M-G-M to star in the Technicolor screen version of Broadway's "Annie Get Your Gun." And this show, one of the best musicals Hollywood has ever put out, bids fair to boost her into the ranks of the top stars—for keeps.

As a matter of fact, she danced, sang and shot bull's-eyes with such energy that they had to cool off the sound stage to keep her comfortable. The crew actually wore topcoats while Hutton bounced around, singing and shooting.

As Annie Oakley, she's Hutton at her most flamboyant. "It's a part I just had to play," she explains. "Annie and I understand each other."

"How do you keep it up?" I asked her.

"Nothing to it," she answers. "Bed by seven when I'm working, plenty of steaks (medium rare) and a lot of gratitude because I've been so lucky."

How She Became Hectic Hutton

Partly, it's been luck, but mostly it's been grit. Born in Battle Creek, Mich., she and her sister Marion were self-supporting almost from childhood. Betty sang on street-corners for nickels, finally got a job with Vincent Lopez in Detroit.

She didn't do well and one night a musician warned her that she was to be fired. Betty's fury boiled over. When it came time to sing she strode on stage, shouted, stamped, waved, knocked over the mike, climbed on the piano. The audience loved it. From then on, Betty became the "blonde blitz," the "platinum screwball," and "hectic Hutton." She kept her job.

Her athletic art made a hit a year later when she opened in a New York night club; her Broadway debut was in "Panama Hattie" (1940). Hollywood soon beckoned with "The Fleet's In."

Today, the Hutton problem is how to cut down on her leaping and mugging and get herself some "dramatic" parts. "Some day," she told me earnestly, "I'll get an Academy award for portraying a poor kid who makes good just the way I did."

"Let's Dance," is a step in that direction. In it, Betty neatly handles some highly-emotional scenes and with Astaire dances for the first time "like a lady."

Her personal life? Right now it centers around her two daughters, Lindsay Diane, 3½, and Candice, 2. She's been separated from her husband Ted Briskin, and has been living with the little girls in an attractive hilltop house in Brentwood. "Everything's fine – for now," she says.

ANNIE'S sharpshooting is so spectacular she even hits bull's-eyes while standing on horseback. But her boyfriend gets jealous and quits the show.

ANNIE is backwoods girl who earns living by game-shooting; sings for pastime.

DON'T LET YOUR DOG LEAD A DOG'S LIFE!

We have a good many mistaken ideas about our 20 million canine pets

By FRANCIS AND KATHARINE DRAKE

ROUNDABOUT SUPPERTIME 80 centuries ago, roughly speaking, a wolflike animal stole from the woods toward a cluster of crude huts and presented himself for the consideration of a startled Neolithic family. Aided only by a jaunty wagging tail and two soulful eyes, the animal was able to make clear the purpose of his call: he wanted in. The interview ended on an historic gesture—a paw extended to the Neolithic housewife. Into the hut went the wolf. Out, in due course, stepped Dog, that lovable, stouthearted crony of the human race.

No other animal can look back on anything like the performance of the dog – 8000 years of giving man his all; of loving, consoling, entertaining him and working for him; of guarding his home, his children, his livestock.

No other animal can point to so many other fascinating variations of form unfolding from a single family tree. The 20 million dogs which are estimated to be the current canine population of the United States include some 111 breeds recognized by the American Kennel Club, besides the incalculable number of cross breeds recognized only by their owners.

So it is something of a shock to learn that veterinarians, breeders and trainers report that people and pooches could enjoy a much happier, healthier association if owners would stop caring for their dogs in a haphazard way. Fallacies that existed in the Dark Ages still warp the lives of millions of promising young puppies.

With dog primers available at every public library, and a booklet covering all the essentials of scientific raising, feeding and training available for a dime at headquarters of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals,* there is small excuse for the sorry deal Rover is getting in exchange for his devotion.

Here, collected from outstanding American authorities, are ten of the most widely accepted fallacies that contribute to unsatisfactory man-dog relationships:

1. That a dog's nose is its health indicator. A dog may have a cold, wet nose and still be dying of distemper, or a hot, dry one and be in perfect health. There is only one reliable way to check up on a dog's condition: take its temperature rectally. (Normal temperature for a grown dog is between 100.5 and 102 degrees.)

Hundreds of dogs die unnecessarily as a result of hit-or-miss medical treatment. If your dog seems to be sick, take its temperature; if it is above 103, get the advice of a veterinary. A lot of trouble can be avoided by having distemper shots administered, which are about 85 percent effective.

2. That mongrels are healthier and more intelligent than thoroughbreds. "As a group, mongrels are as healthful but no healthier," says Dr. James R. Kinney, head of New York's Speyer Hospital for Animals. "As a group, they are also equally intelligent." In the opinion of Anton Rost, president of the National Canine Research Foundation, however, "Pure breeds are not only smarter than mongrels, they are also handsomer and easier to train." So, when you buy a dog, buy a purebred and keep its puppies purebred.

3. That it is cruel to keep dogs in cities. Research statistics of the American Veterinary Medical Association show that the average city dog lives from two to three years longer than its country cousin, and that it is better groomed, better exercised, more carefully nourished.

4. That some dogs are born with a mean streak. Careful study of all varieties of "dangerous" dogs has revealed that there is no such thing as a naturally vicious dog; that they get that way as a result of mishandling. Clarence E. Harbison, nationally-known "problem dog" trainer, expresses the view of most professionals: "There is no such thing as a bad dog – only a bad owner."

Harbison and his wife, who share their present home in happy harmony with eight erstwhile canine "incorrigibles," in 1949 reclaimed 454 of the 766 "hopeless" cases sent for destruction to the SPCA in Westchester County, New York, and helped them to a fresh start in life by placing them with wiser owners.

Mean streaks develop when dogs are neglected or are punished for reasons they don't understand. "Never whip your dog unless it attacks a human being or viciously attacks another dog," says Josef Weber, famous New Jersey trainer. "Then the whipping should be immediate and severe."

5. That a dog readily understands its owner's commands. To penetrate a dog's intelligence an idea must be shown to him, demonstrated, pantomimed, acted out, over and over. 'Sit!" for instance, should be acted out by pressing down gently on the hindquarters; "Lie Down!" by sliding front paws forward from a sit position; "Come!" by jerking slightly on the leash, patting the knee, gradually increasing distance. If a dog has been well drilled in these three basic lessons, an owner should be able to halt him at any distance by command or associated gesture, an accomplishment which has saved many a pet from being run over.

Here are some tips from ranking trainers. Train with leash and collar, never a harness. The leash can be extended with a rope for distance work. Let one person only conduct a program. Make lessons short—ten minutes at a time is ample—hold them regularly and before the dog's mealtime, never right after. Always give the same orders in the same words and inflections. Never abandon an order until it has been properly carried out. The more patient the owner, the quicker the results.

Beating, slapping and shouting are a waste of time. So is too-early training. Professional training (Seeing-Eye work, retrieving, circus and movie performances) is generally begun at 14 months.

Harold E. East, the Hollywood trainer who has taught dogs everything from horseback riding to the ballet, emphasizes that the big control in all training is tone and voice. Admonish the dog sternly, he advises, when it misbehaves. Praise it enthusiastically for all good behavior.

6. That some dogs are too dumb to learn. Any dog, provided it has a reasonably patient owner, is capable of learning all the common acts of polite behavior. That all-too-familiar spectacle of an owner on a leash flying headlong down the sidewalk behind some frisky pooch shames the owner rather than the dog. To teach a dog to heel, get a training collar, preferably chain, exercise him on it for ten minutes every day, each time he strains ahead jerk sharply—don't pull—on the leash. In two weeks he will be following you politely on a slack leash.

The pup whose greeting is a flying tackle can be shown its place in short order if its owner will tread smartly on its hind feet just as the dog takes off, or "knee" it energetically so that it topples ignominiously backward. After an owner does this half a dozen times, Rover will decline to jump up even for a beef bone.

Excessive barking is an irritating habit more easily prevented than cured, says Blanche Saunders, one of the most successful of Obedience Trainers. Hold the offender's mouth shut with one hand, grab its collar with the other and shake it thoroughly, saying "No!" emphatically at the same time. Always allow your dog a few free barks for the doorbell or any unfamiliar sound. That way it will tend to keep on barking should an intruder show up when you're not at home.

To cure car-chasing, Clarence Harbison suggests tying a short chain to the culprit's collar so it whips its forelegs when it runs.

* 50 Madison Ave., New York City

Pet and pest: Kerry Blue Terrier on right is badly trained, pulls ahead.

7. That dogs can be housebroken in infancy. A few dogs may acquire house manners at three months, but the average is nearer six months. A new puppy is no more able to control itself than a new baby. Spanking or rubbing noses in the social error are useless methods that only frighten and confuse. During its first few months a puppy should be kept in a paper-covered play pen, or other enclosed space, with a blanket at one end. Dogs are instinctively clean and quickly learn to use paper in preference to their blankets. Blanche Saunders thinks that four months is soon enough to begin graduating from paper to true housebreaking—taking Buster out first thing in the morning, after meals, after drinking water, after romps, last thing at night, praising excessively when he has done his duty.

8. That dogs need bones. "Bones are unnecessary to the health of a grown dog," says Dr. E. R. Blamey, formerly chief veterinary advisor to the American Kennel Club. "The nourishment in a bone is of little consequence compared with the danger that lies in such a diet. Constant gnawing of bones wears down the enamel-covered crowns of the teeth." A big beef bone is fine for an occasional treat, or for tooth-cutting, but never the bones of fish, fowl, rabbit, or bones like those of mutton which splinter.

Another popular fallacy is that rubber bones keep gums healthy. "Rubber is one of the most dangerous things a dog can swallow," say veterinarians.

9. That a dog eats what its system needs. Practically all dogs are food crazy and have poor judgment of what is good or bad for them. Also, veterinary reports state that most family dogs are improperly nourished. To feed a dog three square meals a day, or to give it macaroni, potatoes, fried food, new bread, pancakes, apple pie, or whatever happens to be on the family menu, is to wreck the health of almost any pet. Science has long prescribed correct canine feeding—one main meal a day for adult dogs, 50 percent meat, 25 percent cooked vegetables, 25 percent filler food (dog biscuit, toast, cold cereal), plus milk, eggs or cod-liver oil.

10. That summer clipping makes a dog feel cooler. Dogs do not perspire through their skins but through their mouths and the pads of their feet. Shearing a dog all over does not make it feel a shade less hot; it merely makes Rover miserably uncomfortable. Moreover, clipping renders a dog much more susceptible to colds and ticks.

Some experts believe that if a dog could talk, the following might be among the first things it would tell its owner: that dogs suffer and frequently collapse when left in closed cars or a freshly painted room; that frequent bathing is harmful (puppies under six months should not be bathed at all); that daily brushing (against the grain) is highly important; that nail-polish remover will remove gum or paint from the coat painlessly (turpentine and kerosene burn dogs painfully); that dogs catch cold more readily than humans.

But evidence piled up over 8,000 years tends to indicate that man's closest friend, could he but speak, would say none of these. He would patter over to his owner, lay a head on his knee, and, with a melting look, simply say: 'I'm in love with a wonderful guy!"

Gaily colored eggs, spring flowers, bunnies and glazed ham—these all spell "Easter."

Easter Ham

TIME TO BE THINKING about dinner for next Sunday! Traditional ham, but decorated and glazed in a new way. Traditional eggs, gaily colored, to lend a festive air to the Easter table. Hard-cook the eggs first, of course. And use them, afterward, as food (the dyes are made with pure food colors). Scallop sliced eggs with some left-over ham; use eggs in salads and sandwich fillings; curry halved eggs and serve with rice. Just don't waste a single one!

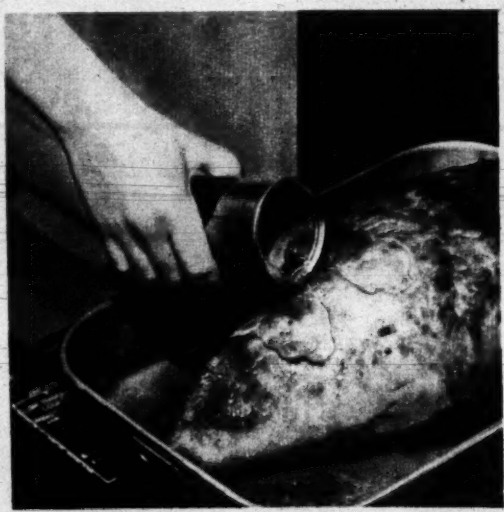
Easter Ham

1 pre-cooked ham	1 teaspoon dry mustard
Whole cloves	¼ teaspoon allspice
1 cup brown sugar	1 ½ cups (12 oz.) beer

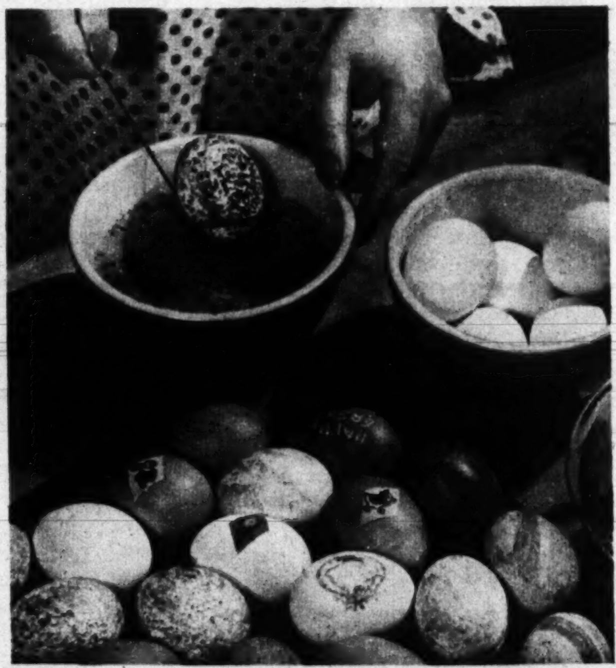
Place ham on rack in open roaster; bake in moderate oven, 350°F., ½ hour. Cool slightly; remove rind. Instead of scoring in the usual diamonds, use an Easter bunny cookie cutter, pressing in deeply. Use whole cloves for eyes. Combine brown sugar, mustard and allspice; sprinkle over ham; return to oven; bake 1 hour longer, basting at 15 minute intervals with beer (⅓ of a cup each time).

Cookie cutters help with the decoration!

INSTEAD of scoring fat in usual way, use a bunny cookie cutter and cloves for amusing decoration.



SPRINKLE ham with brown sugar, dry mustard, allspice; baste several times with beer during baking.



IT'S FUN, and easy, too, to dye, decorate Easter eggs. The dyes, stickers, decals, wax pencil and holder come in a kit.

FOR BACKYARD GOLF PRACTICE: Want to sharpen up your golf game in your backyard or game room? A new polyethylene practice golf ball follows the same line of flight as regulation ball when hooked, sliced or hit squarely—but travels only 1/10th as far, won't mar walls or damage screens or windows. Slower motion and shorter trajectory are said to help disclose errors such as topping and smothering as well as hooking and slicing. Ball costs 35¢.

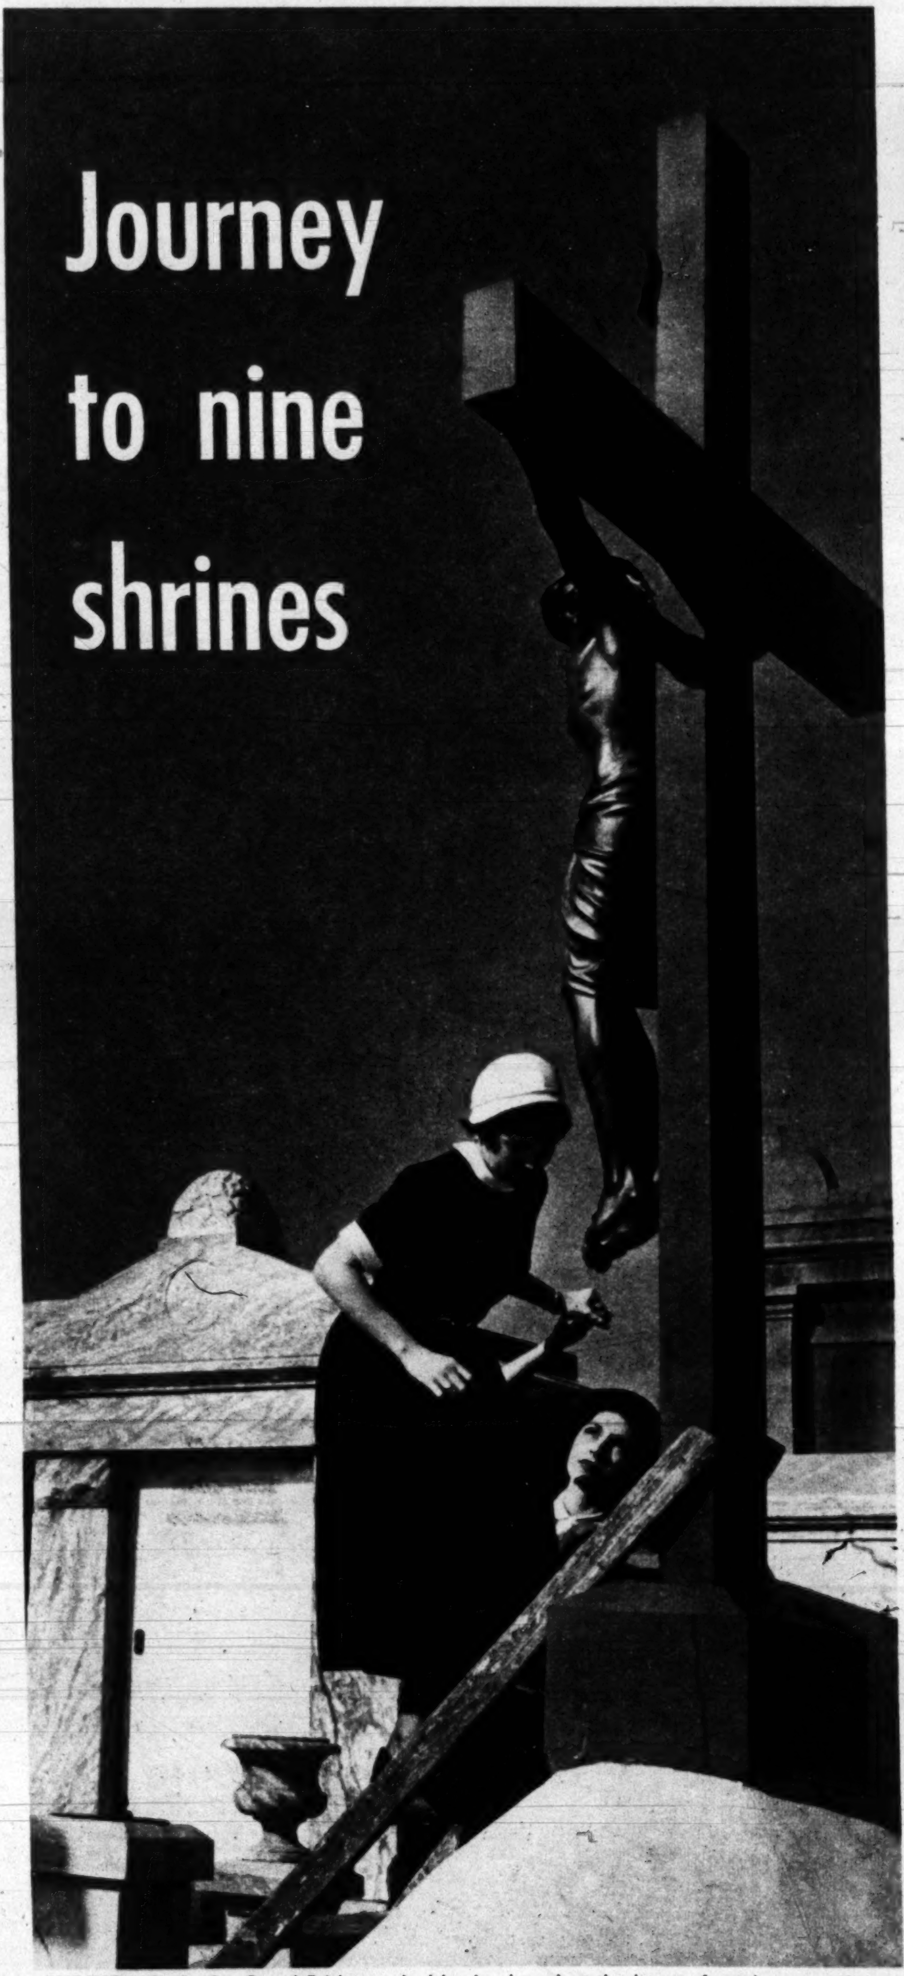
Journey to nine shrines



SHRINE NO. 1: On Good Friday, a ladder is placed at the base of outdoor crucifix at Shrine of St. Roch so pilgrims may kiss figure's feet. Dottie is on ladder; Elaine waits.

TWO: At Mother Cabrini Shrine, girls pause at outdoor statue of the saint.

New Orleans girls make pilgrimage to be lucky in love

ON GOOD FRIDAY, millions of the world's church goers will devote part of the day to a special pilgrimage. Worshippers will go on foot to three, six or nine of their favorite shrines, there to kiss the crucifix and pray.

But in New Orleans, against a setting of beautiful churches, a special legend lends color to the custom. It is a legend older than New Orleans itself, and no one now knows its origin. Some say it was part of the folklore of the first French immigrants who founded the city in 1718.

A girl who visits nine shrines on Good Friday, so the ancient legend goes, will be married before the year is out.

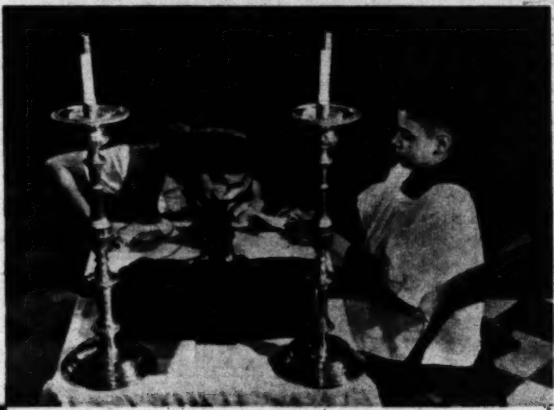
What is more, at some point in her pilgrimage she will see THE man. Friend or complete stranger, he is her future husband.

Two New Orleans girls, Dottie Voorhies and Elaine Mathews, will make the pilgrimage to the Roman Catholic shrines for the first time. Dottie, 18, is a secretary; Elaine, 22, is an art student.

In anticipation of their pilgrimage, Dottie and Elaine recently visited their nine shrines. They started out at 10 a.m., left the ninth shrine at 3 p.m. On these pages PARADE'S photographer presents a "preview" of the Good Friday journey of two young – and hopeful – pilgrims.

Clothes from D. H. Holmes

FIVE: Next shrine they visit is St. Ann's, one of the old favorites in New Orleans.



SIX: At St. Louis cathedral, Elaine kisses a small crucifix attended by an altar boy.

EIGHT: At Guadalupe, they visited outdoor grotto and its famous crucifix.

NINE: Pilgrimage done, the girls dash down steps of famous Star of the Sea Church.

IN WHICH GROUP ARE YOU?

NANCY BARR MAVITY

. . . what is a CALIFORNIAN?

TWO THINGS you have almost surely heard about Californians: that all the young ones are tennis stars, and that all the older ones come from Iowa.

These are no more dependable than other mass generalizations. But it remained for anthropologist Margaret Mead (of New York's American Museum of Natural History) to state flat-footedly that, for Californians, all statistics fail and surveys are mere wastebasket fodder. Californians, says this scientific authority, are "very deviant variants of American culture" and she "includes material from this area only after very careful scrutiny."*

A Surprise to Californians

It was startling to learn that we are such "deviant variants" as all that, but we'll grant you that Californians have an air of their own.

They lump together as "Easterners" everybody from the other side of the Rockies (if you are from Michigan, you are just as much an Easterner as if you are from Maine) but they have none of the provincialism of the hidebound Manhattanite, to whom the rest of the continent is mere hinterland.

California was originally a place to go to rather than a place to come from. Something of that attitude remains. No matter how far he ranges, the native son or daughter thinks of California as a place to go back to, not as a mere point of origin.

The Californian, even if he has never gone farther from his native state than a run to Reno, is a born cosmopolitan. For California was not colonized from a single homogeneous strain.

The Spaniards left a mark that was not only wide and deep but is still felt. The gold rush (which scholars call the greatest mass migration in human history, but which Californians rate second to the westward rush after World War II) brought men from "all over," of all kinds, from all sorts of motives: the escapist, the adventurer, the explorer, the ambitious, the discontented, as well as the fortune seeker.

These did not leave a single imprint, as the Pilgrims left on New England or the Cavaliers on Virginia and the Carolinas, but the multiple marks of a stampede from all directions.

Aristocracy, Too

Californians not only have a tradition, but they ride it as hard as any Descendants of the Mayflower. The great old Spanish names still stud the telephone book, and they still carry a social prestige.

A close second in the ranks of California aristocracy are those whose ancestors crossed the plains in covered wagons (they came in ships from "around the Horn," too, but somehow the covered wagon has higher rating). A lesser order of nobility is composed of those who were present at the great fire and earthquake in San Francisco in 1906.

The Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West are organizations of notable prestige, power and vigor. And yet, with all this pride in his origins, the Californian is not "exclusive" in the society-column sense. The frontier spirit still lives in a social code that welcomes the newcomer immediately and warmly.

The transplanted Easterner may be somewhat startled to be addressed familiarly after a second meeting. But the family, moving to a strange street in a strange town. will receive prompt calls from the neighbors, offers of help and invitations to join in local activities. You won't be a stranger long, in California.

A Garden for Everyone

Life in California cuts clean through the usual socio-economic cleavages. Californians are great travelers, and travel is not confined to the rich. Stenographers and other white collar workers think nothing of spending their two week's vacation in a trip to "the Islands" (Hawaii). They have deer lodges for the hunting season, and rush to the mountains for weekend skiing. There are millionaires in California, of course, with yachts that are floating hotels. There are also medium-salaried workers who may rent their homes but own their boats—and take cruises to the South Seas in them, too.

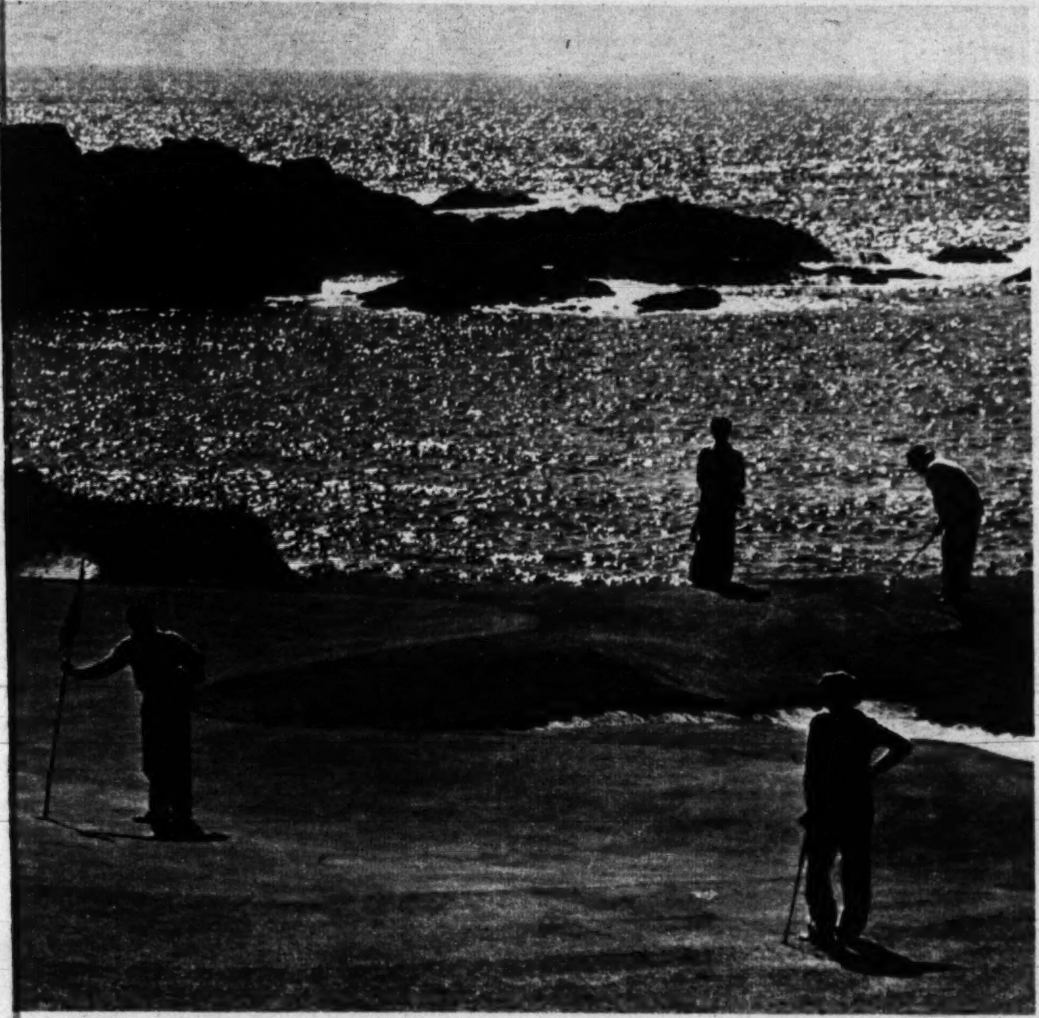
Not all California houses are equipped with swimming pools—but more likely than not, there will be a barbecue pit in the back yard, constructed by the man of the house with his own hands. There may not be landscape gardening, but there will almost certainly be a garden, for gardening ranks definitely as a popular outdoor sport.

California men are more obviously a "deviant variant of American culture" than California women. Almost all California men can cook. And any adult male Californian can cope with any household crisis.

There is really no such thing as "California cooking" in the sense of New England cooking and Southern cooking. Neither, apparently, are there any "plain cooks" in California. Here, most fundamentally, is the cosmopolitanism of the Californian in evidence.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Nancy Barr Mavity, who knows her California well, is a novelist and biographer, and is the literary editor of California's Oakland Tribune.

ADULT CALIFORNIANS come from all over the world — not only from Iowa!



Golf, sun and the sparkling blue Pacific—a familiar setting for Californians.

Entire Chinese, Italian or Mexican dinners are within the scope of family cooks who make no pretense at gourmetcy.

Curiously enough, one of the very few direct influences from the early Russian colonization of California is the order in which courses are served. On California tables, salad appears as a first course ("Russian style").

Good Americans, when they die, it used to be said, go to Paris. Good Americans, when they retire, go to California. But uneasiness appeared – and then alarm – when the infiltration reached flood proportions with the influx of war workers. The hospitable Californian developed a not too lovely defense mechanism. Forgetting his historic pride in the Great Migration of a century ago, he resented the intrusion of "foreigners" and coined for them the term "Okies."

Growing Too Fast?

Californians are not unanimously pleased by a population growth which, in 1949, placed California second only to New York. They are not uniformly happy, either, over industrialization.

Thus far we have spoken as if California were "all of a piece." It isn't. It so much isn't, that the "northern counties" and the "southern counties" are political entities almost as distinct as Truman Democrats and Dixiecrats. Maine is no more different from California than the southern from the northern sections – perhaps less so, since many of the gold rush pioneers were of New England stock. There is, indeed, continual talk (like talk about changing the calendar, as something sure to come sometime, but not right now) of dividing the state in two!

Southern California has the movies and the economico - socio - religious cults and the "Miracle Mile" and the oil wells and the smog and the temple of Aimee Semple McPherson; the zoot suits and the hand-painted ties and the far-flung limits of Los Angeles which extend to the Gobi desert.

Northern California has none of these. You can take your choice. There is no Mason and Dixon's Line in California, but the difference is there nevertheless. In the south, with the movies and the new Los Angeles smog, you also have sub-tropical living. In the north, with the forests and agriculture, you live beneath more temperate skies. And in place of Los Angeles smog, there are the fogs around San Francisco Bay.

Stephen Vincent Benet's famous short story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," ends with the catch line: "I am speaking of New Hampshire – I cannot answer for Vermont."

That is the way it is with Californians: northern and southern!

MRS. MARION SCHURCH, 28-year-old mother, took up auto racing because "home life was getting pretty dull."

On the Track: Women Drivers!

By FRANK De BLOIS AND SID ROSS

SWEET REVENGE has come at last to one of the most maligned minorities of all society: the woman driver.

Heartened by a recent safety survey which established that (behind the wheel, at least) the female is less deadly than the male, the ladies are pressing their advantage. They have taken up automobile racing.

Idea Is Spreading

If you visit New York's Bronx you can see them every Saturday night, grinding battered stock cars around a roaring indoor track. Floridans can watch them winning races from the men in Miami; and mid-westerners soon may be able to view them on the outdoor ovals of Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago.

Stock car racing isn't new. It has been growing in popularity since the end of the war. But until recently the task of jockeying the souped-up cars around a track at 60 miles on hour was considered to be too dangerous for the ladies.

One night not long ago, Harvey Tattersall, Jr., who runs the Stock Car Derby in the Bronx, got a bright idea. He announced to his customers that he was looking for women drivers.

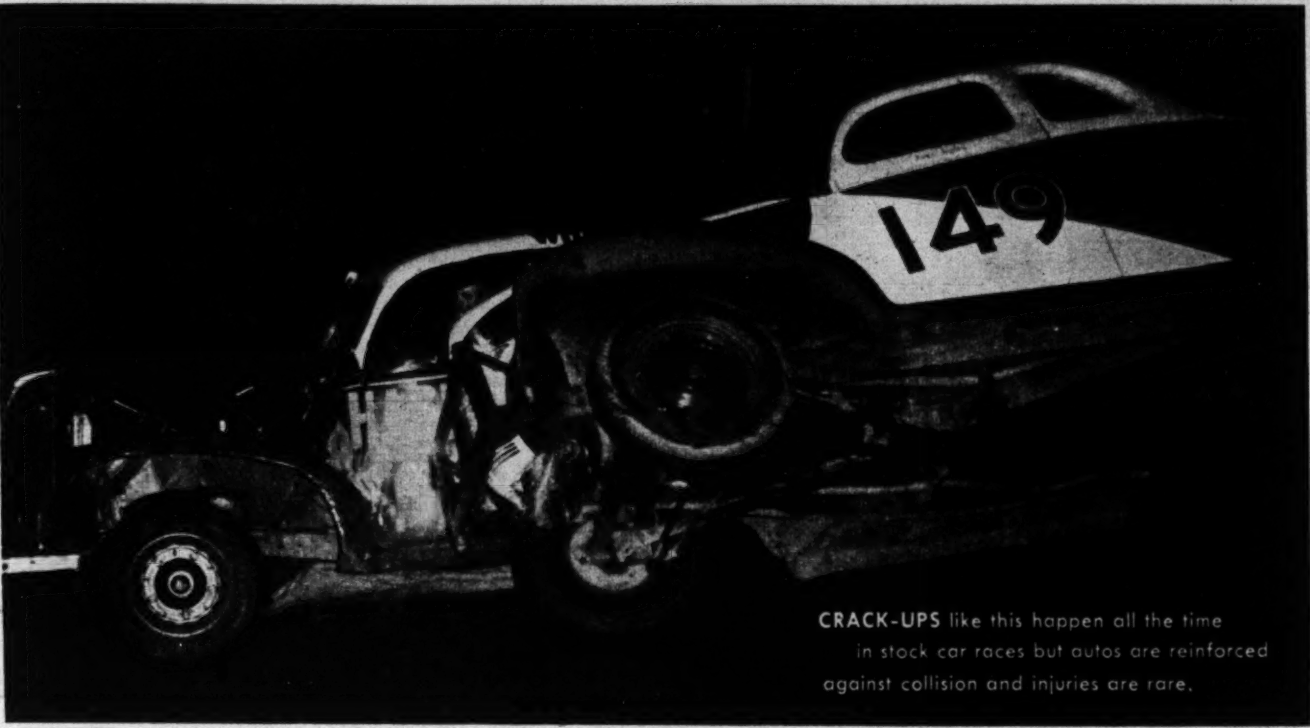
"I was greeted with a chorus of raucous laughter from the dominant males in the house," Tattersall recalls, "but the next morning 25 girls showed up for the noble experiment."

Tattersall took his charges to Bridgeport, Conn., tried them out in a couple of ancient jalopies and was immediately horrified by their violent enthusiasm.

"Have you a license, dearie?" he asked one of them after she had

ALICE CARLETON, 22, former steer buster, adjusts bucket seat in her car.

WATCHING men race, three women racers practice on back-seat driving.



CRACK-UPS like this happen all the time in stock car races but autos are reinforced against collision and injuries are rare.

backed her car through a fence.

"No, sir," she replied. "I flunked my test twice."

On another occasion Tattersall was patiently attempting to instruct a starry-eyed blonde in the procedure involved in stopping her car after she, too, had run it through a fence.

"Use your noodle, sister," he pleaded, "use your noodle."

"My goodness!" she protested. "Where is it? I've pulled and pushed everything in the car!"

Keeping Bridgeport Safe

After the ladies had practiced for two days, the owners of the Bridgeport track pointedly asked Tattersall to gather his flock and depart. He took them back to the Bronx, gave them further instruction under an experienced driver, and turned them loose one night in an armory.

"They were terrific," he remembers. "We raced them just like we race the men – ten laps around a fifth-of-a-mile indoor track–and before the night was over those girls were hitting 55 to 60 miles an hour and slamming into each other with delight."

Lady Jammers

In stock car racing, the driver's object is to beat everyone else across the finish line by the use of almost any means short of first degree manslaughter. Within a week the girls had mastered the most intricate maneuvers of this pastime. They were jamming into the rail, ramming from the rear, attempting to stall each other with cut-offs and, in general, blending happily into the curious discord of roaring motors, screeching tires, growling exhausts and crumpling fenders that has made the Stock Car Derby one of the nation's fastest growing sports.

Cars used in the races for both men and women are souped-up Chevrolets, Plymouths and Fords (vintage 1935 to 1941), installed with racing differentials and crash bars and a "roll-over" steel tubing on top to keep the roof rigid. The drivers sit on bucket seats bolted to the frame through the floor and are strapped in by safety belts. Although the cars roll over frequently, injuries are rare. (There may be a tip here for the public: would safety belts cut highway deaths?)

Around a Curve at 50

"We don't have many casualties," Tattersall reports, "but it's a rough game nevertheless."

"I have often been asked just how a dainty 110-pound girl can handle a revved-up stock car careening around a curve at 50 miles an hour–and still come out alive. The answer is that she can't, unless she's well-endowed with a quick wit, a tough little frame, and bulldog courage."

The ladies compete for the same prize money – and it runs into amounts that will never make either sex rich. The drivers are paid expenses. Prizes run from $5 to $15 a race.

"It isn't the money," says Tattersall. "It's the principle. The girls are out to prove they can out-drive the men from the front seat as well as from the back!"

HELEN STONE has three children, learned to drive by "advising" her husband (right).

MARIETTA VERDECCHIA is daring driver, good mechanic, takes back seat for no man.

AUDREY ATKINS, 22, lives in Bridgeport, drives "Brooklyn Special," has won 5 races.

By that combination of incredibly low price and method of delivery, it is possible for the first time in history for EVERY family to own a superlatively good encyclopedia.

We are absolutely sure that if you could only SEE and EXAMINE one of the volumes, you would want to own the whole set, for your own sake, and for your home and family.

We decided that the best way to give you that opportunity is to present you with one of the volumes as an OUTRIGHT GIFT. Of course the free volume we want to send you is a very important and useful book in itself. Remember—it is ABSOLUTELY FREE, and in accepting it you are under no obligation whatsoever to buy any other volumes, or anything at all.

Enclosed with your free book will come descriptive literature telling you the price and method of delivery of the rest of the set, should you decide you want the other volumes. Also enclosed will be a fascinating booklet "The Story of an Encyclopedia," telling you the story of how this encyclopedia came to be created, and how it compares with other encyclopedias. You will want this free booklet in any event, as a dependable guide, to show you what to look for in an encyclopedia.

Enclosed also will be a postcard which will ask you to fill in and send back to us after you have examined your gift volume. The postcard is merely a form by which you can order the rest of the set if you choose—or else tell us you do not want any other volumes.

THAT IS ALL! There are no tricks or catches to this amazing gift offer. If, after you get your free book, and read all about the set, you decide AGAINST buying any other books, no one will urge you to change your mind; no one will call on you or write you letters trying to persuade you. WE TAKE THE GAMBLE in giving you the free book, and you gamble nothing, and you get a $5.00 book for nothing.

That's fair enough, isn't it? But please be fair to us in return. If for some reason you are now sure you will not want an encyclopedia, no matter how low-priced or how marvelous it is, please do not send for the free Volume 1. These are expensive books, of which we have only a limited supply, and these should go to people who are genuinely interested in owning a wonderful encyclopedia—and to nobody else.

OFFER OF ONLY 1000 COPIES

The publishers reserve the right to limit the number to be given away through this announcement to 1000 copies. In addition, only one book may be requested by any one family. So don't miss out. Send off the coupon right away! Tomorrow may be too late!

Unicorn Press, Inc. 11-21
Brooklyn 1, New York

I am genuinely interested in owning a fine encyclopedia, if I can buy it at a price which is just a fraction of its real value.

Please send me, absolutely free, Volume 1 of the 36-volume New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia. Please also send me information concerning the price and method of delivery of other volumes of the set, and the valuable free booklet "The Story of an Encyclopedia."

After I have examined my gift Volume, I will send back to you the postcard you will enclose, to tell you whether I want to buy the rest of the set or not.

It is understood that in accepting the gift Volume I am under no obligation whatsoever to buy any other volumes, or to make any payment whatsoever. The Volume 1 and the booklet are ABSOLUTELY FREE.

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of Such Results! Proof That Using

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

2 Years' Research at FIVE LEADING UNIVERSITIES Proves That Using Colgate's Right After Eating Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

THE MOST CONCLUSIVE PROOF IN ALL DENTIFRICE RESEARCH ON TOOTH DECAY! Proof based on 2 years' research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories! Conclusive proof that when teeth are brushed with Colgate's right after eating, Colgate's helps stop decay before it starts! Colgate Dental Cream has been proved to contain all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care.

YES, THE TOOTHPASTE YOU USE TO CLEAN YOUR BREATH WHILE YOU CLEAN YOUR TEETH, offers a safe, proved way to reduce tooth decay! Modern science shows decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed, helps remove these acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam gets between teeth where food particles often lodge.

CHILDREN LOVE COLGATE'S FLAVOR! By the time they enter school, 9 out of 10 children have one or more decayed teeth. Children love Colgate's flavor—so it's easy to start them on the proved Colgate way to reduce decay! No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But using Colgate's as directed is a safe way to reduce cavities—help stop tooth decay! And only Colgate Dental Cream offers proof of such results!

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF SUCH RESULTS!
